A PLEASING TRIO.
BRITISH BORN: BRITISH MADE; AND AN IMPORTATION.

The Redstart at the top of the picture is the fine bird which won 1st prize at Watford Show for Mr. C. Burrows, of Stratford-on-Avon. The life story of this bird, which was said by our representative at the show to be about the best Redstart he had seen, is told by the owner this week. The bottom bird is the beautiful Scarlet Tanager which won 1st at the same show for the Hon. Mrs. McLaren Morrison, Berkhamstead. It comes from Brazil. The Yellow Norwich Canary won 1st, also at Watford, for Mr. T. Sears, of Watford.

The rate for displayed advertisements is 7/6 per inch. Rates for a series on application.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of 3d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING ADVERTISEMENTS.

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous issue, Page and Column are stated by the advertiser.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1 or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

WISHAW.

Annual New Year show, in Watson's Hall, Young Street, Jan. 1. The hall is a very suitable place for the purpose, being well lighted, free from draughts, and kept at a fine temperature. Birds were neatly staged all round the four sides, with a tier up the centre, leaving plenty of space for visitors, who turned out well. The management was all that could be wished, working like niggers, bringing up birds from the station, staging them, and giving them all possible care and attention. Entries were left open till the morning of show, and with a strong, experienced committee everything was in good order, and judging started in fine time. Entries came up fairly well despite the counter attractions in Glasgow, Paisley, and Edinburgh. The management refrained from collecting specials at this time of economy; however, fully 400 birds were entered, which was considered very satisfactory. Borders came up strong, equalling last year's entry, and quality was of a high class, many past winners putting in an appearance. The patronage of the R.F.C.C. was granted both to champion and novice, which helped to swell the entry. British were down from last year, still there were some grand exhibits put down. The Goldfinch class was a strong one, very little separating the first seven birds. Light Mule and Hybrid class was a fine one, and contained a very nice Albino Cinnamon Chaffinch, which a few well-known fanciers were keen on purchasing. The class also included the supposed Yellowhammer-Canary, and there still seems to be a doubt about it, and another Clear Mule which were three were careless. Norwich were rather disappointing this year, still there were some typical birds in the class. Yorkshires were few, but good. The officials all did their part well. Secretary Jas. Watson was kept busy taking entries, and had all arrangements made beforehand. He was assisted by Messrs. Wm. Cringles, Vice-pres. Robt. Gemmell, and a strong committee of well-known fanciers in Messrs. D. McPhee, R. Richmond, A. Allerdice, junr., D. McAllister, J. Nimmo, T. Dickson, Jas. Sheen, D. Morrison, H. Sheen, John Wilson, John Cringles, and Wm. Reid. The judges were: Borders, Mr. John Calderwood, Norwich, Mr. Edward Barron, British and Foreign, Mr. James Gentleman.

BORDER FANCY C.C.

Open show of Border Fancy Canaries in the Cathedral Hall, Albany Street, Edinburgh, Dec. 31 and Jan. 1. The hall is well suited for a cage bird show. The exhibits were staged on the tier principle right round the hall, which was nicely heated. Unfortunately the weather was very bad; rain fell practically all day, and owing to the dullness the birds were judged mostly in artificial light, which is not desirable when colour is being judged. The entry was disappointing, there being exactly 400 exhibits, which might easily have been doubled had the members supported the show, as they ought to have done. There was a good turnout of visitors, especially on the second day. The officials were a hard-working lot and comprised the following well-known fanciers: President and show manager, Mr. S. Buglass; sec. and treas., Mr. J. Lumsden; committee, Messrs. J. Aitchison, J. P. Dewar, W. Dods, J. Hay, D. Hughes, J. Hutchison, W. B. Smart, and J. Weir. Everyone was at his post and left no stone unturned to make the show a success. The annual general meeting of the club was held in a side room, and there was about the usual attendance. Judging was finished in good time, and the following are the chief special winners: Novice medal, Mr. J. Lumsden. Open medal (Cl. or Varieg.), J. Patterson. Open medal (Gr. or Cinn.), J. Johnston. Championship gold medal, best bird, J. Johnston. Patterson cup for three nominated birds, G. Bennet; 2nd most points for Patterson cup, Wm. Dods, 3rd ditto, J. Calderwood. The open Dewar cup, by Jas. F. Dewar, for most points over the show, to be won outright, J. Patterson. The judges were Messrs. H. Bennet, J. Nicholson, and I. Hamilton, and their awards were well received. The quality of the birds was considered to be up to the usual standard seen at the Scottish National

THE YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

All the successful birds of the year put in an appearance in the Yorkshire section, and keen rivalry was displayed in battling for the much-coveted red ticket; but Mr. Heggie captured the majority of leading positions, while he was hotly pursued by meritorious specimens, staged by leading exhibitors from both sides of the Border. The unabated activity of the members of the Scottish Yorkshire Club has done much to stimulate and quicken the growth and popularity the breed throughout Scotland. CL. or TKD. YELL. CK. (11): 1, 6, no name; 1, great length, capital qual, lovely hot even col., neat, well drawn, clean cut body, fine leg, good pos., swanky; 2, Cochran, hard up for length, type, carr., clean fronted, well rounded body, falls depth col. only; 3, Miller, lovely even col., grand feather, top length and carr., stylish, not quite so tight in feather; 4, Bingham and Furness, fine type, nice qual.; 5, Heggie; 6, Peters. BUFF (11): 1, Heggie, beauty all over, fine length of side, neat legs, clean cut, beautifully rounded body, well braced, neatly folded wings and tail, staged in perfect fashion; 2, Thomas, sweetly built, hard up for col. and qual. of feather, beaten in length; 3, Cochran, good all round, presses hard up on 2nd; 4, no name, good specimen, in the pink, nice length, good col., stylish, not quite so beautifully rounded; 5, Pinnock; 6, Bingham and Furness; 7, Martin. YELL. HEN, 1915 (8): 1, Heggie, sweet, clean cut cl., capital type, A1 qual., nicely shaped body, closely folded wings, tail, in winning form; 2, McLellan, lengthy var., nice style, pose, scarcely so close in feather or steady as leader; 3, Bingham and Furness, neat, well drawn, clean cut, falls col., presses hard up; 4, Pinnock, nice qual., well shown, fine type, clean cut, falls a trifle wing carr., style; 5, Walkden; 6, Gibb; 7, Findlay. BUFF (9): 1, Cochran, fine cl., lengthy, neat, well rounded, clean fronted body, well braced, stylish, steady; 2, Heggie, cl. body, dark cap, fine type, grand texture feather, closely laid on, nice leg and pose, beaten in length; 3, Park, nice level col., rich qual., shapely body, faultless wings, tail might be better at top end; 4, Gibb, not quite so hot col. but fine qual., better type, we liked; 5, Pinnock; 6, Tansey; 7, McLellan. NOV. (12): Grand turn-out here, the quality being quite on a par with that displayed by the "knits"; 1, 2, 4, McInnes, grand team, leader clean cut, typical all over, fine length, style, grand stamp, fit for open classes; 2nd, good grizzle cap, staged in creditable order, presses close up; 4th, yellow frizzled wings, nothing behind in type and qual., may be a trifle behind in length, a fine trio, put down with credit; 3, Ross, clear yell., nice type and build, neatly drawn; 5, Findlay; 6, Bonlett; 7, Steel. SELL (19): 1, 2, Heggie; 3, Mason; 4, Wood; 5, Heggie; 6, no name; 7, Dunn. A.O.V. (5): 1, 3, Rukin, pair clear cap Lizards, nice col. and spangling, well shown; 2, Whyte, smallish Scots Fanc, nice style, action, fine reach, free worker; 4, Jackson, nice Cinn. Nor., good type, fine col. and pencilling; 5, Whyte.

The Mule section was well supported by the cream of the Fanc, many specimens of the latest crosses, some hitherto unseen at a Glasgow show, being on view, and many really meritorious specimens, which could hold their own in respectable company, were left careless so keen was the competition. Hybrids which but a few years ago were considered a rarity, and even their authenticity doubted in certain cases, now appear to be common. CL. TKD., ETC., MULE (4): 1, Heggie, well known clear Greenie, in the pink, needs no comment; 2, Crone, even mark Goldie, lovely marks, fine size and col., perfect feather, very steady without bluish; 3, McAtter, similarly mkd., rare cond., steady, beaten in subs. only; 4, Findlay and McGilivray, cinnamon mark, very nice. VAR. CAN. (8): 1, Heggie, neck mkd. Greenie cross, splendid subs., A1 cond., wins in topping style; 2, McQuiston, eyes and wings mkd. Goldie, nice size and subs., rich col., perfect in feather, presses hard up; 3, Hogg, var. buff, nice feather, but wild; 4, Andrews, fine feather, steady, well staged; 5, McClymont; 6, Wilson; 7, Blacklock. DARK GOLDF. CAN. (7): 1, 2, McQuiston, leader monster jonque, well known winner, in rare order, often described; 2nd, fine example of the cross, in perfect feather, top col., just falls a shade in subs.; 3, Parlett, another fine exhibit in faultless feather, hard lines to run against both at once; 4, Nicol, in the pink, nice col. and size, hard rare here; 5, Roy; 6, Crone; 7, McLean. LARK LINNET-CAN. (11): 1, McQuiston, well known jonque leads, grand size, hot col., perfect feather, hard to beat; 2, Crone, hard up for size and col., falls, steadiness, well staged; 3, A. Steel, nice exhibit, in rare feather, fine subs. and steadiness; 4, Crone, good size, col. and markings, not quite so hot col.; 5, Miller; 6, Wilson; 7, Nasmith. DARK GREEN-CAN. (10):

1, McQuiston, monster jonque often described, hot col., in lovely bloom, very steady; 2, Hogg, rare cond., perfect feather, nice sound col., beaten in subs.; 3, Finnie, nice for size and steadiness, falls col. and cond. only; 4, Roy, rare cond., fine col., perfect feather, lacks only subs.; 5, Wilson; 6, Stanger; 7, Crone. A.O.V. CAN-MULE EXCEPT CAN. BULF. (13): 1, Crone, fine jonque Siskin, lovely depth of col., fine markings, nice size, perfect feather, steady, well staged; 2, McQuiston, fine jonque Twite, nice size, fine feather, good col., nicely pencilled, in the pink; 3, Goodall, faultless cond.; 4, 6, Crone, fine jonque Siskin, in good feather, falls size and steadiness; 5, Andrews; 7, Smart. DARK BULF.-Hyb. (11): 1, 2, Crone, leads with massive Greule-Bullie, clinking col., well blended, perfect feather, rare bloom, very steady; 2nd, grand Redpoll-BulF., blaze of col., nice size, rare cond., shows the cross well, in the pink; 3, 5, Alexander, 3rd fine specimen of the Goldie cross, nice subs. and build, grand col. and cond., perfect feather; 4, 7, Wilson, Greenie-BulF., well staged, nice size, good feather, not quite the intensity of col. of leader; 6, Henderson. BETWEEN TWO BRIT. (12): 1, 6, Wilson, Bramble-Chaff, shows cross nicely, faultless cond., steady; 2, McQuiston, Goldf.-Siskin, sweet little exhibit in perfect order, fine col., steady; 3, Heggie, nice Greenf.-Chaff, good size, perfect feather, well staged, in rare bloom; 4, Andrews, Greenf.-Redpoll, more sombre in col. than some, still interesting, nice feather; 5, Crawford; 7, Crone. NOV. (15): 1, Campbell, 4-pt. Goldie Mule, in the pink, creditable exhibit; 2, Alexander, Linnet-BulF., good size and col., nice markings, steady; 3, Connelly, clear hen Goldie, growth on throat, staged in nice feather; 4, Hamilton, good Greenie Mule, in nice col. condition; 5, Campbell; 6, Brown; 7, Melvin. SELL (10): 1, 2, McLean; 3, Strachan; 4, Fyfe; 5, Parlett; 6, Webster; 7, Roy.

THE BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIRDS.

The British Hardbill section reminded one of olden days. The classes were not conspicuously large, but quality was represented in the highest possible degree, numbers of excellent birds which were capable of winning anywhere under ordinary circumstances being perforce left out, not only from the money prizes, but even of the commendation cards. In this section Mr. Jamieson, Glasgow, judged the odd numbers and Mr. R. Bald, Bathgate, the even numbers. This section was surrounded by such numbers of the public that close examination of the exhibits was a lengthy and difficult problem. A greater feast of beauty than was presented by the first-class specimens on view could scarcely be imagined, and those who missed this section of the mammoth exhibition, missed a sight worth a long journey to see. The birds mustered 220 in 14 classes, and with a few exceptions inevitable in such a task, the decision met with general approval.

GOLDF. (25): 1, Wallace, nice square face, of nice rich clear col., well set back, grandly buttoned wings, 3rd Ayr, etc.; 2, Stobles Bros., good shape and carr., fine expanse of under, loses in col. and tans; 3, he, Chick, grand size and type, nice deep tans, face bit small only fault; 4, Crone, largest body in class, col. wee bit brassy, otherwise good; vhc, Hutchison; c, Connelly. BULF. (10): 1, McQuiston, well known winner, looking his best to-day, rare large broad front, very pure col.; 2, Hardie Bros., smaller in build, shade dark in breast col., grand cond.; 3, Thomson, nice size and col., grand chubby type, front and thighs, bit rough; 4, Robertson, shade lengthy but all there for cap and col.; vhc, McClymont; he, Dale, our choice for 3rd; c, W. McClymont. LINNET, H.M. (15): 1, 3, McQuiston, medium sized, rare nutty fronts, leader excels in work and head; 3rd, bit snaky on top; 2, Campbell, model of type and col., chest full of grand fine work, well worth his place; 4, Oldham, smaller, and falls head; vhc, Neilson; he, Calder; c, Cook and Brownlie; No. 14, Parlett, late for judging, looked an easy winner, hard lines. F.M. (27): 1, Fairhurst, we could not find; 2, Storie, all there for size and col., very steady, shows well; 3, Hector, splendid throat and eye marks, good tone of col., shade narrow on head; 4, Connachan, bit dark, and hard in col., great wealth of pencilling on chest; vhc, Davidson; he, Young; c, Smurthwaite. SISKIN (10): 1, Connachan, rare size, dense cap, and very large black bib, clear eye marks, falls slightly in thigh work; 2, Dalton, as good in size as leader, shows bib faintly, great abundance of thigh marks, well worth his place; 3, Steele, excels back work, grand deep col., very erect stand, rare chubby type; 4, Sykes, similar to 3rd; vhc, Webster; he, McGavin; c, Cranna. MEALY POLL OR TWITE (8): 1, McQuiston, Twite, Yorks. type, bit scarce in front work, very rich col.; 2, Neilson, Twite, rare size and shape, nicely mkd., lacks col. of leader; 3, Berrie, Mealy, very pure col., large jet bib, grand size, might have gone up; 4, Oldham; vhc, Fairhurst; he, Webster; c, Findlay. REDPOLL LESSER (17): 1, Steele, monster for size, grand shape and col., very steady, only fault scarcity of front markings; 2, Calder, beautifully clear and well-defined breastwork, jet bib, loses in size only; 3, Connachan, grand chubby build, very full head and neck, nice fiery col.; 4, Dale, another good Poll; vhc, McQuiston; he, Chick; c, Craig. F.M. (23): 1, Lambie, gem, right little cart horse, very short chubby body, nicely shaped head, grand rich col.; 2, Crawford, we could not find; 3, Perrie, again very thick set, splendid thick head, shade wild; 4, Dale, falls size and col.; vhc, Cook and Brownlie; he, Steele; c, Adamson. GREENF. H.M. (17): 1, Davidson, blaze of col., grand size and shape, very large broad wing bars, a good win; 2, Parlett, another very rich coloured bird, equal to winner except in head properties; 3, McGavin, bit too slim built, right good head, very distinct bars; 4, Calder, not far behind; vhc, Fairhurst; he, Henderson; c, Sykes. F.M. (20): 1, Connachan, a monster, very thick set, good level col., staged in the pink of cond; 2, Thomson, loses in size and evenness of col., great full head and neck, good type; 3, Findlay, larger than 2nd, but too wild to do himself justice, very broad chest, correct type; 4, Craig, nicely built, should mount well; vhc, Campbell; he, Bell; c, Lambie. CHAFF-FINCE (11): 1, Sykes, almost perfect, great broad front, very clear whites, grand rich chest col.; 2, Henderson, loses in size and depth of col., very pure and bright col., lovely cap and bars; 3, Adams, smaller still, nicely mkd., steady to a degree; 4, Dalton, shade dark in chest col.; vhc, Wilson; he, Jun., very clear and bright; he, Manson; c, McPherson. BRAMBLE (11): 1, 2, Sykes, leader wonderful size and markings, rich distinct back chest col., carried well down, wealth of dark mottled back beautifully rowed; 2nd, will only be a good success; losing only in size; 3, Thomson, here to-day, small compared with 1st; 4, Calder, fine flanks, clean well defined rows; 5, Calder, nice shape, beautiful qual. falls ch. level; 6, Calder, white; he, Richardson; c, McQuiston. YELLO-BUNTING (14): 1, Strachan, grandly for size and col., slight variegation on head, beautifully set down; 2, Chick, best head in class, very pure and clear skull, perfect V mark, losing in size only; 3, McAtter, bit darker in markings, very rich chest, good size; 4, Crone, just deficient in size, good head and front marks, beautiful cheeks; vhc, Lloyd James; he, Watson; c, Allan. A.O.V. (12): 1, Erskine, grand large Hawfinch, very rich head and face, large jet bib of correct shape; 2, Crone, Hawfinch, loses in face and head, slightly fuller body; 3, Henderson, beautiful Bunting, clear distinct col., grand size, very upstanding; 4, Berrie, Corn, rather clouded in markings, fine shape and size; vhc, Chick; -he, Sykes; c, Fairhurst.

SOFTBILL, SMALL (3): 1, Davidson; 2, McLean. LARGE (10): 1, Taylor; 2, A. Crawford; 3, Adams; 4, J. Crawford; vhc, Fletcher; he, Vassie; c, Henderson. BULF. HEN (15): 1, c, Cowan; 2, Caunt; 3, Mills; 4, McQuiston; vhc, Steel; he, Mark. A.O.V. LARK (20): 1, McQuiston; 2, Sykes; 3, R. and J. Gentleman; 4, Crawford; vhc, Webster; he, c, Chick. NOV. (9): 1, 2, he, no name; 3, Hyslop; 4, Hamilton; vhc, Brown; c, McClymont. (Our report on the Softbill Classes has, by some mischance, gone astray, and we are only able to give the awards as above.)

The Foreigners were the centre of attraction to many of the visitors, so varied was the variety on view. The gorgeousness of the plumage of the many little gems of beauty in the collection, and the perfection of feather were evidence of the great care and attention paid them by their owners. GOLDF. OR BULF. (10): All Goldies; 1, Crone, fine size, grand face, rich square blaze, fine whites, nice tans, rich yell. wings, nicely buttoned, well defined markings, perfect, steady; 2, Henderson, well up for size and purity of markings, nice feather and steadiness, not just the squareness of blaze; 3, Drummond, nice Finch, well up in col. and markings, falls trifle in subs.; 4, Mills, very similar to 3, and little to choose between them; 5, G. G. Henderson; 6, McLean; 7, Fyfe. PARRAKEETS, ETC. (4): 1, Arnott, pair Peach-faces, in lovely order; 2, Nisbet, Bloodwing, in grand feather; 3, Proudfoot, well known King looking quite his usual; 4, Wilson, pair Green Budgies, in nice feather. SHORT-TAILS, ETC. (3): 1, Gardner, Eclectus hen, in nice cond.; 2, 3, Wilson, former Ceram Lory, nice exhibit, on friendly terms; 3rd, "Jacob," the talking Macaw, very sober like, takes a stately survey of the surroundings. SMALL SEED-EATERS, ETC. (6): All the honours going to Mrs. P. Arnott, with a wonderful team; 1, Golden-breasted Waxbills; 2, Laven-der Finch; 3, Cordon Bieps; 4, Steel Finch; 5, St. Helena Waxbills; 6, Ribbon Finch. A.O. SEED-EATER (7): 1, 2, 4, 6, Arnott, Black-faced Waxbills, Melba Finches, Jackson's Whydah, and Paradise Whydah respectively, very creditable lot indeed; 3, 5, 7, Macready, Green Cardinal, Red Gouldian, and Rainbow Bunting, likewise well staged, and a creditable display. A.O.V. NOT CLASSED (10): Some rarities here out of the tickets; 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, Arnott, a glorious team, 1st Zosterops, first time exhibited here, 2nd well-known Yellow-wing Sugar-bird, 3rd Golden-fronted Honey-sucker, 4th Chinese Starling, 6th Yellow-wing Sugar-bird, 7th Scarlet Tanager; the condition and steadiness of above team speak volumes for Mr. Arnott's skill and attention in dealing with such delicate specimens; 5, Burgess,

BISHOP AUCKLAND.

Second annual open show on New Year's Day in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. This society was formed 5 years ago, and is composed of a set of hard-working members, who all did their best to make the show a success. Entries totalled 100, which the secretary states was fairly satisfactory considering the war crisis, but I think if the classification had been better, especially in the British and the prize money fixed on a smaller basis, entries would have come up much better. However, the secretary informed me that these things might be rectified another year, and if that is the case, I hope they will have a most successful time. 12 entries were received from Wales. 2 hampers from Aber-gavenny were sent at 6 p.m. on Thursday, and arrived at Bishop Auckland at 9 a.m. on Friday. The birds were in good condition, and were kept over the week-end. So there must be some plucky exhibitors in Wales. Nine members of this society are at present serving in H.M. forces, 5 being or having been at the front. One sad case, however, is that of Mr. Brownson, who has been seriously wounded, and is now in Aberdeen Hospital. The secretary informs me that he has had to have an arm and a leg amputated. I'm sure all fanciers will sincerely sympathize with him, and wish him a safe recovery at least. There was a rumour that an attempt was made to influence the Judge, Mr. Crawhall, who promptly wrote and gave the individual a bit of his mind. I may say he was not a member of the Bishop Auckland Society, and Mr. Crawhall brought it to the secretary's notice immediately. Two birds were disqualified by the judge. One for being in the unlighted class, which was not unlighted, and the other being, in the judge's opinion, a cock bird entered in the hen class. The president opened the show, and made a very good speech. Those who assisted to carry out the arrangements were the chairman, John Button, assisted by the following stewards: Messrs. Cox, Burns, Wilson, Hornsby, Nattress, Swinburne, and Collingwood. Mr. W. Crowther was a hard-working secretary, and had everything in apple order. Everyone worked hard and willingly. The hall was very suitable for the occasion, being very cosy and free from draughts. There was a good attendance of visitors, and everyone seemed well satisfied. Mr. T. C. Crawhall's awards appeared to give general satisfaction. The silver cup for most points throughout the show by a member was won by Mr. Nattress. This is the first year for the cup, which has to be won 3 times in succession before it becomes the property of the winner. Mr. Nattress also won the rose bowl for the best unlighted Yorkshire bred by a member. This now becomes his own property, he having won it twice in succession. He also won the special for the best member's Yorkshire. Quite a field day for him, and a good start for the New Year. Special for the best British bird, Mule or Hybrid was won by Mr. Wilson with a Goldfinch (YORKS. YELL. CL. ETC. (3): 1, Stewart, cl. fine upstanding bird, grand col. in the pink of cond.; 2, Nattress, var., not quite the length of winner, but grand type; 3, cl. nice qual. BUFF. CL. ETC. CHARLOTTEVILLE F.S.

Show held at St. Paul's Institute on Boxing Day, which entailed a lot of extra work at Christmas time upon the excellent Hon. Sec. (Mr. C. F. Pope), but he willingly gave his time to the task. There were close upon 100 birds staged, and the quality all through was excellent, many of the winners having acquitted themselves with distinction at open events during the exhibition season now rapidly closing. Mr. Cooke won special for best Yorks. with a lovely buff hen, and Mr. Killick accounted for the British bird special by the aid of a topping Siskin. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and gladly discussed any point raised by exhibitors afterwards. Yorks. CK. 1, 4, vhc, he, Killick; 2, 3, res. Cooke; Hen: 1, sp. best Yorks., res. he, Cooke; 2, 3, 4, vhc, he, Killick. Non-Fed: 1, 4, res. Cakelread; 2, 3, Cooke. Norwich: 1, 4, Pope and Jopson; 2, res. Cakelread. Bord: 1, C. Club Reports.

HALIFAX O.S.

A meeting was held Dec. 11. Decided to alter the smoker and presentation date from Jan. 13 to 15 owing to many of the members working overtime. Nomination of officials and new rules were brought forward, and members please note that there will be two new secretaries. Mr. Clegg cannot stand the strain and anxiety of an open show. Mr. Burdick also has had a severe illness, and is only recovering slowly.—Harry Clegg, Sec.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

Annual meeting held Jan. 6, at the Prince of Wales Hotel. Mr. Cooper was chairman. There were a good number present at a very nice meeting. The auditor's report for the last year proved very satisfactory, considering the present times. It was decided to hold a pair show shortly. Officers elected for the coming year: President, Mr. H. Campion; Vice, Mr. H. Mortimer; Chairman, Mr. J. Parfitt; Treasurer, Mr. J. Parfitt; Sec., Mr. Wm. Newell; Assist. Sec., Mr. E. Mould; Committee, Messrs. Hyde, Blackmore, Webber, Cooper, Morton, Selby; Auditors, Mr. Bibbins and Mr. A. Parfitt.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, Jan. 7, Mr. Jones, chair. A fair number turned up to witness washing competition. Messrs. Sparks, Pickering, Austin, J. Woolhouse, Sisson and Varley competed. Each competitor handled the birds differently, and some amusement was caused at the way one or two rinsed the birds. Mr. Woodhouse was the successful member, and Mr. Varley (novice). Mr. Furness acted as judge. Decided to have a social sometime in March and support was promised; further particulars next meeting. It is hoped members will do their best to make the effort a success and bring their friends. Messrs. Hartley, Gifford, Wadson, and Walls elected members. Next meeting, matched pair show; two classes only; novices competing with members; four money prizes.—E. Sisson, Assist. Sec.

READING C.B.S.

General annual meeting at Palmer Hall, Jan. 6, and a good attendance. Election of officers for year: Pres., Mrs. Geo. W. Palmer; vice-pres., Messrs. L. G. Sutton, A. Palmer, A. W. Sutton, W. H. Palmer, C. E. Keyser, T. Munton, and Lieut.-Col. Wilson, D.S.O., M.P.; auditors, Messrs. W. H. Pyke and A. J. Foster. Managing committee: Chairman or treas., Mr. G. Munday; vice chair, Mr. J. Brooker; Messrs. T. Yates, P. Dearlove, R. Meadowcroft, P. Eggleton, G. Larkom, W. Frewin, W. H. Pyke, A. J. Foster, F. Wilson, G. Towndrow; secretary, A. C. Smith, 73, Audley Street. Secretary read letters from two members on active service, thanking all members who had subscribed towards cigarettes which were sent to them for Christmas. Arrangements were made for pair show on Feb. 2, when Mr. J. Polson will judge and give a lecture on birds. Balance-sheet was passed, and was considered good under the present circumstances. Subs. are now due; all not paid before March will be charged 3s. This rule is to be enforced in future.—O. C. Smith, Sec.

ALFRETON C.B.S.

Meeting Jan. 8, Mr. J. Adnitt chair, and a good attendance. Five members elected: G. Gratton, H. Holmes, L. Parkin, G. Hayes, and E. Bradley. Decided to have members' show on Feb. 12; T. Barbow judge. Special in each section. Birds staged 4.—Geo. Sawyer, Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Meeting held Jan. 8, Joiners' Arms, Bolton, Mr. Wareing presiding over large attendance. Two new members were elected. Decided to hold annual meeting as usual at Headquarters on Jan. 29. Unanimously agreed to fall in with the suggestion of the Leeds Roller Club to try and form a Central Control Board for the ring and other matters concerning the Fancy. A meeting of all roller clubs will be held on Feb. 5, at the Old Bear's Head, Manchester, when all clubs may send two representatives. Notice will be sent to clubs at an early date. Will members send in points scored at all shows, to enable sec. to complete young birds competition?—J. T. Smith, Sec. pro tem.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Results of Competitions for 1915-16.

Halifax show brought the Union competitions to a close for the season; 13 Union shows have been held at which 3,688 birds entered. Amat. gold medal winners: J. S. Sharpe, 136 points; W. Helliwell, 102; S. Midgley, 71; and W. H. Dibb, 56. Nov. gold medals, Yorks: W. H. Symes, 202 points; J. Taylor, 104; S. Ratcliffe, 182; A. Gledhill, 172; N. Raynor, 140; F. Hanchon, 139. Nov. Spencer and Malden, 157; G. A. Simonett, 133. Errington's colour-food prizes: Champ, Thos. Bennett, 156 points; and P. Mason, 76. Nov., F. Hanson, 134 points; N. Raynor, 123. Any competitor finding the above points do not agree with his own reckoning should write me immediately. Secretaries of Union societies please note that Union judges are to be nominated this month, and that new rules, alteration to rules, and Union officials must be nominated on or before Feb. 1 to be placed on the ballot papers.—S. Midgley, Hon. Sec.

EASTLEIGH C.B.S.

Meeting Jan. 5, at secretary's residence. Balance-sheet read and passed to general satisfaction. An account of the work during the year was read and showed good progress. The account of the annual open show of Nov. 17 and 18 was next read, and showed an increase of 60 entries over last year, and there was a grant to the Wounded Soldiers' Cigarette Fund of 30 per cent. of the gate, amounting to £1 4s. The balance of the year's work shows an increase of 10s. 6d. A proposal was made by the chairman, Mr. E. Cook, that a nomination fee of 6d. should be paid by new members joining the society. This was carried unanimously. Votes of thanks were given to those of the committee who made our annual show such a success, and to the secretary and assistant secretary. We have had to alter our headquarters on account of the military authorities. All meetings will now be held at the secretary's residence. Next meeting Jan. 17.—J. Alderslade.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Monthly meeting, at headquarters, Rose and Crown Hotel, Jan. 4, Mr. T. Dawn, presided. The committee suggested a syllabus for 1916 which, after a discussion, was adopted. The chief suggestions were as follows: That, owing to the continuation of war, the number of men on munitions and guns, and the number that would not doubt be called up, under the Group System in due course, it was considered advisable to drop the N.F. show for 1916, and in place run a large number of table shows, with increased classification and fixed prize money of 3/-, 2/-, and 1/-; this was adopted. The next suggestion was the changing of headquarters; all approved this, but the difficulty was getting a suitable place in the centre of the city. Eventually we secured the Rotherham House Hotel, which has been rebuilt. The club room is one of the best in the city. Members note, the meeting for Feb. will be at the new headquarters, Exchange-st., immediately opposite Mr. J. Mace's shop.—John A. T. Woodall, Press Corres.

SHEFFLESTON C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, Good Templars' Hall, Jan. 8, Mr. E. Taylor presiding, and a good turnout. Balance sheet for 1915 was adopted, showing a balance of £11 7s. 6d. on the right side, after holding over £1 13s. for club funds, which was considered very satisfactory, while six of our members are serving the King. Prize-money for annual show paid. Meetings were altered from second Saturday to second Wednesday, at 8. Office-bearers for 1916 elected: Pres., Mr. E. Taylor; vice-pres., Messrs. J. Hood and W. Lunn; sec. and treas., Mr. S. F. Wood; committee, Messrs. R. S. Jarvie, C. Divens, J. Johnstone, R. Davidson, and W. Carrick; auditors, Messrs. J. Kirkwood and J. Hawkie. Decided to hold monthly meeting and pair show, Good Templars' Hall, 511, Main-st., Feb. 12, at 4. Members can invite friends. Classification: Crest or C.B., Nor. yell. cock, buff hen, buff cock, yell. hen; Bord., ditto; Yorks., ditto; Scotch Fancy, ditto; Muling pairs; Hyb. pairs. Entry, 3d. Drawings to be divided between the best three pairs in hall, after deducting expenses.—S. F. Wood, Sec.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, Waterloo Hotel, Jan. 4, Mr. W. G. Fellows chair, and a good attendance. Balance-sheet and report passed. The report outlined a very full and successful year's work, and the accounts showed a balance of £8 10s. to the good, in addition to which the society now possesses seven challenge cups. Honarium was voted to the Hon. Sec., together with a well-earned vote of thanks, the fact of balance-sheet being prepared, audited, printed, and in the hands of members by Jan. 1 (although the annual show took place as late as December), showing the hard-working zeal of the never-tiring Hon. Sec. Vote of thanks passed to the other officers and committee for able work, which ensured the success of past season. A large number of voting papers had been sent in, showing the interest taken by members in the working of the society, but the result was very gratifying to the officials, as showing their efforts in the past had given satisfaction to members, the count showing the practically unanimous re-election of the Chairman, Mr. W. G. Fellows; vice-chair, Mr. J. B. Hayter; Hon. Sec., Mr. W. L. Page; Assist. Hon. Sec., Mr. G. J. Slade; and Treas., Mr. A. G. Washer. The committee were also re-appointed, with the exception of two vacancies (one serving with the colours, and one resignation), which were filled by the two leading novices of 1915. Auditors were re-appointed (Mr. A. A. Winter and Mr. W. J. White). A good programme for 1916 was approved, including lectures, table and F.F. shows, and outing, concluding with annual show, Nov. 29 and 30 (open if possible). Judge for annual show was discussed and final arrangements left to committee. Vote of thanks to Press, local and fancy, closed the proceedings.—G. J. Slade, Assist. Sec.

S.W. LONDON C.B.S.

The New Year commenced Jan. 1, and a special appeal is now made to all lovers of cage birds living in Battersea, Wandsworth, Putney, Tooting, Balham, Merton, Streatham, Sutton, and Norbury. Meetings are held monthly at the Plough Hotel, St. John's Hill, Clapham Junction. Many new members are required to take the place of those who are in the army or working for the Government. All members have a voice in the management, and a programme for the meetings will be arranged, providing members will support them. Fanciers should write for rules and particulars of membership to W. Lilley, Treas., 17, Ilminster Gardens, Lavender Hill, S.W.

YORKSHIRE C.C.

Results of the competitions for 1915-16, promoted by the Y.C.C.—"Ogden's trophy," value 10 gns.: 1, Dr. W. Craig, Sheffield, 183 points; 2, L. Dykes, Bradford, 147; 3, C. Morrison, Brighouse, 117; 4, H. H. Towers, Crosshills, 109; runners up: Messrs. Ogden Bros., Bradford, 65. "Ramsden Cup," value 7 gns.: 1, L. Dykes, 160 points (wins cup outright); 2, Dr. Craig, 145; 3, Ogden Bros., 121; 4, L. Dyson, Skelmanthorpe, 117; runner-up, H. H. Towers, 90. "Amateur Competition": 1st prize value 21/- (presented by Mr. L. Dykes), W. Helliwell, Bradford, 79 points; 2nd value 15/- (presented by Mr. H. H. Towers), J. T. Sharpe, Halifax, 68; 3rd value 10/- (presented by Mr. C. Morrison), S. Midgley, Clayton, 34; 4th (presented by Mr. H. H. Towers), value 6/-, W. H. Dible, Guiseley, 23; runner-up, H. Mitchell, Thornton, 32. I hope to give winners of "Junior Novice Competition," and winners of 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th birds, cash prizes, next week.—John Greaves, Sec.

BLAENAVON C.B.S.

General meeting, Crown Hotel, Jan. 6, Mr. Chas. Broome chair. Balance-sheet was read by the auditors, W. J. Lapworth and W. Jones, and met with applause. It showed a balance in the bank of £16 2s. 11d., which all consider a credit, the society only having been in existence for twelve months. Decided to hold our open show for 1916, Nov. 9, Mr. J. H. Roe, Birmingham, judge. Five new members elected: J. Pitt, S. Daniels, D. Daniels, P. Watkins, and J. Howells, so we are going on well for another year. Officers elected: W. J. Lapworth, chairman; C. S. Latham, vice; D. Morris, treas.; and G. Broome, sec.

Members' show for Norwich, Yorks, and Bord. Geo. Broome judged. Nor. (12): 1, 2, 3, hc, c, C. Broome; 4, Thomas and Durham; vhc, Pitt. Yorks (10): 1, 2, 4, vhc, c, Latham; 3, hc, Jones. Bord. (12): 1, 2, c, Lapworth; 3, 4, vhc, Jones; hc, Daniels. There was also a judging competition, the three members with most points to receive 6lbs. of canary seed, and there is a silver medal for most points gained with birds for three shows, Jan., Feb., and March.—Geo. Broome, Hon. Sec.

LEICESTER (Hand-in-Hand) C.B.S.

General meeting held Jan. 4, at headquarters, the White Swan, when the following officers for 1916 were elected: President, Mr. Gibbins; Vice-Pres., Messrs. Hulse, Allen and Gilbert; Trustees, Hulse and Allen; Auditors, Messrs. Sturgess and Pearson; Treasurer, Mr. Moores; Committee, Messrs. Neal, Jolly, Wholton, Deakin, Brooks, Herbert, Start, Pole, Freeston, Henney, Kilby, and Bent; Joint Secs., Messrs. Day and Roberts. Medals were handed to winners: Messrs. Hulse, Henney, Deacon, and Brooks. It was decided to hold our annual charity show in aid of the children's hospital. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the retiring officers for their services, to which our President suitably replied, giving us a little of the history of the society.—Founded in 1870, it had had its ups and downs, once being as low as five members, but today he had no hesitation in saying that with a membership of over forty and a bank balance of over £18, this society stood second to none, and that so far as fellowship among members was concerned, although he had held the office as President for something like 23 years, he had never known any real unpleasantness to exist. No doubt this was due to the flourishing condition of this society. Messrs. Hulse and Allen supported.—Day and Roberts, Joint Secs.

BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

The seventh annual general meeting of the above society was held at headquarters on Wednesday, Jan. 6. There was only a poor attendance. The minutes of last annual meeting having been read and confirmed, the Chairman put the balance-sheet forward for adoption. This shows the receipts for the year amounted to £84 17s. 2d., and the expenditure £83 18s. 5d., which leaves us with balance from previous year (£12 7s. 5d.), a total balance of £13 6s. 2d. for the year. It may be noted that the society handed over to the local Red Cross Fund the sum of £5. Major S. C. Ferguson was re-elected president, Messrs. Holmes and Lowry were added to the committee in place of Messrs. H. C. Palfrey and R. Macartney, who have left the city. The Treasurer (Mr. G. Davidson) and the Secretary (John C. Bell) were re-elected and thanked for their past services. The date for the open show was fixed for Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 25 and 26. Secretaries please note. These are the original dates on which we have held all our shows. Six gentlemen were nominated, and on a vote being taken Messrs. John Robson (London), T. McCreadie (Dumfries), and W. Nicholson (Stockton-on-Tees) were elected judges, and the Secretary was instructed to write asking for their terms, etc. Before the close the Chairman moved a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. J. Sowerby for the use of the room. Members kindly note that in future monthly meetings will be held on the second Wednesday of the month—not the first as originally, and the officials would like to see more members take an active interest in the work, and not leave all to two or three.—John C. Bell, Hon. Sec.

Mems for Canary Owners.

Let your perches be of different thicknesses. The highest one to be half an inch broad and 3/4 inch thick, with top edges just chamfered off.

Moving from perch to perch of different sizes exercises the birds' toes, as in nature.

Paste a piece of fine sandpaper along the under side of the top perch. This will keep the claws from growing too long.

Cut the claws only when absolutely necessary; the more you cut them the more they will grow.

Into some water which has been boiled and allowed to cool put as much sulphate of soda as it will take up.

Bottle this, and add a teaspoonful of the solution to the drinking water occasionally; it keeps the bowels in healthy working order.

Read carefully the answers to Canary queries; they contain a fund of information.

Cut out and paste down bits that strike you; they may save you a lot of future trouble.

A Redstart with a Fine Record.

By CHAS BURROWS.

(See our Front Page Illustration.)

MY Redstart, a portrait of which appears on the front page of CAGE BIRDS, is now nearly four years old, and has been out three seasons. In many cases he has won at the same show for two or three years in succession, notably Reading, Coventry, and Watford. This season he has been placed first at Reading, Burton-on-Trent, Coventry (twice at separate shows), and Watford. He was second at Wolverhampton to a Chough, second at Birmingham to my own Waxwing.
 He has several other firsts to his credit this season.

First Thoughts Not Always Best.

At the tail end of the summer 1912 I had a Magpie, and kept a trap set to catch Sparrows to feed him with, and one day this Redstart got in. I had a look at him, and came to the conclusion it was a young hen, so at once let him go. A few days later he got in again, and I then decided to keep him through the winter. In a place where I keep my "bike" I had a long flight cage with several Nightingales in it, so I put him in with the "Gales, and there he spent his first winter. By this time there was no doubt about his being a cock bird.

My method of colour-feeding I explained only a few weeks back in CAGE BIRDS—best ants' eggs dry as stock food, and the colour-food mixed with it dry. This was given him every day during the moult, and the result was very satisfactory, while the same can be said of his two following moults, only in a more marked manner. Having only so recently given my method of feeding and treatment of Softbills I will not repeat it now.

A Useful Hint.

Some years back there appeared in CAGE BIRDS, from the pen of the Rev. C. D. Farrar, directions for the making of food for Soft-bills. This was a really good food, would keep any length of time, and the birds would eat it all up, a thing which very rarely happens with stock food, for in most cases the greater part is wasted; the only drawback was its cost. I cut the directions out, and have them by me now, and have many times made up the food and used it; but, as a rule, now I use only best ants' eggs as stock food.

As a proof that fanciers do keep and work to information gathered from the pages of CAGE BIRDS, I will just relate a recent happening. A few weeks back, on the Saturday following the issue of CAGE BIRDS on the Friday, a fancier of this town, Mr. Patsford, came to me and said: "I say, Burrows, there is an article in CAGE BIRDS on the feeding and treatment of small Softbills, it will be very useful to you; I have cut it out for my own keeping." I said: "Thanks very much, but that particular article is my own work, and wins me 2s. 6d.; have a drink with me."

Kindly thank all exhibitors who responded to my call and supported Larkhall show, writes Mr. Wm. P. Campbell, hon. sec., as it has turned out a great success, thanks to your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS.

 mittee of the Y.C.C. will present to Mr. R.
 W. Alderson, Windhill, a gold-mounted walking stick, as a slight recognition of twenty-one years' service as hon. auditor to the club.
 I am desired by the Windhill members, writes Mr. John Greaves, secretary, to extend a hearty invitation to all fanciers who would like to be present.

Foreign Classes at Holborn Hall.

I crave your permission to notify all members and keepers of Foreign birds, writes Mr. Allen Silver, that a big classification has been put up for their birds at the Holborn Hall on Feb. 2 and 3, and that a good number of cash specials have come in, Lt.-Col.
 Horsburgh and Mr. Alfred Ezra having responded handsomely. I'll leave it to them to justify the League's existence by making a good entry.

OUR ESSAY COMPETITION.

In our issue of Jan. 1 we set our readers the task of communicating their experiences for the benefit of fellow readers of CAGE BIRDS, and the result has been very gratifying. A large number of entries have been received, and the four ten shilling prizes have been awarded as follows:—British birds, Mr. J. A. Tonks, The Lawn, Holliesdrive, Wednesbury; Canaries, Mr. A. Moorman, Carisbrooke, Isle of Wight; Hybrids, Mr. A. W. Meek, The Vicarage, Hunstanton; Foreign, Mr. W. Lidgett, 76, Milnerst., Newark.

The original drawings of our front page
 illustrations, and of most other pictures appearing on our pages, may be purchased by readers for framing. Terms for any picture

How the Fancy Helps the Red Cross Fund.

The recent show at Hamilton resulted in a grand contribution of £60 to the Red Cross and Local Relief War Funds, and we hear that the officials of the Glasgow Red Cross expect to be able to hand over about £70.
 The committees desire to thank donors, exhibitors, and all others who in any way contributed to the success of the show.

OBITUARY.

MR. J. PEARSON, WIGTON.

I notify with regret, writes Mr. J. M. Sim, the death on Dec. 8 of Mr. John Pearson of Wigton, after a long and painful illness. Mr.
 P. was a prominent Border fancy breeder and exhibitor in Cumberland, and his loss will be felt keenly amongst fanciers in that district.
 The circumstances are the more distressing in that his wife also is in a very critical condition with a cancer in her throat. I am sure the Fancy generally will sympathise with the relatives of the deceased.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. R.
 Hutchinson, sec., Stanley Victoria F.F. and C.B.S., that I have to inform you of the great loss Mr. and Mrs. J. Keskeys have suffered through the loss of their child. I am sure all fanciers will join me in extending their deepest sympathy to the parents in their sad bereavement.

MY INDIAN WHITE-EYES (Zosterops palpebrosa).

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE NESTING OF THE FIRST PAIR OF THESE CHARMING BIRDS TO BREED IN ENGLAND.

BEFORE recording the doings of this species in my aviary, it may be well to pass a few remarks on White-eyes generally. The genus Zosterops is a large one, for it contains between eighty and ninety species, the largest of which is 5½ inches in length, and the smallest 3¼ inches. They have a very wide range, Africa, India, West Indies, China, Japan, etc., yet the general colour-pattern is pretty universal, viz.: olive-green for the upper parts and bright yellow and grey beneath, with a ring of chalk-white feathers round the eye, which gives them their popular name, "White-eyes."

In form they are slender and dainty, and as long ones to me, and I eagerly awaited news from the different ports of call. From Marseilles the news was good, though the voyage had been an adventurous and stormy one for such mites; but in the Bay of Biscay there was a blizzard, and up the Channel fearful weather was encountered, so the steamer arrived several days late, with the result that only two White-eyes arrived alive. Nevertheless, my luck was not entirely out, for these two proved to be a true pair.

A day or two later, in Easter week 1911, they were brought to me, and together we took them into the flight, and opened the door of the cage. They hopped at once on to the door-sill, looked around, and then with happy chirps spread their wings and in a trice were searching the leaves and bark for insects. Shortly afterwards they were daintily sipping active as Tits amid the branches when searching for their insect prey. No position comes amiss to them; in fact, one might almost say that there is no wrong-side-up with the members of this genus. Comparisons are not always odious, sometimes they are really helpful, and in this instance we may say that very many White-eyes very closely resemble the Willow-Warbler, but are brighter-coloured; in fact, these dainty sprites have the demeanour of the Willow-Warbler combined with the full acrobatic ability of the Tits. The diet in a state of nature consists of the nectar of flowers, fruit, small berries, and insects. It is beyond the power of pen to depict fully either their charm, daintiness, or beauty.

INDIAN WHITE EYES AND THEIR NEST.

Z. palpebrosa (the Indian White-eyes) is one of the smallest species; scientific catalogues record him as four inches long, and when watching him disporting amid the trees and shrubs of a roomy aviary, you would put him down as about half that size. A skin from tip of beak to tip of tail actually measure 4 inches, but he very seldom stretches himself beyond the 3 inches as a living bird.

Now, just a word as to our illustration. This depicts an episode in my aviary in 1911, when my first pair of this species successfully reared three young ones. Mr. Goodchild's drawing is true to life; the branch of the hawthorn tree was drawn on the spot, and he has most aptly caught the position of the birds as they hopped about and cared for their family. The drawing itself is in colour, and I consider it one of the best drawings Mr. Goodchild has turned out, which is sufficient praise.

A Rough Voyage.

As my Indian White-eyes were the only specimens in England at the time of their arrival, and for some months afterwards, a few words as to how I obtained them may not be out of place. Some little time previously a friend in India had written me that he was sending me twelve White-eyes in care of another friend, who was coming home on furlough. The weeks of that voyage were the syrup-sop while we watched entranced, lost to all else.

The fates which had been so hard as to cause the burial at sea of ten of these fairy-like sprites, had evidently exhausted their spleen, for all went well after the arrival of the survivors. True, that sunny Easter-tide was succeeded by days of cold rain and many frosty nights, and during these the solicitude with which I watched my dainty little treasures may be understood, as this was my first experience with White-eyes out of doors, though I had kept more than one African species in an indoor aviary some years previously. I need not have been anxious, for they were evidently not so fragile as they appeared and suffered no discomfort. Fortunately the adverse weather only ran into a couple of weeks, and the remainder of the spring was charming and genial, and as spring was followed by a tropical summer luck was certainly not against me.

Charming Beyond Description.

Before completing the history of this pair in my aviary I must make the attempt (an almost impossible task) to describe their charming deportment in the rain. Their charm and interest are really beyond description, whatever feature one seeks to describe. If in form they resemble the Willow-Warbler, their general demeanour is that of the Gold-crested Wren, and they are about the same size, perhaps a little larger. In an aviary such as mine, 30ft. square and nearly 15ft. high, one can watch them for hours without tiring; first to see them, creeper-like, examining bark and leaves, then swaying on a tall grass stem, then swooping (fluttering) to and fro, foraging on the wing, and again walking wrong side up on the roof netting of the flight in the eager search for small insect life. Except for one short siesta at mid-day, and for very short intermittent rests, this activity is kept up during the live-long day. When they do hop about a tree or bush apparently without an object they are more charming still.

Breeding and Preparing Yorkshires for the Show Bench.

By BIRD-LOVER.

This article, by an experienced exhibitor, tells the novice how he himself may achieve success in Breeding, Colour-feeding, and Exhibiting the Yorkshire Canary.

DON'T worry if they are not there, but leave the room quietly, returning later, and we will suppose find her off. Pick your courage up in both hands, sidle quietly up to the nest, and just peep. Hurrah! Balls of fluff greet your eye; young birds.

Take the nest out; they may not have all hatched. If not, return it immediately, and after giving fresh egg food leave her alone until the following morning, and again go through the same procedure. If any eggs remain unhatched, take each between finger and thumb, and hold it to the light. If clear, remove; but get some warm water and test those that are dark. Place eggs in it, and if they move there is still a chance, but if not, most likely the young birds are dead in shell. Put back doubtful eggs, however, and leave for one more day, and then if there is no result, throw them away.

Make sure she is performing her duty in the way of feeding; the egg food will show clearly in their necks if she is feeding properly. Give fresh eggs twice a day, to which after the third day add an equal part of bread or biscuit.

When to Give Green Food.

I don't advise green food until the youngsters are five days old, and then only in small quantity until fourteen days, then ad lib until they are removed from the hen, when gradually decrease.

As soon as the youngsters are on the perches, remove them and the mother to another cage, this ensures cleanliness, the most essential factor to success. If you care to return the cock at this period to help feed, you may do so, but to my mind and experience he is better left where he is until the hen is ready to nest again.

The young should be feeding themselves in twenty-eight days; if so, remove the hen, mate her up for a second round, and when the young birds are five weeks old, sprinkle a little summer rape over both the egg food and the seed in the hopper. You will find them soon cracking this and getting on to the more feeding Canary seed. Gradually diminish the egg until they are on plain biscuit; and this you will find soon discarded in favour of the seed. This system with the bath on fine days should rear you clean, healthy youngsters. If any are noticed slightly fluffed out, remove to another cage, and feed on bread and milk until well.

Begin Colour Feeding Early.

Now to moulting and colour feeding. A very old fancier of my acquaintance, on being asked how to colour feed young birds, remarked, "Oh, just push the stuff in as the feathers come out." In a way he is quite right, but I believe in pushing it in before they come out, then you are nearly sure of a nice, even colour.

After looking over the youngsters, and picking out the likely show birds, cage the latter off in couples, or singly if you can find room. The others put into flights, and some of them fed in the flights will come out quite as true a colour as the singles.

About a week after you have taken the egg food away, introduce it again, but this time add one teaspoonful of colour food (most of the advertised foods in CAGE BIRDS are good) to each egg you use, not forgetting the usual quantity of biscuit. Increase the colour food until you reach two heaped-up teaspoonfuls.

A little crushed hemp at this time will be found very beneficial, and more so on account of having been left out of the general diet from the nest. Hemp to my mind is too fattening, and many cases of being stuck in the moult could be traced, I am sure, to its use. At any rate, I don't like it, and my best results have been without its use.

Cover your cages with muslin by all means, but don't darken the room. Muslin answers the dual purpose of keeping them clean and obstructing the light to a certain extent. Give linseed in quantity when the moult approaches its end; this tightens them up, and puts the bloom on.

When the head and neck show the action of the colour food, begin to decrease until the birds are on egg food alone, gradually diminishing the quantity of the latter until they are on hard seed only. This should bring them a nice even colour.

Preparing for the Show Parade.

Schedules begin to roll in, and we look likely birds up for training. After picking them out, cage off singly, hang on the front of each stock cage a standard pattern show cage, and your youngsters will soon find their way in, especially if you put a little green food at the far end.

Get a small stick, a wooden knitting needle will do, and teach the bird to run in and out of cage as you place stick behind it. Be patient, don't hurry them, get them quite used to the "feel" of the show cage, and then lift it down with bird inside, holding it as far from you as possible, gradually drawing it nearer to you, speaking gently, and reassuringly all the time.

Run your nail gently along the side of the cage, and get the bird to draw itself up fearlessly, then quietly replace cage, and if this is done daily the bird will soon come to feel quite safe. Get your birdy friends also to handle them for you at times, and when your birds are picked up by the judge they will give of their best.

VARIEGATED YORKSHIRE CANARY.

3rd prize Clapham, exhibited by Mr. W. H. Walker.

Perhaps someone who is not a fancier will read these lines and murmur, "What a Jay! Who on earth is going to all that trouble? Why not buy a bird and show it?" Well, perhaps he may win first and special, but if I only get vic in the same class, mine is the satisfaction; rather! Why I bred that bird, watched it from nest to maturity, and it is by my efforts that it is now in the tickets. Buy your birds if you like. I'll keep breeding mine.

SOME RESULTS OF CROSS-BREEDING.

HOW I BECAME A SUCCESSFUL BREEDER OF NORWICH CANARIES.

By A. MOORMAN, Carisbrooke.

In this article, the prize-winning essay in the Canary section of our competition, the writer gives an account of his first season's proceedings, and the hints conveyed should be of great value to those who would follow in his footsteps.

FIRST of all I was lucky in possessing a suitable room, a spare bedroom facing due north. This I found answered my purpose admirably. In such a room, even though the weather be very hot, the temperature does not rise to above 70 degrees, and if you get your birds acclimatised to a north aspect, you will find they will be more healthy, and be able to stand the cold weather better.

Being handy with tools, I made my own cages, which are all one size, 6 feet long, 11 inches wide, 16 inches high, with three slides to divide them into three breeders for the breeding season. When the slides are removed the cages form a nice flight for moulting. I used punched bar for the wire fronts, for these are easily taken out to clean the cages, painted the inside pale blue with Hall's distemper, as this can always be touched up without hurting the birds, and then enamelled the outside with dark blue. Being now ready for the birds, I put myself into the hands of a prominent breeder to supply me with a few good pairs.

About the first week in April I put the birds together, as the weather was suitable, gave them plenty of old mortar and grit, a piece of cuttle-fish to form the shells of eggs, hung the nest pans on the back of the cages, lining the nest; also a little lamp-wick cut up into suitable lengths, as they are very fond of it, and it prevents them plucking the young.

About a week from pairing up the hens began to lay, and I took away the first and second of each, and when the third egg was laid I returned the first two the same evening, so that the young hatched all on the same day. As the cocks did not interfere with the hens I left them together to help rear the young, for I soon found that some cocks were good feeders, and were useful if the hen refused to feed, which is often the case when the young are about a week old.

About the thirteenth day, when the eggs were due to hatch, I gave them a little egg food, composed of yolk of egg and Osborne biscuit. The third day afterwards I increased the proportion of the biscuit to egg, and added the white, also gave a little watercress for green food, and gradually increased it as the young got older. On the seventh day I added a little hemp to the usual Canary seed, making sure the hemp was sound by crushing it.

When about three weeks old, the young began to leave the nest, and as the hens wanted to go to nest again, I put the young in a nursery cage, and let the old ones feed them through the wires, which also prevented them from being plucked. At four weeks they began to peck for themselves, so I gave a little crushed seed as well as the egg food, and when I found they were doing well for themselves I removed them into a flight. At this age I found some of them a bit thick, so I gave a little milk rep, which soon put them to rights.

At about eight to ten weeks old the first nests of young began their moult, so I put them on colour food, which I gave them very weak at first, gradually increasing to the required strength. For colour feeding I use "Spratt's Canary and Cage-bird Food" instead of the usual biscuit and egg, for that I found was a lot cheaper and not so much trouble.

I mixed the food with boiling water to a nice crumbly paste, added the quantity of pepper and a little sugar to sweeten, also a pinch of salt. I found they ate it well, and came out a good hot colour. About three times a week I added a little linseed meal to help to put a sheen on the new feathers. If any of them did not take to the colour food readily at first I took away their seed for a time and added one drop of oil of aniseed to the colour food to tempt them, and when only the heads were left to finish moulting, I gradually reduced the strength of colour food.

Those of the youngsters which looked promising I caged separately to finish off their moult, and ran them into a show cage now and again to get them steady, and to those I had I gave a spoonful of colour food twice a week until the end of the show season, in case any feathers got knocked out.

I now looked them over and picked out the ones I intended to keep for next season's breeding. It is always advisable to keep some of the best, and by so doing I have got together a good, reliable strain that can hold their own on the show bench, and do credit in the breeding room. I ring all my young birds, and enter their number up in my pedigree book, and I can then refer back to their breeding.

I regularly take Our Birds, and in this I have gained a lot of valuable information, and find a good paper to look to, advertise any surplus stock. I am now a young beginner, who is to start in the Canary fancy always to get the best blood they can afford from a reliable breeder, and they will be laying the foundation of a good strain of birds, and with patience I can come themselves successful breeders, and exhibitors of the Norwich Blackhead.

How to Succeed in Hybrid Breeding.

By A. W. MEIK, Hunstanton

The prize article in the Hybrid section of our competition. It makes easy the first steps in a most fascinating hobby.

HYBRID breeding, though one of the hardest and most disappointing branches of a culture, is the most interesting of all, and much patience is needed to encounter and overcome its many difficulties. The bird, one intends to breed with should be got as young as possible, from the nest so much the better, and I can be all brought up together, as in this way you get them on the most friendly terms, which is the most important point of all. They are very steady, and you know they have never paired or bred with anything, and so will be more likely to take readily to a different species to themselves. You will find it also has a great deal to do with getting them into breeding condition, as they get quite accustomed to your method of feeding, and are far more easy to cater for than caught birds, who are used to a much more varied diet than we can readily supply.

Give very little green food until after the moult, when you can gradually increase it until the frost has touched it; then give fruit, apples, pears, etc., until the spring, when you can once more start the green-food, such as dandelion, chickweed, groundsel, etc., and as they come on, thistles, hardheads, etc., gradually increasing them until your birds are having as much as they can eat, but taking care not to leave any stale about.

Keep your birds all together in as large a cage as possible, and as the spring approaches watch them very carefully. If you see any hen taking a fancy to a cock of another species, or vice versa, pair them together. If this does not happen by the beginning of May, you must pair them up yourself as you think best, and they will no doubt come together in due course.

A double breeder is the best to use for several reasons. The nest (I generally use an old Blackbird's nest) should be placed in one corner of a compartment, the bottom of this compartment should be thickly covered with bran or sawdust, and the perches put down to a level of the bottom rail. This prevents the eggs being broken, as many British Bird hens drop their eggs from the perch. The bottom of other compartment should be covered with coarse sand and old mortar, the cock should be shut in this overnight, as Finches can seldom be trusted with the eggs; they will want to know what is inside long before it is time to know.

Run the cock and hen together for a few hours daily, as when this is done they both seem keener. Take the eggs as laid and place under foster-parents to be hatched and reared. In the spring plenty of wild seed should be given, and a free use of the bath will keep them in good health and feather, and will go a long way towards getting them into breeding condition. I have now Goldfinches, Greenfinches, and a Linnet in tip-top breeding condition, and I look for eggs from the Bullies about the middle of May.

Although Hybrid breeding is full of disappointments, once you have tasted success, nothing will turn you from your hobby. This has been my method for the past seven or eight years, and I have had several successes in this time.

The Great Joint Show for London.

Sir, As I had sent out a circular letter to the members of the L.C.B.A., stating the St. George's Hall was taken for the joint show, I should be glad if you will be good enough to point out in CAGE BIRDS that at the last moment we could not arrange for this, and have decided to hold the fixture at Holborn Hall, the date being definitely fixed for Feb. 2 and 3. I personally think the change a good one, and I hope members will bear in mind the great trouble officials have been put to this year, and respond accordingly with bumping entries.

ARTHUR J. WATHAM, Hon. Sec.
London C.B.A.

A Great Joint Show for London.

SIR,—From the advertisement in your last issue I have received numerous communications from ladies and gentlemen wishing to join either the L.C.B.A., N.B.B. and M.C., or F.B.E.L. for the purpose of showing at this show on Feb. 2 and 3; a tribute to the circulation of your paper.

Many of them, however, do not seem exactly clear upon the point, and with your permission I would like to state that the subscription to the L.C.B.A. is 5s. plus 1s. nomination fee (ladies 2s. 6d.), to the N.B.B. and M.C. 5s., plus 1s. nomination fee, and to the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League 3s. 6d. Intending exhibitors have only to join one of these three societies to become eligible as exhibitors in any section of the show. The subscription holds good for 1916 season, and entitles the new member to all benefits. On this occasion there is no formality attached to joining, and therefore anyone wishing to show has only to apply for a schedule, and when entering birds send the subscription of the society to which they wish to become attached. This will be handed over to the respective secretaries, but all communications should be addressed to me. I hope those who can will do all in their power to make this the best London show of the year, and I should like to see at the show some of the old faces that attended the L.C.B.A. and the Palace in the past, just to show we are not downhearted. There will be a judge's luncheon at an hotel near, and if anyone would like to attend I should be glad if they will send in their names so that I can notify the caterer.

Is the British Bird Fancy Worth Catering For?

SIR,—I feel compelled to ask this question after my recent experience in trying to obtain financial or other help for our forthcoming members' show at the Holborn Hall, London, on Feb. 2 and 3 next. As the elected show secretary of the National British Bird and M.C., I have appealed by circular to each of the members, asking for support of our venture, and up to the time of writing have only received two replies offering help in any way, that is to say, in addition to the promises I had already received from members of the committee.

It is the same old tale, year after year. The same few friends help the fancy in every possible way of giving their time and money, while the greater majority, though willing to reap the benefit, do nothing. The N.B.B. and M.C. has been established for twenty long years, and during all this time it has always given back to its members far more than it has received in subscriptions. No specialist bird club ever existed that has attempted and successfully accomplished so much for the objects for which it was formed. Its subscription (5/-) is a low one, its work is great, and what is the result? From a membership of over 200 at one time it has dwindled down to about half that number.

Our club ought to be at least 500 strong. What is there wrong? We want friendly criticism. We appeal to all lovers of British birds and their hybrids to rally round the society which has done so much for them, and is anxious to do more, and any suggestions will have most careful consideration. We want more members, and we must have them. There will be no less than 24 classes provided for British birds and 7 for Hybrids at our joint members' club show, with 10/-, 5/-, and 2/6 prize money in each class for an entrance fee of 1/6, besides numerous special prizes—diplomas, medals, cash, etc., all open to anyone sending 5/- subscription before the 22nd inst.

Our section will have the personal attention of

THREE OF THE SEASON'S DONS.

The three splendid Canaries here depicted have all won 1st prizes at the London and P.O.S. and other shows. The Norwich at the top is the property of Mr. G. W. Saunders, Haslemere; the Yorkshire belongs to Mr. F. W. Ayres, London; and the Crest to Mr. J. Broad, Bordon.

Bird Friends.How a Skylark was Trained.

SIR,—Mr. W. G. Woodall would like to know how I trained the Skylark (I have only had one) to stop springing. Here is the plan I adopted. I made a box cage 16 inches long, 9 inches deep and 13 inches high. Having cut out squares at each end I wired them like the front, dividing the wires sufficiently to allow the bird to put his head through easily. Having cut a piece of soft, thin, green material, I sewed tapes to each corner, put the material inside the cage, and tied the tapes to the wires nearest each corner, tightly enough to pull the cloth taut. The position would be level with the top of the bird's head when standing upright. Then I placed the bird in the cage, under the cloth, of course. He could not rise from the floor and he could not hurt himself in trying to do so. In about a week I pushed the tapes half an inch higher, and so on. Eventually he dropped the springing altogether, and for years he lived in the cage without any shield, except when I let him run in the room, which was very often. He would sing on the kitchen floor whilst running about. I got his confidence with a daily mealworm, which he took out of my hand at the end of the first week.

My reason for this plan is that I lived amongst miners, and saw scores of Larks in cages. I came to the conclusion that many were wild and untameable, because they hurt themselves by spring against the top wires of the cages in use, and they never got over the scare. I hope this will assist your correspondent.

An Appeal for an "Ideal" British Bird Classification.

SIR,—As a British Bird keeper, for years I have taken an interest in shows. I have been struck by the bad classification in general. I think improvement in this direction would prove profitable, too. It is one of the "stumbling blocks" to the British section. Fanciers who own good birds are backward at entering where the classification is against them. Every show should have a desirable and extended classification. Now, secretaries, buck up, and revise your classes in the British Section. Discontinue it as a "side-line," and put it on equal terms with the Canary section. Put your fears on one side about entries not popping up; they will if the programme is attractive. If entries fall short, even then, don't amalgamate, which is against bird and exhibitor, but pay out on the sliding scale. I beg to append an ideal classification: Goldfinch H.M., do. F.M.; Bullfinch H.M., do. F.M.; Linnet H.M., do. F.M.; Redpoll H.M., do. F.M.; Twite H.M., do. F.M.; Siskin H.M., do. F.M.; Greenfinch

H.M., fed, do. H.M., unfed, do. F.M.; Chaffinch; Bramblefinch; Hawfinch, Yellowhammer; any other variety, cock or hen; Bullfinch, hen; Greenfinch, hen; Goldfinch, hen; any other variety hen; Hybrid pairs; Softbills, as they are. What a show—an exhibitor's dream. We could even have buff and yellow classes. Such an ideal classification would make unpopular birds popular with exhibitors. They would say, now there is a class for Chaffinches, I must buy one, also, Yellowhammer, Twite, etc. Corn Buntings, would increase, also the Hawfinch.

Here's another stunt. What are birds, doing (British and Mules and Hybrids) during May? Nothing! Mostly shelved. Wouldn't exhibitors welcome a National British Bird, and Hybrid show to be held about the centre of England? I sincerely hope those who pull the strings will wake up to the needs of the British section, and give exhibitors a run for their money. I would say, too, a word about cages. At every show I have visited I have seen a bewildering assortment of cages and enamelling. Can't we have a recognised standard? I don't want to criticise, but Britishers must meet on equal terms. I am sure my appeal will be seconded by many, although probably ridiculed by some as "piffle." Anyway, I will be optimistic. If the conditions I appeal for are brought into force by some enterprising secretary, he can depend on my humble support.

The Woodlark in Captivity.

By W. E. Teschemaker, B.A.

A Further instalment of the best article on the Woodlark ever written. Previous instalments appeared in our issues of Dec. 18 and Jan. 1.

ASK you to compare the remarks of this seventeenth-century expert with similar utterances of twentieth-century experts. Did you ever hear one of the latter acknowledge a failure, or admit that there was anything that he did not know about birds? This is what was written two hundred years ago: "I have taken several of their nests with the resolution to bring them up, but could never do it (though I have brought up all sorts of other birds) for this reason; they either had cramp or else turned into a scouring in less than a week's time after I had taken them from the old ones; several that have been perhaps diligent than I have brought them up to feed, but I could never hear of any that kept them so long till they sung, and made them the least part of amends for their trouble and charge that they had been at."

It is significant that in Bechstein's work, written a century later, there is no mention of hand-rearing, nor do I know of modern instances. Yet the young of the Skylark are frequently hand-reared by a mere beginner. We are told that in a state of nature the young are fed on "a small kind of worm"; this may be correct, but the writer carefully watched a pair of Woodlarks feeding young in his aviary last summer, and noted that they selected small winged insects, beetles, etc. Perhaps they could not find the "small kind of worm" in the aviary. I shall, however, have something more to say about the natural diet of the Woodlark.

The Sexes Nearly Alike.

Sexing Woodlarks is rather a matter for an expert than for a beginner, and even our seventeenth-century expert was evidently not prepared to back his opinion in all cases. "The truest way that ever I could find is first, the largeness and length of his call; secondly, the tall walking of the bird about his cage; and, thirdly, at evenings the double" (repetition) "of his note, which we call cuddling, as if they were going to roost; but, if you hear him sing strong, you cannot be deceived, for hens will sing (only) a little. If a bird that is taken in January or February sings not within one month after, you may conclude him not worth keeping, or else for certain it is a hen."

The above passage was reproduced, with hardly the alteration of a single word, and yet without any acknowledgment whatever, in a book published half a century later—

Albin's "Natural History of English Song-birds," 1759—so, you see, the art of writing bird-books from other people's data is by no means a modern one. It may be of some interest, as showing what bird books cost in those days, to mention that Albin's work was published at half-a-crown, which does not seem out of the way for a book of 95 pages, with illustrations of the male, female, and eggs of all species described.

The above sexual distinctions are all useful, but do not include the one that I have found most reliable, namely, that the striations on the breast of the female are much more boldly marked. Notice also the buff stripe above the eye, which in the female sweeps boldly back, almost forming a band round the head. According to Howard Saunders, the wings of the hen are shorter than those of the cock. It is always difficult, however, to sex a single bird, if one has not another to compare it with, so the beginner is recommended to adopt the above song test.

A Vocalist of Renown.

We will now therefore discuss the song of the Woodlark, which caused this bird to be so highly valued by fanciers of the olden time, though in these days, such is the (ahem!) improvement in the musical taste of our illustrious nation, a gramophone finds plenty of purchasers at five guineas, whereas a singing Woodlark can be acquired for the moderate expenditure of two shillings and sixpence. In D'Urban and Matthews' "Birds of Devonshire," we are told that not so very long since a really good songster was worth from 15/- to 20/-, and that the demand was so brisk that in some parts of the county the trappers had made the species scarce.

Let us seat ourselves on the magic carpet, and allow ourselves to be whirled away through two hundred years from the days of gramophones, back to a sweet English countryside in the month of May. "Myself and a gentleman riding in the country in an evening, hard by a coppice or wood-side, heard a Nightingale sing so sweetly as to my thinking I never heard the like in all my life, although I have heard many in my time; for the place being a valley, and the coppice on the side of it, made all the notes of the Nightingale seem double with the echo. We had not stayed long but comes a Woodlark and lights upon a dead twig of an oak, and there they sang, each outvying the other. In a short space more, about an hundred paces off, lights another Woodlark, and under him, as near as we could judge, was another Nightingale; these four birds sang with so melodious harmony, warbling out their pleasant notes for above a whole hour, that never any music came in competition with it to the pleasing of our ears."

This wonderful quartette must have been a great treat to a music-lover, all the more so because the writer believes that it is an extremely rare thing for the Woodlark and Nightingale to compete in song; in one locality, where they were nesting not far apart, he particularly noticed that they never sang in rivalry, and in captivity he has had frequently Nightingales in full song in the same room as a singing "Tree-lark," and yet has never heard a song contest.

The same remark applies to Nightingales and Shamans, also to Shamans and Robins (though both the latter have red breasts, and might therefore be expected to show some jealousy). On the other hand, an Indian Orange-headed Ground-Thrush sang marvellously against three Nightingales here last spring, though these two species are unlike in appearance, and in every other way; and in the dark, dreary days just before Christmas, there was a wonderful song contest in the same bird room between two young male Orange Thrushes, bred last summer in the aviary from the old male above mentioned, and a good Nightingale. These are problems difficult to explain.

Thirty Tours: Or Five.

Our author goes on to tell us that "this bird hath a most curious, melodious, pleasant song, carrying it through with so much sweetness and curiosity and abundance of variety that I have had very many that have had almost thirty several (different) sort of notes." If this is not another case of the early aviculturist getting better results than those obtained at the present day, I must have been unlucky, for I have never either owned or heard such a cage bird.

The beginner will probably be disappointed if he expects to hear more than the ordinary song of this species, which consists of five tours only, the most characteristic being the "tio, tio, tio." This phrase the bird will repeat perhaps forty times in a beautifully sweet and clear, but low voice; it will then pause and change over to another tour. This is the Nightingale's method of singing, and one or two of the tours are the same, but the Woodlark cannot sing the "jug, jug, jug," which will always be found a certain means of identifying the song of our most renowned chorister.

The Woodlark is an expert ventriloquist, and it is most difficult to locate a singing Woodlark, especially when heard at night. As in the case of the Nightingale, some are day singers and some are night singers; not only is this so, but it will be found that, if there is only one bird singing in a district, he will commence to sing at the same time, almost to a minute, day after day.

Another of the Woodlark's good qualities is that he sings in every month except August, one can often hear him on a still winter's day, and even in the midst of a snow storm. When he sings by day he usually soars high up in the air, and usually perches in an oak tree, but at night he usually sings on or close to the ground.

This species, however, has one defect as a cage bird, namely, it is extremely shy, which causes it to sing frequently in a subdued, plaintive, half-shrillened sort of manner, or, to quote "The Fancier's Delight," "so dully, as if they were a deep, which otherwise he is a very cheerful bird; for observe them when they sing in the field, with what ravishing, melodious song, they charm your ears, which, if well ordered (managed) would prove the same being kept in a cage." The beginner, however, will find that it is not so much the management as the substitution of cage life for a state of liberty, which is the difficulty. Nevertheless, much can be done by gaining the bird's confidence, and placing its cage among those surroundings which are found by experiment to be most congenial to it.

How I Bred Budgerigars in a Cage.

By W. LIDGETT,
Hon. Sec. Newark C.B.S.

The Winning Essay in the Foreign section of our competition. In it the writer gives his experience with this easily bred and popular Parakeet, sometimes known as "The Love Bird."

ALTHOUGH only 36 years of age, I have been a fancier for 28 years, as I started by keeping a Redpoll when only 8 years of age, and from that time to the present I have never been without some birds. I have kept British Canaries, and Foreign, and have won many prizes with each variety, among them being 3 silver cups, but Foreign birds have always had a soft spot in my heart.

A few years ago, having been able to have erected a nice outdoor birdroom, 10ft. by 10ft. by 12ft. high, I decided to try my hand at breeding Budgerigars in a cage. My breeding cages, which I use for Norwich Canaries, being of the two-compartment pattern, I thought they would not be quite private enough for foreign birds, so I got a Quaker Oats box and made a loose front, with a good wide door. After I had fixed two coconut husks, one in each corner, and a couple of perches just slightly lower and almost directly under them, I had what I thought almost the ideal for the purpose as far as cages could be made.

I had had a pair of Budgerigars for about two years together in a single breeder, and although both appeared on the best of terms they had never attempted to go beyond the usual "kissing" and head-scratching, peculiar to this breed. As soon as they were put into the larger cage, however, and had examined all corners to their satisfaction, they went and sat on the top of one of the husks. For a few days I waited to see them go inside, but the hen seemed quite content to sit on top of the husk and just pull bits of fibre from around the top of the hole.

This was in the month of May, 1911, and although the birds were together all through the summer they never made any attempt to nest. With the winter coming on, I decided to leave the husks in, thinking perhaps that the birds, which had by now got used to going inside them, might like to use them for sleeping purposes during the cold weather.

Just before Christmas I noticed the hen seemed very intent on going to nest, and I almost decided to take away the husks, knowing how subject Budgerigars are to egg-binding during the winter. But the excitement of having eggs got the better of me, and I left them in.

Three days before Christmas I missed the hen, and the cock bird was sitting on top of one of the husks intently watching the entrance hole. For four weeks, although often in my birdroom, I was never once able to see the hen come out even to feed.

One morning I heard a faint squeak, and my hopes rose high. I had succeeded in breeding Budgies in a cage; whether I should rear them or not was my next thought.

I put some soaked bread, squeezed dry, in a pot, and left them to themselves as much as my excitement would allow. At the end of three weeks, I noticed a green head pop out of the husk, and in a couple of days the first young one came out, and on each succeeding day another, three in all. They were reared to maturity, and I sold a pair of them to a member of our society, keeping the odd one myself.

HYBRIDS FROM THE GREENFINCH HEN. By H. NORMAN.

Our artist describes the beautiful Hybrids depicted in our Coloured Plate, and shows how some of them may be reared with the same ease as an ordinary Canary.

OUR coloured plate issued with this number should be of particular interest to the numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS who are in any way concerned in the production of Hybrids between the different species of Finches. In consequence of the beauty of plumage of all the young produced from any of the Bullfinch crosses, the Bullfinch takes precedence over all others as a Hybrid producer, but I sometimes think that fanciers scarcely know the value of the hen Greenfinch for this purpose, or they would make far more use of her. The young are not by any means lacking in beauty, either of feather or shape, and good specimens are generally well up in the classes in which they compete at the shows.

The Value of the Greenfinch Hen.

The Greenfinch hen is more than useful; she is a good nest builder, a free breeder, and will frequently rear the young; if she does so, she will excel any hen Canary at the job. The best hens for the purpose are either hand-reared specimens or some that have been hatched and reared under Canaries. The majority so reared are docile, but occasionally one turns up that possesses in itself all the wild nature of the rest of the brood combined. I have found from experience that such birds are not worth the keeping, and they should be allowed to depart while the summer is with us and wild food plentiful.

The young hens that are of a desirable tameness should be kept so during the winter months, and it will be found that some of them will, if turned into a small aviary or large flight, nest and rear as steady as a hen Canary. To show their value I might mention that a fancier of my acquaintance has utilised a pair of these Canary-reared "Greenbirds" to rear two broods of high-class Canaries, and the young thus reared were remarkably strong and lusty.

A Word to the Wise.

It is just a question whether Hybrid breeders who have the room and opportunity would not be well advised to pair up Greenies for a few generations to secure a strain that could be relied on to rear the choicest Hybrids. Incidentally, they could easily, by selection, produce cock Greenfinches that would in a few generations show an improvement over their wild progenitors in exhibition properties.

A hen Greenie is not only a good feeder, but will use food that a Canary will not look at, and this matter of feeding is of vital importance, for it is of no use of hatching choice Hybrids if they cannot be reared, and many keen breeders have been disappointed on the eve of success on account of their inability to get the young reared. I do not wish to suggest that the use of the Greenfinch hens will remove all the breeder's difficulties, but I do think that she might occasionally save the situation.

Referring to our plate; in the top left-hand corner we have a Hybrid between a Linnet and a Greenfinch. These species appear to be so near akin, that the production of the cross is not a very difficult one, but although the young one is a fine big bold fellow, and most interesting as a cross, he is not of great value on the show bench, for coming as he does under the heading of "Hybrids between two British Birds," he has to compete against the most rare and choice crosses, some of them far richer in colour and more attractive.

Good for the Beginner.

Anyway, in spite of this, he is a good bird for the beginner to try for, when making his first steps in this fascinating pursuit. The pair can be mated in an ordinary breeding cage, if one has no aviary available; if the Greenie refuses to incubate and rear in the cage, the eggs must be transferred to a reliable Canary. The youngsters are lusty and grand feeders, and will keep a pair of Canaries pretty busy attending to them. I have found considerable difference in the appearance of Hybrids from this cross, some being practically plain in plumage, and others rather heavily marked.

The bird depicted below the Linnet-Greenfinch is the Redpoll-Greenie, a handsomer bird, of good stout build, and showing Redpoll characteristics, particularly about the head, many specimens having a decided bib and being fairly well pencilled along the back. This cross is far more difficult to obtain, and it is seldom we see a really good specimen on the show bench.

Selecting the Redpoll-Greenfinch Pair.

No doubt when trying for this cross fanciers are not quite careful enough in their pairing. It is waste of time matching a small Redpoll with a big Greenie. A medium sized Greenie and the largest Redpoll procurable should be the rule, so that the difference between them is not greater than we find in a pair of breeding Canaries, and there one may reasonably hope for success with ordinary luck, as the Redpoll is not a backward partner.

It has been found that the Lesser Redpoll is more reliable for breeding purposes than the Mealy, although I have known fanciers to use the latter with success, and I have done so myself, but such cases are only exceptions to the general rule. Of course the use of the Lesser bird reduces the chances of a big specimen being produced.

In the top right-hand corner of our plate will be found a representation of the Siskin-Greenfinch, but I fear the position selected for artistic purposes does not nearly show off this beautiful Hybrid as he deserves. I think without exception he is as shapely as any Hybrid bred, and his colouring, if not particularly brilliant, is certainly harmonious and pleasing, while the quality of feather is of the very best.

Here again, when selecting our pair of birds we must be careful in matching them; get the Siskin as large as possible; he will, of course be field-hatched, but his partner should have been reared either under a Canary or by hand. Let them see as much of each other as possible during the winter, and as soon as the spring arrives, commence to feed up the Siskin, or the Greenie will be ready first.

A Necessary Precaution.

In this case it is no use attempting to get the hen to incubate, as the Siskin is not to be trusted with the eggs; it is therefore wise to run him into a separate compartment the last thing at night, and remove the egg early in the morning before returning him to the hen.

Although a goodly number of Hybrids of this cross have been produced the really good ones, like many other Hybrids, can be counted on one's fingers. An extra large flight or fair-sized aviary is quite suitable for this pair, and if well supplied with materials the hen will generally build quite a decent nest in any old small cage or box.

Of the next cross, the Canary-Greenfinch, one need not say much, the cross is fairly common, although usually produced the opposite way. If this pair are placed in a large flight they may be allowed to incubate and rear the young, the hen being of course a house-reared bird.

Handsomest and Easiest.

Quite at the bottom of our picture we have the Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid, a bird showing more colour than any of the others, this he gets from his sire, a bird that generally manages to put a bit of crimson and yellow on his children. This cross is possibly one of the easiest we have to produce, the reason being that both birds pair readily, and this makes it quite a desirable Hybrid for the beginner to attempt. A big, full-coloured Goldfinch should be selected, as size and colour are of first importance in the show specimen, and it is impossible to rear choice birds from mean parents.

The Goldies as a rule are not to be trusted with the eggs, although some birds are quite safe, anyway it is as well to make certain by shutting him off at night, or trying him with two or three unfertile eggs, of which the Hybrid breeder generally has a good supply.

In the rearing of Hybrids one wants to follow Nature's ways as far as possible; gather bunches of all kinds of wild food, and let the birds take their choice. Strong egg-food is of doubtful benefit, a good brand of insectile food moistened with fresh milk is more suitable, or even a little plain bread and milk, given in the early stages is useful. Soaked and germinated seeds are also desirable, but the choicest tit-bit above all others is "green-fly"; carefully pick the infested plant and gently insert it between the wires, the old birds will quickly strip it, and be looking round like "Oliver," asking for more.

REDPOLL-CANARY HYBRID.

This bird has had a very successful career, and has won many prizes for its owner, Mr. J. Goodall, of Watford. It was hatched June, 1912, and has won—1912: 2nd Cardiff, 3rd Watford. 1913: 1st Watford. 2nd Wimbledon, 2nd Cardiff, 2nd Brixton, 2nd Scottish National, 4th L.C.B.A., 3rd Clapham. 1914: 2nd Palace, 3rd L.C.B.A., 2nd West Herts F.A. 1915: Scottish National 2nd, Watford 1st, Welsh National 2nd, Watford (open show), 1st. 1916: Glasgow Red Cross 3rd.

THE KEEPING OF BRITISH HARDBILLS

By J. A. TONKS, Wednesbury.

The winning essay in the British section of our competition. It tells how to house and feed the most generally kept of our British Finches.

I AM induced to take up my pen in an endeavour to write an article on the keeping of British Hardbills by the hope that my experience of upwards of 15 years may be of some use to the novice, and to those who may in the near future purpose taking up this interesting branch of our hobby, and, incidentally, I may mention that during the whole of the 15 years, after business hours, my time has been crammed full of pleasure and excitement, the latter from an exhibition standpoint, for the thrills of a red ticket being placed on one's cage well compensate for the time and trouble spent upon the perfecting of the birds.

I know full well I am treading over much-trodden ground, and that quite a diversity of opinion exists on the different foods for the many species. However, it is not my intention to lay down any hard and fast rules, and I would only portray my own methods and experiences, and I would only say that many fanciers and judges can vouch for the condition of my pets at all times. I have at all times given my birds ample cage room, and I think nothing beats the ordinary double compartment breeding cage, partitioned off, thus giving room for one bird on either side. The size of those I use is 36 inches long by 15 inches high and 10 inches deep. They are enamelled sky blue inside, and black outside, and if these are all made of uniform size, it gives a very pleasing effect, providing always that they are kept scrupulously clean, for no person should take up any hobby, particularly the keeping of cage birds, if it is not his or her intention to keep the birds under the best possible conditions. Otherwise interest soon flags, and the birds suffer sooner or later from the inattention.

Now for the birds themselves. It is impossible for me to deal with every species individually, and I would prefer to group them, as most seed eaters will live and do fairly well on a good stock mixture. However, I deal with my birds according to their tastes (likes and dislikes), this through observation, as in most instances it will obviate a wasting of seed (a serious factor in these times).

Say we take the following as a first group: Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite. I mix for these good sound Spanish Canary seed, summer rape, teal, and inga, with a little linseed; with wild seed about twice weekly in a separate vessel. This keeps them in A1 order. For the Goldfinch and Greenfinch, the same mixture with a little hemp and sunflower added daily, not forgetting the wild seed in due season. The Bullfinch to my mind is one of the most difficult to cater for, his tastes differ so considerably. One would think the above-mentioned diet would meet with his requirements, and yet I have two really good specimens in perfect condition, one insists on eating chiefly inga and teal, and the other teal and linseed. I therefore increase the quantities of these seeds, at the same time lessening the others, thus keeping down the waste to a minimum (hempseed I do not consider at all beneficial). They also get the various wild seeds in their season, and an abundance of berries (blackberries, mountain ash, elder, and privet during the month).

The Chaffinch, Bramble and Yellow Bunting also do well on the above-mentioned stock mixture, with a few crushed oats or groats added daily, and not forgetting the indispensable meal worm daily. This reminds me that I successfully use the latter for my Goldfinches, for, once they have tackled them, they are a splendid conditioner, in fact, I have pulled many a Goldie round that has been going light by their use.

My method of breaking them in is to hold the bird in one hand and the mealworm in the other, he invariably pecks at the worm, and once he tastes it he acquires the taste very quickly, and does not want asking twice. Pinning a mealworm to the end of the perch is a quick method of getting them steady.

The bulky, yet stately Hawfinch is an old favourite, and no British bird room seems complete without him; a good specimen always commands attention, his beautiful wax-like feathers and majestic bearing soon catch the eye. My method of keeping him is a mixture of good Spanish canary, hemp and best white sunflower, with a few meal worms daily, never forgetting green peas in their season (or dried green peas), these soaked overnight with water make a good substitute. Hawberries, blackberries, privet, mountain ash berries are all greatly relished, and of great benefit, especially during the month.

In conclusion, I must not forget to impress the great necessity of the daily bath on suitable, sunny days; failing this the spray should come into play at least twice weekly. I usually run my birds into an old show cage for the purpose, thus keeping the stock cage always dry.

The Novice Problem.

SIR,—In reply to the letter of Mr. W. B. Smart, sec. of the B.F.C.C. in CAGE BIRDS of Jan. 1, I am pleased the so-called novice's conscience has pricked him to withdraw in favour of the runner-up. But, Sir, that does not alter the fact that he must have put on his entry form that he was a novice of the B.F.C.C., or his bird would not have been drawn out and judged for the novice medal. I think "Just Come Back" was quite justified in rushing into print. Taking his letter of Dec. 18, he must have known a few facts, and fanciers and members of the above club have got to know a few facts they would not have got otherwise. A MEMBER.

A New Cage Bird Society for Barnstaple.

SIR,—After the recent successful show held in aid of local war funds, a meeting was convened on Jan. 5 at the Y.M.C.A. rooms to consider the forming of a society for cage birds. After a most interesting discussion it was unanimously decided to form one. The members are most fortunate in having as a chairman Mr. E. Collins, the well known British and Hybrid enthusiast. A very strong committee of keen fanciers was elected, and with everyone keen on doing something to stimulate the interests of the fancy generally the Society should make rapid strides. The great aim of the officers is to help and encourage the novice both in breeding and exhibiting, and meetings of educational interest will be arranged during the year. A 25 mile radius has been fixed, which will enable fanciers from such places as Lynton, Ilfracombe, Bideford, etc., to become members, and with the promise of a show every year it is hoped that they will take advantage of the many privileges offered, and also help to make the fancy stronger and healthier in North Devon. The membership fee is 2s. 6d. per year.

The Committee to Mr. Steel's Charges.

SIR,—We, the undersigned, much regret to find that strictly private and confidential correspondence should appear in the public press. The letter which appears in your issue of the 8th inst., above the name of J. Steel, is a scandal more to the writer than to the party to whom the writer seeks to expose. In the letters which Mr. Steel sent to the secretary of the Club, he promised to abide by the decision of the committee, and that if an apology were forthcoming, further discussion and exposure should drop. It will be noticed that Mr. Steel distinctly admits that "confession and apology were made." Why then, we ask, does Mr. Steel send in the correspondence, even in part, to CAGE BIRDS? What about the decoy letter he sent to Mr. Gribben, although he writes stating that he has witnesses who saw this so-called decoy letter written? Mr. Steel accepted Mr. Gribben's apology, and when the secretary inquired of him (Mr. Steel) whether this ended the matter he replied in the affirmative.

We are in no way countenancing the practice of courting judges for show favours, but wholeheartedly condemn and guard against it; yet, in a true sense of honour, we are obliged to protest against the action which Mr. Steel has, apparently in a spirit of revenge, adopted towards the exhibitor who so foolishly placed himself in the power of a man who does not understand nor appreciate the significance of an apology.

We may further add that we, as a club, have not yet had an opportunity of interviewing Mr. Gribben, and dealing with his case, since the committee meeting held at the show.

(Signed) James McLachlan, Thomas Erskine, Douglas Wason, James Tait, William Wilson, Members of Committee; John A. Murray, President of Club; Hugh M. Ferguson, sec.

We have further letters from the judge, Mr. Steel, Mr. Ferguson, the hon. sec., and from an exhibitor. We purpose dealing with these in our next issue.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.

A Fighting Family.

SIR,—It may interest you to know I have three brothers in H.M. Forces, and one in the O.T.C., whilst another brother and yours truly are getting efficient in the V.T.C. The list is as follows:—W. Tonks, Second Lieut., Duke Cornwall's L.I.; J. E. W. Tonks, Corporal, Royal Engineers; D. D. Tonks, Lance-Corporal, Royal Engineers; H. Tonks, Officers' Training Corps; J. A. Tonks, Corporal, V.T.C.; G. A. Tonks, Lance-Corporal, V.T.C. J. A. Tonks.

The Disqualified Yorkshire at Bishop Auckland.

SIR,—As a reader for many years of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, I hope you will allow me a few words respecting the disqualification, at Bishop Auckland Show, Jan. 1, of the unflighted buff cock bred by Mr. Jas. Stewart, of Whitehaven. Mr. Crawhall, Newcastle-on-Tyne, judged. In the first place, as I am only a novice, I would like to ask Mr. Crawhall if he was right in disqualifying the same. He says that it is flighted. Now, Mr. Editor, the young bird knocked four flights out in the moult, and, although a novice, I know that there are fifteen flights in a bird's wing. There were eleven young flights left, and though the four that were knocked out showed colour food, surely the eleven young ones showed the bird to be unflighted? This same bird, Mr. Editor, has won for its owner six firsts and three cups, and to be disqualified at the seventh time of showing is too much for us novices. I would like to ask Mr. Crawhall the reason why he did not object to the same bird beating him at Newcastle, for the cup, also at Blaydon when it beat him there.

Thirteen Tons of Larks in One Day!

Is it Ancient History?

SIR,—I have noticed on previous occasions statements about the amount of Larks caught in the Royston district, but as there are three Roystons in England alone, I have thought that it must refer to one of the Roystons other than the one I know myself. Although I have lived in Bedford for the last six years, for 20 years I lived in the Royston district, 10 years at Sitlington, 3½ miles from Royston, and 10 years in Royston itself. "W. J. M." cannot have lived in that locality very recently, I'm afraid, as what he refers to took place when I was a small boy, and I well remember going "snaring" as it was called with my next elder brother, and at night making the snares and repairing the lines. However, such statements as these set fanciers thinking what a God-forsaken place this district must be to allow such a cruel business to be carried on, for, once in the snare, the bird is tortured, perhaps for several hours, by the snare tightening round its leg till it is released and killed.

By the last sentence, "That is the metropolis of the Lark-snaring industry," "W. J. M." makes one think there are men that live by this means, but let me say that in Royston itself I don't know of a single one that has these reels of snares. Moreover, he would get a rare sort of a living, as it is useless laying snares unless there is a good covering of snow, so that in recent years a man would have had to find another occupation for at least 360 days out of the year.

I have also made it my business to ask others of these districts, and I find that at Hitchin the police have taken the matter in hand. I commend them for it, as I know of nothing more cruel, and the R.S.P.C.A. would soon get some good cases if they only looked out for them. To judge a district by what it did a quarter of a century ago is a gross scandal, and that your readers will disperse this from their minds is the wish of

ARTHUR SIMONS.

The Origin of Unflighted Classes.

How a Cruel Practice was Abolished.

SIR,—Up till 1891 it had been the usual practice to flight and tail all Norwich and Cinnamon Canaries of the current year, so as to give them a better chance of competing against their year-old opponents. This cruel practice jarred upon many fanciers, for one had only to uncover his cages and see the birds scuttle along the bottom like so many mice to come to no other conclusion but that it was cruel, and many a really good specimen was spoilt for show purposes through it. In 1891 a correspondence was opened as to the desirability of doing away with the practice. Mr. J. H. Payne, Mr. H. W. Naylor and myself being in favour of its abolition. After a discussion in our journal I offered to guarantee two classes for Plainhead Norwich, and one for Cinnamon at Birmingham's coming exhibition. Mr. Payne said he thought Gloucester would give two, and the classes were a success from the first. Next season, 1892, every society of note gave classes for unflighted birds, and these classes are the best supported of any at the present time.

J. BASTOCK.

What About the Welsh National Show?

The Chairman, Mr. Banks, Answers the Question.

SIR,—I regret that my reply to Mr. S. J. Nicholas will be a week late, owing to great pressure of business. My remarks to Mr. Nicholas at Cardiff show in November were thrown out as a kind of challenge to Welsh fanciers generally, and I quite understood Mr. Nicholas to say that he would mention it in his report of that show, but it would seem either that he omitted to do so, or that the editorial blue-pencil was out to save space.

I am sure that all Welsh fanciers will agree that it is quite impossible to run a National show without proper financial support—and this I am afraid is not forthcoming during the crisis which the country is passing through at the present time. When I tell you that the whole of the disbursements of the 1915 Welsh National amounted to nearly £200, including prize-money, specials, printing, advertising, etc., the Fancy generally, and especially Welsh fanciers, will have some idea of the great amount of "pluck" required to run a National show. There are also many other things to consider before I could be persuaded to advise my committee to hold a show this season.

First and foremost our old friend, Mr. Will Sampson, cannot possibly again undertake the duties of show manager, and I hope that I shall not give offence to anyone when I say that there is certainly no man in Wales who could fill his shoes. The National show of 1915 was the great surprise for all who visited it, and the all-round success—of which I am justly proud—was entirely due to the splendid and business-like arrangements of Mr. Sampson, who is undoubtedly the "Lloyd George of show managers," and the substantial balance of nearly £18 which we handed over to The Prince of Wales' Fund, was, I believe, the largest sum contributed by any C.B. society for a similar cause throughout the Kingdom.

Then there are the judges, stewards, and helpers to consider, most of whom very kindly gave us their services free on the last occasion. Many of these have since joined the Colours, and one at least has passed to the Great Beyond. I refer to that highly esteemed and respected fancier, the late Mr. D. A. S. Longden, whom I saw laid to rest last August in one of the most charming spots that might be imagined.

What do exhibitors think of a National show? With the experience of the last show still fresh in my mind, I should not care to say that such an outlay as £200 would be at all wise, because, had we depended upon the exhibitors only, some of us would have had to make some sort of show to the fund for which the show was held. I don't mean to say that there would have been a big loss, but there would certainly not have been any balance to hand over to the Prince of Wales' Fund.

Even Welsh fanciers did not support the show as they could have done, and London fanciers absolutely boycotted us, and I know from at least two fanciers who thought it worth while to come from London to the show that a report had been spread that the Welsh National show was going to be a huge fiasco. What a great disappointment it must have been to these people to read in CAGE BIRDS Mr. Norman's splendid review of the show! Why, the first man I met in the show on the Friday morning was a gallant Scotsman from beyond Aberdeen, and who said to me—"Well, Mr. Banks, I have seen all the big shows in the country, but I have never seen anything like this; it's really great." Yes, and that man stayed with us until the end of the show, and helped us to pack the birds home again.

I quite agree with Mr. Nicholas that it would be a pity to let this show fall through, but so far as this season is concerned, I am afraid it is too late to think of it now. I am quite prepared to do all I can to make the Welsh National an annual event—the grand finale of the Welsh show season—and there are plenty of good sound fanciers in the Cardiff society who can always be relied upon to do the donkey work, and for whose help at the last show I shall always feel grateful; but, we must have the co-operation and whole-hearted support of every individual fancier in Wales. If you want a National show, then let it be such a show as will help to lift the Fancy generally in the eyes of the public, and foster the breeding of all varieties of cage birds, and thus put a few welcome shillings into the pockets of the working-man fancier. Cardiff has the most suitable hall for the purpose, and I would advise fanciers to send their 5s. subscriptions to the secretary, Mr. E. W. Allsopp, and make all preparations for the next Welsh National show.

All good wishes to you, Mr. Editor, to CAGE BIRDS, and to all fanciers throughout the Kingdom. May the New Year, 1916, prove to be the best for all. E. J. BANKS.

SIR,—I have been much interested in this discussion, for, although I am not one of the Welsh fanciers, I, with several others, have been wondering why the show could not be held this February. With so many boys in this country being cancelled, I feel sure that, as before, another "Welsh National" would be a great success. If, as I gather from the correspondence on the subject, it is impossible for this show to be held in Cardiff, why not change the venue?

The 5s. subscription proposal I think is sound, and no doubt there are many who would be very pleased to help in this way. I for one would help in another way, i.e., that if the show is not a financial success, I will willingly present my winnings, if any, to the society or persons who have enough British pluck to carry the show through. I also feel sure that there are plenty of other exhibitors who would follow my lead. January has now arrived, and if a show is to be held in February then it is high time someone was moving in the matter. SERGT. A. THOMAS.

The Affairs of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club.

SIR,—I have been requested by Mr. Ramsden to assist him in calling a general meeting of the above club, and, as the latest published list of members is dated 1913, I shall be glad if all persons who have joined since then will send me their names and addresses. I shall also be glad to hear from all members who have changed their addresses since then. In order that there may be no delay in sending out the notices, please communicate at once to Attempt to Suborn and Black-mail a Judge.

SIR,—Re Mr. Steele's letter in CAGE BIRDS, wherein he admits being approached several times to advance birds, I think he won't get much credit for denouncing that "prominent exhibitor" so late in the day. The practice being so common in Scotland, is it not the specialist clubs that should take it in hand and make it impossible for any judge to see the numbers on cages? There are labels for that purpose, printed by "Spratts," I believe. In Norwich and Crests we have all sizes of cages and shades of enamel. Borders are similar regarding size, and in Yorkshires, we have all classes of cages, different perches, and different drinkers. Of course this saves "those in the know" from buying catalogues, and the trouble of referring to them, and, coupled with local or "clique" judges, is, in my opinion, the cause of the "rotteness" of the Fancy in Scotland. EX EXHIBITOR.

Out in the Cold World.

SIR,—In CAGE BIRDS of Dec. 18 "Barnockburn" says that fanciers from the different districts were put out of the hall to walk the streets. This is an utter falsehood. I admit they did not get the privilege to watch the judging, but I defy any person to say they were put out of the hall. They had a good fire to sit at and coals to put on if they cared to take the trouble. W. CLARKSON, Sec.

For Sweating or Non-feeding Hens.

SIR,—I am sending a device for sweating hens and non-feeding hens, as I thought it would be of some good to other fanciers. I have used it myself for two years, and find I have no trouble at all with them. For the sweating hen bore a 3 hole in the centre of the bottom of the nest box, then get a 3 peg, about 2½ or 3in. long. Put this up through the hole, and through the nest, letting the top of the peg be about level with the young, and pushing it higher up as the young grow. For the non-feeding hen get the longest hairpin you can, bend about three-quarters of an inch of the ends square. Open out the hairpin like the letter V inverted, and drive the ends in the back of the nest box. Just below drive in two shoe rivets; the projecting ends of these keep the nest box from the cage back, and the hairpin answers as a spring; shakes the young when the parents alight on the side, and thereby arouses the young, so that they get fed. Fix the bent ends of the hairpin ½in. from the edge of nest box. J. CLARKE.

Colour in the Norwich Plain-head.

Its Origin and Its Importance.

SIR.—I am sure that no one is more sorry than myself to learn that Mr. Frank Cole experienced disappointment respecting my recent article.

Of course, it is true that when sometimes standing upon substantial facts and irrefutable evidence, I "let fly" with a little vim, or "fiery tone." Is not that the occasion to do so, or, again, why should I not? Every impartial reader of my article would, however, well realise, inasmuch as I was putting a matter forward, as one merely, or rather mainly, of interest, and supported only by circumstantial evidence, that my path was of necessity to be chosen with much circumspection. Therefore I fear my friend, in realising disappointment, was an accessory to the fact. I assure him, however, that I am the "old firm," the very one that drew readers' attention hardly a season ago to his having wasted a precious hour of time of the members of a certain London Society in lecturing to them upon the merits of the "Pure Norwich," which all the world and his wife knew had been for some years past of a mongrel character. Whatever my friend may say in further justification of his "splendid isolation," nobody seems to now advertise "Pure Norwich," which seems significant. In fact, some boldly advertise a "Mixture"; at least, I know one breeder that does, and he is a proper old grandfather in fancy experience, which, of course, is again significant. Nevertheless, it is possible Mr. Cole has realised the error of his ways, and, having now, I understand, lately emerged from the novice section, feels his importance, and steps into the arena, and as he seems "fair game" we welcome him. Inasmuch, however, as he has already, by a series of contradictory statements and observations, reduced the point at issue to merely chaos, I must remind him that, having entered the arena, it is now incumbent upon him to endeavour to break down, either with more substantial evidence or irrefutable facts, my circumstantial evidence, which seems to support the possible presence of Lizard blood in the Plainheads of at least a few breeders whose geographical position, being north, seems unfortunate. In no manner have I made a definite statement, nor have I professed or even expressed a wish to lead, which I trust Mr. Cole will kindly note.

Already I have pointed out that the birds of the breeders I have in mind have consistently excelled in colour for years, and there seemed in their appearance something in common with the Lizard. The respective depths and tones of colour are equal; the character of the feather, which certainly does not excel in quality, is equal; there is a similarity of the markings upon the back, which in the Lizard are of a globular shape, arranged in rows with some degree of regularity, quite opposed to the markings of the general run of green and variegated birds, whose markings are usually longitudinal streaks or dashes, in some instances merging into each other without any respect to law and order; and there is the fact of a few greens and heavily variegated plainheads, which as unflighted birds carry flight, secondary, and tail feathers of a solid colour throughout, but which moult them with a distinct white tip (proof of which I can secure if needed). Now I am not aware that this latter occurrence is due, or is likely to be due, to the possible presence of cinnamon blood, for in this instance none is present, and never has been, so far as can be traced; nor do I suggest it is likely to be due to some physical disability that would interfere with the pigmentation of the plumage. In whatever direction we seek an explanation we are forced to acknowledge the Lizard as a clue, for do we not know this happening is the almost invariable rule of that variety, and is, moreover, deep rooted?

This latter seems really substantial evidence, though, be it noted, I put it forward as merely circumstantial, and gladly throw it into the lap of my critic, either to lend to pieces with positive proof to the contrary, or, failing that, to handle it as a matter of interest in the same unbiased manner as I have put it forth. I am aware that even those breeders I have in mind might possibly be prepared to swear upon the book that no Lizard blood was present in their stock. What of it? Is there any breeder that can successfully trace the pedigree of his individual birds through several years? Is he so sure that the variegated bird he bought some years ago quite casually, and which gave such good colour results, was not the produce of a first season's novice, glad to pair even a Lizard with a Plainhead? Have not many commenced in this hobby in so casual a manner? Also, is it beyond possibility that not a little experimenting has been resorted to in this manner? Again, has there never been a dark muling stock built up with Lizard blood? Come, now! when the chief characteristics of the Lizard cross are eliminated, and the birds dispersed north, east, south, and west, without any news of their pedigree, who will deny the possibility of Lizard blood being yet present in our breed here and there? Will my friend Mr. Cole?

I fear if we are to accept his effort to smash my circumstantial evidence, he will waste yet another precious hour, for whereas I find in his third paragraph he says, "Now we find this paleness of feather generally (not always) goes hand in hand with silkiness or quality of feather, while the hot coloured bird is harsh in comparison," he further on, in the last paragraph but one, asks, "Is it not reasonable that breeding clear to clear must in the end breed harshness?" Also he further declares, "You may safely say this harshness of feather does not come from the Lizard." Is any of this proof, or even circumstantial evidence; is it logic; above all, is it interesting?

Then, in his concluding paragraph he adds, "Double buffing is not wrong, clear to clear is not wrong." How does he know it is not wrong until he has proved it is right? Even double yellowing is not wrong when it turns out all right, or pairing marked to marked. Does he really mean to say that when venturing his untried stock in any of the foregoing alternatives he can definitely say in every instance it will not be wrong? Well! Well! Even if so, will it answer with everyone's stock? I suppose not without the same foundation. With pleasure we remember his duel with another upon "Face Value versus Pedigree," and when reviewing his present contribution I also must express some disappointment. Did that effort pump him dry, or does he imagine my long stocking has yielded its all? We shall see.

E. W. ALLSOPP.

SIR,—I have read all the correspondence on the above subject, and so far fail to see any real attempt by the acknowledged leading exhibitors to help the novice or general breeder by explaining how they manage their stud. Instead of this, the subject heading is immediately taken advantage of by one exhibitor (or bird trader perhaps would be a more suitable name) to start personalities against other exhibitors, and, as in previous paper controversies, the subject that started the correspondence is entirely lost in the clamour of these rivals. I have been a lover of birds, and have kept a large number for over 35 years, and claim that as proof that the bird has a charm for me. I never claim to have done what "Dame Fortune" is doing for so many bird exhibitors, so I will divulge the only reasonable way anyone can maintain colour in his stud. Study the parentage line, mate yellow hen to buff cock that has been bred from a yellow cock, and when using a buff hen be sure you have one bred from a yellow hen and buff cock, as above. If to start with you utilise one yellow green heavily marked hen in every three pairs, this will furnish you with a foundation for crossing during the next eight seasons without spoiling any of the special points you have in your birds. You will quite understand, Mr. Editor, this is simply a question of making and maintaining the real hot colour stuff the exhibitors seemingly are afraid to disclose. My system of breeding will establish colour in an entire stud in a few seasons to stand alongside the best, provided the other points are good enough in the breeder's room, and he knows how to mate them up, but this last is altogether outside the colour question.

T. SANDERS.

SIR,—I was greatly interested in Mr. Allsopp's article on the above subject in the Christmas No. issue of CAGE BIRDS. I now note a letter on the same from Mr. J. Bastock. It is regrettable that Mr. B. did not attack the article in question, and the writer thereof, in a friendly and fancier-like spirit. Mr. B. tells us that if we cross the Lizard into our "pure" Norwich we shall lose all desirable points. This information I am pleased to accept as granted. Now, for the benefit of Norwich fanciers in general, would Mr. B. tell us how the grand "yellow" he mentions got his marvellous colour? I have made various experiments in colour breeding in Norwich Plainheads, and I have come to the conclusion that the taint of cinnamon blood is one of the causes of "flatness" in colour. Mr. Allsopp makes mention of the "Right kind of green blood" to introduce. I suggest that the right bird would be a self green with dark beak and feet, and possessed of grass green ground colouring with heavy pencillings on back and flanks, a yellow cock for preference. Attention must be paid to the dark beak and feet, as these are the true indications of a "green bred" bird which will prove itself to be the "inkpot" into which we must dip for colour in the Norwich Plainhead. A bird of this description mated to a typical buff hen of good quality (clear or ticked) will be found to provide sufficient "colour" to permeate several generations of offspring. In case I may incur the displeasure of friend Bastock I will sign myself as a YELLOW GREEN.

SIR,—I was much amused at Mr. Allsopp's eat and dog effusion. Where he gets cat's eyes from I do not know; there were none in my letter. Yes, I am proud of my experience as a breeder of birds. Mr. Allsopp is coming into his right class, and I shall be pleased to give him any information on any subject connected with cage birds if he will say what it is he requires. Re the bombastic challenge, it was not I who made the challenge, but Mr. Allsopp, and then he dare not go on with it.

J. BASTOCK.

[In Mr. Bastock's letter in our issue of Jan. 1 there were two printer's errors. In the first sentence of the second paragraph the words "to me" should read "some," and in the last sentence of the same paragraph the word "like" should be "size."—Editor CAGE BIRDS.]

SIR,—As a novice I am glad to see Mr. Bastock's letter on Colour in the Norwich. As he refers to Mr. Spillman's yellow at Cheltenham, would it be too much to ask Mr. Spillman how he bred this bird? Does he use lizard, or green, or cinnamon to get such colour?

DAVID WILLIAMS.

Bird Life in a Military Camp.

SIR,—It has occurred to me that the following letter to a Sheffield paper might be of interest to readers of CAGE BIRDS.

OLD READER.

"Anyone visiting this camp for the first time is at once struck by the tameness of the birds to be seen about it. It consists of the usual corrugated iron huts built on piles on the slopes of a hill, and its being in the heart of the country and far from a town may, in a measure, be responsible for there being so much bird life about it. Having little to occupy their spare time in such a place many of the soldiers turned their attention to the hand-rearing, during the recent nesting season, of the young of the commoner species of birds, including the Blackbird, Thrush, Starling, Jackdaw, and Magpie. These make excellent pets, and are easily reared by hand; numbers of them may now be seen about the camp flying in and out of the huts at will during the daytime. Many of them have lost their natural fear of man, and will readily feed from the hand. The other day I witnessed a rather interesting incident. It had been raining heavily some time previously, and a large rain pool had formed at the foot of a flight of steps leading into one of the huts. The shower had passed, and the sun was again shining brightly, when a fine young Blackbird appeared in the doorway above, and began to descend step by step until he reached the pool at the bottom, where, with much spluttering, he proceeded to bathe. Then, step by step, he retired again to the top step, and there I left him preening his feathers in the sun and looking immensely pleased with himself. The Jackdaws and Magpies have also the run of the camp, and one comes across them in the most unexpected places. Often one finds them the centre of a group of soldiers, who delight to tease them and watch their knowing ways. Another striking feature about the bird life in camp is the number and boldness of the Seagulls which have frequented it even during the nesting season. These birds will allow anyone to approach within a few feet of them, and even then seem loath to take to flight. During the summer months when the regimental cooks were in the habit of cutting up the meat rations on long tables in the open air, it was quite a common sight to see a Gull standing a few feet away on the table waiting for a scrap to be thrown to it. On one occasion, when all the cooks inadvertently left the table, the meat became the centre of a fluttering, screaming mass of Gulls, and many pounds of poor Tommies' dinner must have disappeared before the cooks came to the rescue."

A Yellow Yorkshire Lost at Aberaman Show.

SIR,—In answer to the letter of J. O'Leary in CAGE BIRDS of Jan. 1, I may say that I am prepared to answer any straight question re the missing bird put in a straightforward manner. Can I prove that the bird was not stolen from the show? I answer definitely that all the birds were carefully packed and despatched from the show, and I myself packed the bird at 9.50 that night to go away the first thing in the morning. But there was a hitch owing to the railway company refusing to fetch the birds unless they were paid 3d. per hamper. So we have to thank our show manager (Mr. W. Davies) for turning up at 2.30 (after the birds were packed) to see the railway people about getting them off by the 3.49 train.

The second question is—What was the reason for accusing Mr. O'Leary of calling on me to buy a bird on false pretence, when he produced a letter to that effect?

I am prepared to answer Mr. J. O'Leary when he can furnish me with the name of any person or persons to whom I have accused him. He also asks me to be a sport. Well, I will leave that for other people to answer who know me better than Mr. O'Leary. I say without fear of contradiction that there would have been no society in Aberaman to-day if I had not taken it up myself, as they have failed for many years. I will go so far as to say we have come to stay, as we have only opposition from two members who are trying their uttermost to break up the society.

I thank Mr. O'Leary for his kindness in offering assistance to come up to square things for us amicably. Well, I hope we shall be able to do that between ourselves without the aid of outside fanciers. I trust I have given satisfactory answers to the questions asked, and hope that things will turn out well for the New Year.

Identity of the Thrush-Blackbird Hybrid Challenged.

What Mesh was the Wire?

SIR,—The evidence is all in favour of the Thrush-Blackbird hybrid, but when some of your correspondents state that the absence of a cock Blackbird from the aviary "proves" that a Thrush was the male parent they go too far. In various letters the word "proof" is used with even greater laxity.

The following incident is to the point. My gardener has an Owl, reared from the nest, and kept in a box cage, of which only the front is wire. After a year's confinement this bird laid an egg, and sat on it. A little later the gardener broke the egg, which, to his amazement, contained a young Owl. As the bird had never been loose, nor had any other bird been let into the box, this "proves" a case of virgin birth, or parthenogenesis—to use the jargon of science. Of course, what really happened was that a wild Owl succeeded in breeding through the wire front. There are plenty of wild ones within call, and we know that love is a locksmith.

A. H. SCOTT.

[The theory suggested by our correspondent is an ingenious one, and was held to account for the supposed breeding of young from a cock Siskin hybrid some years ago. In that case a pet Siskin was flying loose in the room, and was suspected by those who had the evidence before them of being the real father of the young birds. Anyway, in the following season, when the owner of the hybrid took care to prevent such interference, the hybrid failed to fertilise eggs. In the present case, however, it is contended on the one side that there is no trace of the Blackbird in the young bird under discussion. There can be no possible doubt that the hen Blackbird in Mr. Anderson's aviary hatched the eggs and fed the young birds. If the young birds are pure Thrushes, as has been alleged, then the eggs must have been procured from an outside Thrush's nest, and placed under the hen Blackbird with the deliberate intention of deceiving the witnesses and of foisting a fraud on the Fancy. There can be no alternative, for if the hen Blackbird was the female parent, the young birds must either be Blackbirds or Blackbird hybrids; they cannot in such case possibly be Thrushes.—EDITOR, CAGE BIRDS.]

SIR,—I have with the greatest interest followed the discussion re the Thrush-Blackbird Hybrids. I am sure that Mr. Anderson is a genuine and enthusiastic fancier, and after carefully reading the many articles which have appeared in CAGE BIRDS on this subject, I am quite sure that he would not defraud the fancy in so base a manner as some fanciers try to insinuate. I heartily congratulate Mr. Anderson on his well-earned success, and I ask of him a favour, will he let us have a little information concerning his precious birds from time to time? I am sure all fanciers would like to hear how the parents of the present hybrids progress with their family affairs, as it is very interesting to the fancy at large. I suppose that were a fancier to accomplish the feat of rearing some Chaffinch-Canary mules he would not want to make the fact known after seeing a fellow-fancier so ridiculed when he has justly brought forth a new and handsome hybrid.

P. O. FROST.

It gave me much pleasure and surprise, writes Mr. J. Thompson, Bedford, when I saw in CAGE BIRDS last week, which I always enjoy reading, my yellow Norwich cock which took first and special at Bedford Show, more especially as the hobby in the first place belonged to my son, who is now on active service. I must add that CAGE BIRDS is a great help to me, and I wish it every success.

GREENOCK, PORT GLASGOW AND GOUROCK O.S.

Annual show, in the Boilermakers' Hall, Cathcart-st., Jan. 5. President Molloy, Vice-Pres. Brown, Treas. Rolfs, and Sec. Dooley were all anxious and willing workers, and, being backed up by a sound committee, everything passed off without a hitch. Committee, Messrs. McKay, Best, McDermid, Roddin, Allison, Campbell, and Ralston. Entries numbered about 300. Mr. G. Smart judged the Canary section, and Mr. Pettigrew Mules, British, and Foreign, giving general satisfaction. Quality, on the whole, was up, and there was keen competition in many classes. Mr. Campbell's Light Mule made a stiff fight for the best bird in the hall, and it was only after a referee was called in to decide that Mr. Dooley's young buff Border hen was awarded that honour, winning the much-coveted rose bowl, also cup for best young Canary. The Cameron Cup was won by Mr. Laird for best British bird, Mr. Dermid being runner-up. The club cup for best F. moulted Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, was won by Mr. McDermid for the third time. It now becomes his own property. Mr. Moody won sp. for runner-up. Mr. Rollo won runner-up for best young Canary cup with a good Scots Fancy. The show was well patronised.

RUNCORN B.B.A.

Held on Dec. 18, in a large, well-lighted school room, the profits of the show being banded over to the local St. John Ambulance. A large number of admission tickets were sold, and other support was secured by this enterprising body. Although some of the Runcorn fanciers failed to send entries, there were about 90 entries. This, for a members' show in these times, reflects the utmost credit upon those few members who so liberally sent entries. The classes for Yorkshires contained many birds of high merit, and competition was close and keen. Norwich were not so numerous as usual here, but several high class typical birds were shown. Norwich greens were of good average merit. A number of special prizes were given for points, and all exhibitors in rotation according to points had their pick in turn. A very good idea. So many specials were collected that they would about go three times round—that is, three specials per member. Mr. Rone, the bon. sec., is an enthusiast, and does not work for selfish motives, but for the fancy and fanciers generally, and he does his work well, and tries hard to have everything in good order. Mr. Chas. Houston judged, and members were well pleased.

YORKS. YELL. CK. EDINBURGH C.B.S.

Fifth annual show, Tynecastle Hall, Nov. 21. Over 520 birds were staged. Although down in numbers from last year, quality was all that could be desired. The Norwich Section had some good birds, and the judge had his work cut out to separate them. The hall is one of the finest in the city, being well lit up from the roof. The judges were: Mr. Nor. and Crests, Mr. A. M. Gardner; Bord., Mr. Wm. McAdam; Mr. G. C. T. Hope, Scotch Fancy, and Mr. C. Sykes, Brit. and Mules. Their awards gave general satisfaction.

NORTHERN Y.C.C.

Show, Dec. 4, at the King Edward Hotel, Newcastle. The entries totalled 105, a considerable decrease on last year's show, no doubt owing to a large number of our members having joined the colours. The two outstanding birds in the show were Mr. Jas. Stewart's unfluffed buff cock, winner of the club's challenge cup for best unfluffed bird, and Mr. R. Tindall's unfluffed buff, winner of Hamilton's challenge cup for second best bird in the show. Mr. K. Clegg, of Dewsbury, judged.

BRIDLINGTON & DRIFFIELD C.B.S.
Annual open show, in the Assembly Rooms, Dec. 3, with 150 entries, in 16 classes, which, considering the bad times the society has been going through lately owing to most of the members joining the Forces, was not a bad entry. The room is an ideal one for a cage bird show, and, being well lighted by electricity, and heated, was very comfortable. Mr. Brown filled the post of show manager, and had everything well at his finger-ends, assisted by Messrs. Dixon, Glasby, Hermon, Cross, Mallison, Pressey, Clayton, and Smith. Judging started in good time. Norwich and Yorkshires came up well in numbers, and some really good birds were to be found in most of the classes. British were there in good numbers, and some nice birds were amongst them. Messrs. Brown and Pressey won the Dixon Trophy for most points in the show. Mr. Glasby being runner-up. The rate was good, considering the wet day, and there were several claims would help to make the show a success. Mr. F. I. Potter, of Hull, judged, and got through his work in good time, catalogues being on sale directly after. Yorks. CK, etc. Yell. CK (5): 1, Watts, grand pos. and type, good length and col.; 2, vhc, c, Glasby, good pos. and feather, smaller than winner; 3, 4, hc, Dixon, good head and shape, rather rough underneath; Buff (7): 1, Watts, good head, splendid type and pos., well drawn; 2, Cross, good shape and size, fails in feather to 1st; 3, hc, c, Dixon, nice length and pos., fails in head to leaders; 4, vhc, Glasby, Unflig. Yell. (7): 1, Cross, grand type and qual., good head, stands up well; 2, Watts, nice length of side, but hardly the qual.; 3, Cross, good head and col., too short behind; vhc, Glasby; hc, c, Dixon. Buff (7): 1, Watts, nice head, good length and pos., feather like wax; 2, hc, c, Cross, good shape and head, open in front; 3, 4, Dixon, varieg., fails in head. Yell. or Buff, HEN (9): 1, Watts, a beauty, yell., good head, capital feather and style, wins; 2, 3, hc, Glasby, cap mtd. buff, not the size and style of leader, but a good hen; 3rd, yell., not the cond.; 4, c, Dixon; vhc, Cross. Unflig. HEN (6): 1, Watts, a grand yell., good head and pos., qual. of the best, stands well up; 2, 4, Dixon, yell., good length and style, a little open in breast; vhc, hc, c, Glasby. Nor., Yell. CK (9): 1, Brown and Pressey, good size and col., nice head, lovely type; 2, 4, Hermon, almost equal to 1st, but slipped claw; 3, c, Glasby, nice bird, shade smaller; hc, Clayton and Smith. Buff (9): 1, 2, 3, vhc, Brown and Pressey, clear leading, good shape, nice level col., grand head; 2nd, not the pos. of winner, nor the col.; 3rd, wing mtd. nice shape, fails in head; 4, Clayton and Smith; hc, c, Dixon. Yell. Unflig. (6): 1, 2, 4, hc, Brown and Pressey, cl. Darlington winner, a topper, grand head, shape, and col., nice short wings and tail; 2nd, equal in all but head, a nice bird; 3, Glasby, not the size or col. of winners. Buff (11): 1, 2, 3, Brown and Pressey, good head and col., nice type, short flights and tail; 2, smaller, and not the head of 1st; 3rd, fails head not the subs.; 4, hc, Gibson; c, Dixon. HEN (11): 1, 3, vhc, hc, Brown and Pressey, var. yell., a topper, grand head and shape, a true Norwich; 2, Mrs. Lyon, another good hen, hardly the head of winner; 4, Glasby; c, Hermon. Unflig. HEN (11): 1, 3, 4, vhc, Brown and Pressey, yell., good head, short wings and tail, good col.; 3rd, foul green, grand shape, fails a little in head; 2, Clayton and Smith; cl. buff, a very bonny hen, grand qual., hardly the size; hc, Dixon; c, Hermon. Nov., Members (10): 1, 2, Brown; 3, Ainsworth; 4, vhc, c, Mrs. Lyon.

PAISLEY O.A.

Held the cage bird section of their 62nd annual show, Jan. 1, in the Scouts' Hall, Paisley. This old-established fixture, like many more, has suffered from the ravages of the War. The Drill Hall, their usual resort, being commandeered by military authorities, has left them little option but to hold the different section shows on different dates. Thus we find, instead of the great display that usually greets one at Paisley, that matters have to be dealt with in a more limited fashion. Entries did not quite come up to expectations. However, with their saving clause, and an entry of over 300, we hope they may pull off on the right side of the dyke. The secretarial duties are still carried on by Mr. J. Sinclair, who is ably assisted in the work by a strong and willing band of workers: Mr. J. Taylor, president; vice-pres., Mr. J. Gemmell; committee Messrs. J. Raeside, Robertson, McIntyre, R. Raeside, W. Paton, Ritchie, J. Paton, Cowan, Cunningham, Thomson, Potts; J. Wright, collector. The judges were: For Scots Fanciers, Messrs. Baird, Hannay, Ferguson, and McLachlan; Norwich Section, A. Watson; Border Fancy Section, J. Craig; Mr. A. Livingstone, Paisley, disposed of the Mules, British, and Foreign Sections. In few instances did we hear much adverse criticism. The work was got through in good time, and the show thrown open at an early hour. Sales were poor, and few, compared with previous years, but it seemed as if a good gate was to be realised. Following is list of awards:

SCOTS FANCY SECTION.—This fascinating breed we were pleased to see so well represented here, as is generally the case at Paisley. YELL. CK. CL. OR FOUL (5): 1. sp. 2. 4. FORFAR P.P. & C.B.S.

Annual show, Jan. 1 and 3, and despite the war there was a fair turnout of cage birds. The society has an excellent management, as follows: President, Mr. Ernest Grant; Vice-Pres., Messrs. D. Duncan, W. Warden, J. Fyfe, and J. Duncan, along with an energetic committee. Norwich, though not strong in numbers, contained some birds of exceptional merit. Mr. Grewar having some really good specimens forward. Borders were better patronised. There was also a fair turnout of British. Mr. Fyfe, as usual, having a good team. Judge, Mr. Gentleman, of Avonbridge.

NOR. CL. OR TKD. YELL. CK. (2): 1. Grewar, good one, fine head, thick-set body, short wings and tail; 2. J. CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Annual show held Dec. 4 in the Workmen's Club. Unfortunately the weather conditions could not have been worse. As usual, about 100 birds were staged, which was considered quite satisfactory in view of the number of exhibitors. The exhibits all through were a fine lot, and included a few well-known winners. Some real good birds were amongst the Canaries. British were very good, especially the Bullfinches. Foreign, although few were an attractive lot. Cup and medal for most points went to Mr. G. W. Charlton, with 55 points, he having a very good team of Borders out; 2nd, teapot, Mr. M. Simpson, 49; 3rd, R. Johnson, 45; 4th, Geo. Barkess, 44; 5th, S. Dodds, 32. One of our oldest fanciers, Mr. Geo. Barkess, was unable to be present owing to ill-health; all wish him a speedy recovery. Mr. Wm. Curry, the well-known Bullfinch exhibitor, and Mr. Wm. Tomlinson, judged and gave every satisfaction.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

- (1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.
- (2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.
- (3)—Queries intended for different specialists must be written on separate sheets of paper.
- (4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions or advertisements, or any other matter for publication.
- (5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.
- (6)—Queries received during one week, up to the first post on Saturday morning, will be answered in the issue bearing date of Saturday in the following week.
- (7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).
- (8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London).
- (9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

H.M. and H.O.C.—Replied to by post.
CANARY WITH SWELLING (Dudor).—Sorry I failed to "spot" your first reply; but it is impossible to remember the details of all weeks afterwards, hence the necessity for giving a clear reference to former replies. I would advise you to keep the bird from now until it is time to mate up in spring in the largest flight you have available, and treat as follows for several weeks. Give the same staple diet of summer rape as advised before, with just a pinch of canary on top of it daily. In addition, give separately twice a week a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts white millet, niger, teazle and maw. Give a fair amount of green salad, such as watercress, as long as you can get it in a fit condition for use, and at other times give instead a morsel of sweet apple or boiled carrot. In the drinking water add every second day for a week ten drops of lemon juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence; and in the following week should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ransden's "Colour-feeding" (3d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

give every second day instead in each, two tablespoonfuls of water, a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, ditto of sulphate of iron, half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. In the third week give only pure water, and afterwards go back and repeat the course in the same order until the bird has had three or four courses. You might also keep a cube of hard common salt stuck in the wires for the bird to peck at now and again for a few weeks.

NOT REARING YOUNG (P.M.E.).—Yes, I agree with you. It is rather hard luck when a beginner fails to rear any of the young which his hens seem to bring forth without any trouble. But I cannot, with only the few particulars you give in your letter, put my finger on the probable cause in your case. Get the forthcoming annual when ready, wherein you will doubtless find something just to the point, which may enable you to clear up the matter yourself and help you to avoid it in the coming season. Meantime, digest well the contents of the book which has been sent you, especially with regard to the treatment of the birds during the winter and early spring, and follow its advice as to mating and subsequent management, and I do not think you should find much difficulty in rearing the young this season. If any point is not clear to you, or should there arise any particular difficulty which you fail to find dealt with in the book, then write at once and give full particulars, and I shall be very pleased to be of assistance to you.

CHEWING FEATHERS (S. H.).—First of all well examine the cage, probing any suspicious crack or joint with a pin on to a sheet of white paper, to see if you can discover any red mites, and if you do, take the necessary steps to eradicate them. Keep it in a bright and healthy position, not overheated, nor yet quite cold, and see that it is quite free from sudden extremes of temperature and draughts. Continue the present staple diet, and in addition give twice a week separately, half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, and broken groats: on two other days give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and four of sherry well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on each of the remaining days give a morsel of watercress, if obtainable in good condition, or otherwise a morsel of banana, sweet apple, or boiled carrot. In the drinking water add four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week or fortnight, as may appear necessary. Do not worry about the color of the inside of its beak; it is quite normal.

MATE FOR YORKSHIRE (J.C., Constant Reader).—(1) If there has not been any recent introduction of Belgian blood into the stock your bird comes from, you could not do better than mate him with a quarter-bred Belgian hen, selecting one with a little prominence of shoulder as you can get, and as well up on the leg as possible. From this introduction you would undoubtedly get a good improvement in length of leg, and at the same time add to the style, or "swagger" of the birds. (2) You may possibly get a very suitable bird of the type you need for about 15/- or thereabouts, but as the actual price must depend upon the vendor and what he considers the value of the bird to himself, it is, of course, impossible to name any definite price.

A TRIPLET (Drake).—(1) Keep all three birds in question in a bright and healthy position, and choose the coolest part of the room. You need not overheat them, but see that they are free from sudden extremes of heat and cold and draughts. In addition to the staple seed diet, give every second day for a fortnight half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give either a morsel of banana, sweet apple, watercress (only if obtainable in good condition), or boiled carrot, and on these days add to the drinking water four drops each of oxymel of squills, ipsecauanha wine, tincture of lobelia, and sweet spirits of nitre. Unless the bird quite recovers from this trouble before the breeding season commences, it would certainly be very inadvisable to use it for stock. (2) Give this bird a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and otherwise feed it the same as No. 1, except that instead of giving the sponge cake, substitute a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, and then sprinkled with soft sugar. Keep a cube of hard common salt stuck in the wires for a week or two for it to peck at when it likes, and in the drinking water add every second day for a week a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea and six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and after this four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. (3) Diet this bird the same as No. 1, and in the water add for three consecutive days ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. After this give instead in each two tablespoonfuls of water for drinking, a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, ditto of sulphate of iron, half as big, and six drops of dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. You must see that all the birds are not exposed to the effect of the damp walls you name.

EFFECT OF STRAIN (Stockport).—The hen seems to be suffering from anal prolapse, which might have arisen, either from the constant strain of excessive constipation on a debilitated constitution, or from the laying of an abnormally large egg last season as you suggest; but in that case it would have been noticeable since that time. The bird will be of no further use for breeding, and the kindest thing would be to put it out of its misery. If you wish to treat it, give ten drops of lemon juice and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the water for two consecutive days, and then six drops of dilute sulphuric acid and four of tincture of opium every second day for a week. Stop all other drugs and give an ordinary seed diet with a morsel of sweet fruit or watercress, when the latter can be obtained in good condition, three or four times a week. Bathe the vent with a small dossil of wool and a warm solution of witch hazel each evening for a week or two, using a saucerful of warm water. As the trouble seems to be of old standing, it would probably be worse than useless to attempt any manipulation to return the relaxed part.

EASIEST TO BREED (A. P., A Novice).—You should make up your mind which class you want to go in for, and then address a query to each department as to which is the easiest for you to begin with. You will be wise to avoid jumbling Canaries, British, and Foreign all together if you expect any success in rearing young. In such an aviary as you describe probably two or three pairs of Budgerigars, and no other birds at all, would be the bed-rock of simplicity for successful results, with a fair degree of certainty. But on this matter, if you decide on Foreign, you should send a query to our Mr. Page. With regard to Canaries, I take it you intend allowing the birds to fly loose in the aviary. In that case, two cocks and four or five hens should give you good results; or if you really wish to retain the Finches, you might turn in five hens and one cock Canary, and allow the Goldfinch and Linnet to remain, on the chance of them, or one of them, mating up with the Canaries, when you would have a fair chance of breeding pure Canaries, and possibly one or two varieties of Mules. If you do this you must fix up eight or ten nesting sites. Borders, Norwich, or ordinary Rollers would be about the best breeds for you to experiment with, and you should stock the place only with birds which have been bred and reared under normal conditions of temperature. Then there is no reason why you should not meet with a fair amount of success.

ROLLER QUERIES (A Beginner).—(1) A schoolmaster is a term applied to a Roller of good singing abilities, which is employed for teaching young Rollers to sing an educated type of song. (2) Hartz, Seifert, British, etc., are all terms applied to one and the same breed—the Roller—and are of no material value at all in the great majority of cases. (3) Glucke and Water-Glucke are terms used to describe a certain song tour which some Rollers are taught to sing. A bird with a good variety of different tours would be the most satisfactory to you. (4) Yes, a Roller cock bred in 1915 will be quite ready to breed himself this coming April.

A SEXTETTE (Upkerry).—(1) It is impossible to tell what will be the ultimate result of the cage falling with the bird. Individuals vary tremendously in the way they are affected by these sudden shocks. I have known birds that were previously excellent singers live for years after, apparently in the best of health, and never utter a note of song, and I have known others singing furiously five minutes afterwards. Between these extremes practically every kind of variation may be found. Bathe the foot for a few minutes daily for a day or two in warm water, then dry and rub on a drop or two of whisky, or any stimulating lotion. If he appears in good health and condition there is no reason why you should not mate him for breeding this year. (2) Sorry, but it is quite impossible to give all particulars about breeding and rearing young in this column. The usual seed diet is continued just as usual, the egg foods and all extra foods for the young are given in a separate vessel, and it is not necessary nor advisable to soak the seeds in water. Beyond this let me refer you to "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our manager will send you, post free, for 7d., wherein you will find all details on every point. (3) You will also find careful directions how to distinguish the sex of Canaries in the handbook named above. Experience and close observation are the only means by which one can hope to become expert at sexing Canaries. The song is the best guide. If it is full, defiant, and given in an unbroken strain, with much inflation of the throat and perceptible throbbing as the notes are produced, the bird is tolerably certain to prove a cock. (4) A shrewd guess may be made at the sex before the young leave the nest, but guesswork is not knowledge. (5) The reverse cross would be better for certain reasons, which you will find discussed in our forthcoming "Annual." (6) It is quite admissible to mate a buff Yorkshire cock with a buff Yorkshire hen now and again, and if not overdone the result will be advantageous to the quality of the birds rather than otherwise. For this purpose select birds of good average size, slim, and with close, boxy plumage. The tendency is towards increasing substance and coarseness of feather.

DEVELOPED FRILLS (Frill on Chest).—Possibly it is a natural defect in the plumage, the birds having slightly too profuse feather, but not so bad but that it can be hidden for a time by skillful washing, or, if the recent moult was the first adult moult, it might have only appeared since the plumage has become fully developed. If this is the case, only the necessary skill in hand-washing will remove the frills temporarily, and the birds should be mated with close, boxy-feathered, and clean-thighed birds to breed it out of the progeny. If the fault is only slight you would find double-buffing some of those affected produce good results, provided they have not previously been double-buffed. On the other hand, it may be that the birds have only gone a little soft in condition, and in that case the following treatment should quickly set matters right. Offer the bath early in the day on every bright, mild day, and in addition to the staple seed diet give every second day for a week or so half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the intervening days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and broken groats, and keep a morsel of raw carrot stuck in the wires for it to peck at, renewing it as often as required for a week or two. Dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give 20 drops of this in the drinking water two days in every three until the birds are in good hard condition.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

FEEDING THE WILD BIRDS (W. B. P.).—One of the best ways of feeding the most interesting of the wild birds that frequent the garden, is to construct what is termed a "bird table." This is made like a small table with legs about six inches from the ground, the legs being continued above so as to project above the table level, and a piece of string tied from one to the other, and so all round. The object of this is to prevent the sparrows getting all the choice pieces. They are afraid of the string and will not go on the table, whereas Robins, Thrushes, etc., are not so suspicious. A little soaked chicken meal, or dog biscuit, with potatoes and scraps from the table makes capital food, also a handful of mixed seeds for the Finches. For the Tits suspend a lump of fat and a half coconut to a branch of a tree. This can be placed as near to your window as you can get it. You will then have the pleasure of watching their movements.

BREEDING BLACKBIRD-THRUSH HYBRIDS (J. Rawland).—The cross between the Blackbird and Thrush has lately been produced by a breeder in the North, but he mated his birds the opposite way to yours, although I should think it was quite immaterial which way one tried, as long as the hen bird was young and quite steady. As regards your should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Tufted," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Mould British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

other cross, I think both birds should be hand-reared, as the Mistle is inclined to be wild and very secretive during nesting time. I do not think you will succeed with the aviaries so close to each other, unless the hens are both of the same species. A cock bird in one aviary and a hen of the same species in another would be certain to upset each other and prevent them taking to their appointed partners. Place a bundle of furze or rough boughs at the end of each aviary, and fasten a couple of old nests in each in the most suitable positions, hidden some way from observers.

LINNET NOT SINGING (Novice).—Your bird is sulking and put out by the new arrival. Your best plan is to remove the other one out of hearing, and after a time bring him back a little way, gradually getting him nearer. (2) It is too early yet to think of breeding with them—March will be quite early enough. It is not much use attempting to do anything with Linnets until they are quite fit, that is, in full song, with a nice dark bluish beak. You should take advantage of the next two months to let them get used to their partners, or they will be afraid of each other when first introduced. As regards feeding, you had better continue with your present treatment, and next month commence to give them just a little extra hemp seed and a spoonful of wild seed mixture occasionally. As soon as the dandelions begin to grow, give them a fresh young leaf, and the seedling flower head when ready. Have our Nutshell booklet on the Linnet?

TREATMENT OF SKYLARK (Constant Reader).—You omitted to send us your name and address; perhaps you will forward it on a postcard. The Skylark is not a difficult bird to keep in confinement, but if not properly fed and treated is disappointing as a songster. His food should be good and nutritious, but not too stimulating, or he sometimes gets very wild. I think I cannot do better than advise you to get our Nutshell Booklet No. 3 on this bird. It tells you how to mix your own food, hand-rear young ones, how to keep the birds in health, and other useful information. All the best dealt with much more fully than I am able to do in these short replies. I am glad to hear you are fond of birds and like our paper. If you are in trouble with them at any time and need advice I shall be pleased to assist you.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

NEWLY-PURCHASED BUDGERIGAR (C. B.). You have done quite right to keep this bird caged separately and away from your other birds, and you must do so till it is in good form again. Give two drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak so as to clear the bowels of all impurities, and continue the use of the chemical food daily till the bird is quite fit. Keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging alongside the perch, where the bird can easily get at it, and also give a small piece of sweet apple twice a week while the winter months last. Keep the bird in a warmish part of the kitchen, yet where the temperature is as even as possible, also where it will get light and air, and yet be free from draught. Hang a millet spray in the cage; this may induce more activity on the bird's part in picking out the seeds, as they are very fond of spray millet. The spray should be suspended from the top of the cage, so that the bird must cling to it while picking out the seeds. The cage tray or cage bottom must be cleansed daily while the looseness lasts. Dry earth will answer for covering the cage tray, with a light sprinkling of gritty sand on top of same.

WHYDAH (P. & Co.).—(1) The Paradise Whydah is widely distributed over Northern, Eastern, and South-Western Africa. (2) They are free breeders in captivity; only isolated successes have occurred so far, but they should breed in an aviary containing a small pond, surrounded by reeds and sailow bushes, say on three of its sides. They are fairly hardy, but sometimes succumb during cold wet winters, as they go out of colour (moult) during our winter. (3) They are best purchased when out of colour, say, May and June. (4) They usually come into colour about July or August in this country, and the process may occupy a month or more.

PARROT WITH FITS (E. E. C.).—The fact that the fits are decreasing in severity is a good sign. Repeat the treatment for another four or five weeks, and then again report. So long as there is a slight improvement, either in severity or frequency, it is a hopeful sign. The bird had been suffering from the attacks for some weeks before you wrote, therefore there can only be gradual abatement. If the bird is suffering from worms there is sure to be should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 14 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Aracacats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Ekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." evidence of same in its droppings sooner or later. I must emphasize the need of your keeping the bowel moving quite freely. If the bird will not eat the oats it does not matter much, as though very wholesome, they are not absolutely necessary. I do not think, unless the bird is wasting, that there is any cause for anxiety at present, and if the improvement is only slight and very gradual, so long as there is no permanent going back, you cannot expect much more. Later it may mend more rapidly. Keep the bird in some well-ventilated position, but there must be no draught, and I should also be inclined to have a thin board made to cover up the top of the cage—a square, or circular board, with a slot in the centre to slip over the ring and boss is all that is required. It would help the bird not to be able to see anything to attract its attention when it looks up. If there should be any relapse write again at once.

BREEDING BUDGERIGARS (Betty).—Procuring it a mate and the consequent duties of incubation might check the continuous laying. That is all I can suggest as a check. If it continues, instances of egg binding will become more and more frequent, and she will succumb to one of them. Perhaps if you repeat your query and give me full details of cage, and how they have been fed and treated generally, I could give you a more helpful reply. I should, however, if it were mine, painlessly destroy it, as a bird with paralysed feet cannot enjoy life, and I should not consider it of any use as a stock bird for breeding purposes, and I really consider that the better and kinder course to take with it. The young hen should be ready for breeding this year, but you should give her as a mate a male that is not related to her at all. If, sentimentally, you wish to keep the bird with paralysed feet, then keep her in a cage by herself, where she can nestle comfortably in one corner of the cage and not be disturbed by her own kind. She should, in fact, be out of their sight (and hearing if possible), so as to still productive instincts as far as possible. There should be no husk in her cage. I must repeat that I do not consider a bird in this state of any use for breeding. For stock purposes use only perfect birds—perfect as to health, plumage, limbs, and all faculties. You must do this if you wish to breed birds worth the food they eat.

MEDICINES.

MY Medicines for all kinds cage birds and all domestic pets, as used by all leading English and American circuses, 1/6 bottle: Powell, Canine and Feline Specialist, Northcote House, Woodville-rd., Cardiff. (151)

WANTED A TRIAL

We are confident our medicines will give you perfect satisfaction, and if they fail we will return every penny paid or send another bottle FREE. DITCHFIELD'S BIRD MEDICINES have been proved to be the most reliable on the market, and therefore we ask if you have any birds suffering from the complaints undermentioned to give our medicines a fair trial.

BRONCHITIS

DITCHFIELD'S SPECIAL LUNG TONIC is the finest medicine ever introduced for birds with Bronchitis, Colds, Wheezing, Hoarseness, and all Chest and Lung Affections. A pleasant, safe remedy that can be given with absolute confidence to the most delicate or valuable bird.

NOT SINGING

DITCHFIELD'S TONIC DROPS for Soft Mount, Slow Mount, Not Singing, Going Light, Feather Plucking, and Inflammation of the Bowels. The Ideal Tonic for all birds during the moulting season. A trial order will convince you of the wonderful results obtained from this medicine.

DELICATE BIRDS

DITCHFIELD'S FAMOUS REVIVO for constitutional weakness and debility. A wonderful pick-me-up for weak and delicate birds. Also for birds before and after showing. Give a small dose before showing and you will be surprised at the result.

SPECIAL NOTICE

If you have any birds you are relying upon for the coming breeding season that are not singing or have just gone into soft moult, we guarantee you a perfect cure. DITCHFIELD'S TONIC DROPS and DITCHFIELD'S FAMOUS REVIVO given on alternate days will bring any bird into breeding condition unless same has got a cold, then we advise you to try our SPECIAL LUNG TONIC. These medicines are invaluable for birds just before the breeding season.

DIARRHŒA

All fanciers who have any birds that suffer from Diarrhœa or are now suffering from the above complaint we ask you to give DITCHFIELD'S DIARRHŒA POWDER a trial. It is safe and effective, and gives instant relief for all classes of cage birds.

All the above remedies are sold in 8d., 1/2, and 2/- bottles; two 8d. bottles for 1/2, three for 1/3; two 1/2 bottles for 1/11, three for 2/8; and are sent away per return of post same day as received, from:

FRANK DITCHFIELD, Bird Specialist, Oldham.

FRED ALLEN, BRITISH BIRD CHAMPION

I am still going strong with the largest stock in the North. I have on view a fine collection of African Grey Parrots, all talking and whistling, at 60/-, 70/-, 80/- each; they are the talk of the town; also the largest stock of Siskins ever seen, big fine yellow cocks with good deep bib, well laced, gems, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each, and a lot of good ones, but with damaged tails, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6 each. What a record! Mr. Johnson, 17, William-st., Whickham, writes: Siskin has won 1st Newcastle, 1st Hartlepool, 1st Blaydon, 2nd Halthwaite, 1st Choppwell, etc.; let me know if you have another. Mr. Carr, of Choppwell won 2nd Scottish National with one of my Siskins. I know what is wanted. Monster cock Bullfinches, with double rich colour, real gems, ready to win, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, and one, a real stormer, 10/6. Hen Bullfinches, real giants, like Siberians, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6. Goldfinches, real gems, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, 10/6. Norwich type cock Linnets, grand colour, real gems, well pencilled and steady as rocks, 2/6 each, and one, extra good, 3/6; giant yellow cock Greenfinches, real monsters, 2/6 each. Gem of a Redpoll, ready to win, 2/6. Rock Mynahs, talking and whistling louder than any Thrush, 15/6, 20/-, 25/- each. I hold the world's record for mules. I have 3 good few pairs, well matched and ready for the breeding season. Cock Linnet and Canary, 5/6; cock Greenfinch and Bullfinch, 5/6; cock Siskin and Greenfinch, 5/6; cock Siskin and Goldfinch, 7/6; cock Goldfinch and Bullfinch, 7/6; cock Siskin and Bullfinch, 7/6; cock Linnet and Greenfinch, 5/6; cock Redpoll and Greenfinch, 5/6. Also several other good pairs. I have a nice hen Bullfinch, specially picked for breeding, a gem, 5/6. Very good Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid, 7/6. Now you Linnet singers, I am the man for satisfaction. I know every class of singing in the world, so if you want a good Linnet place yourself in my hands. I have a few of my champions for sale, birds that have won hundreds of prizes for myself and Harry Allen, the original Linnet King; they are mad proud, and can win anywhere, 10/6, 12/6, 15/6, 20/-; also a grand lot of youngsters, singing day and night, taught under above, including my undefeated champion cup winner, price 2/6, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6 each. Cages 1/- each. Linnet and cage, trained for catching, 2/6 lot. Cock Linnets, good kitchen songsters, 1/-, 1/6, 2/- each. Cock Bullfinch, good call bird, 2/6. A fine lot of cock Greenfinches, right for aviary, 6d. and 1/- each. Linnet Mule, pure Linnet song and can win in good class, 15/6; another, 10/6. Goldfinch Mule on Linnet song, 10/6. Light Goldie Mule 15/6. Hawfinches and Waxwings expected shortly, orders booked. Linnet whistles 6d., post free. Mr. Robson, of Glasgow, says they are grand. Every whistle is tried before sent out. Have you seen birds sing at one another? If not, try a bag of my Secret Mixture, 1/3, post free; it acts like magic; hundreds of testimonials. Cock Blackbird, hand reared, wonderful songster, 10/6. Roller Canaries, not common choppers, real schoolmasters, 10/6, 12/6, 15/6, 20/- each. Large muling hen Canaries, 2/6, 3/- each. Over £100 worth of Dog Collars from 6d., state size. Write at once, please, you will not regret it. All on approval. Travelling boxes, 2d. each. Bankers, London City and Midland: Fred Allen, England's Leading Specialist, 156, Porter St. Aviaries, Hull. NEW CROSS C.B.S.

The Annual General Meeting was held at Lee Green, Jan. 6, Mr. F. Childers in the chair. Balance-sheet showed a balance on the right side of £1 11s. 6d., which was considered very satisfactory, and a hearty vote of thanks was passed to all concerned. All officers were re-elected. Programme for 1916 was postponed to the next meeting. The annual pair show will be held on Feb. 3, at the Salisbury, Clock Tower, Lewisham. No schedules sent out but entries will be taken on the night of the show. We hope all members will help to make the show a success by bringing as many entries as possible.—Burton Bros., Hon. Secs.

BACUP ROLLER C.C.

Annual meeting, Park Hotel, Jan. 4. Four new members were elected. It was also decided to support Mr. Bests in organising a Control Board for the B.R.C.C. and the oneering question. Final arrangements were made for Members' Show on Jan. 15. Mr. Oldroyd, of Wakefield, was appointed as judge. The following officials were elected: President, Mr. Elze; Committee, C. Bradley, J. Camps, H. Jobson, G. Johnson, H. Nuttall; Chairman, G. Wantling; Vice-Chairman, J. Melbush; Treas., M. J. T. Johnson; Sec., H. Wantling, 5, Parramatta-st., Rawtenstall, Manchester. Any Roller fancier wishing to join may do so by writing to the Sec. or attending any meeting on the first Tuesday in each month at the Park Hotel. This is the cheapest Roller C.C. in the country; entrance fee, 6d. subscription, 2/6.—H. Wantling, Sec.

SWANSEA C.B.A.

Meeting Jan. 8, Mr. Dalton presiding. Decided to hold Pair Show on Jan. 29, birds to be staged at 4.30, judging to commence 5 sharp. Classification: Nor., Yorks., Bord., Green, Bord. Cinn., 2 classes each; Yell. Cock and Buff Hen, and vice versa, Hybrids and Mules 1 class each, Can. Bulli., Goldf., Bulli., A.O.V. between two Brit. birds, Goldf., Linnit, Siskins, Greenf., A.O.V. Mule. Entrance fee, 6d. per cage; judge Mr. T. Holbrow, Mules; Canary judge to be selected at next meeting on 21st. We trust to elect officers for season at next meeting. In connection with the Pair Show there will be a judging competition for which an entry fee of 3d. will be charged, and prizes given as follows: 3s. 6d., 2s. 6d., and 1s. 6d. Any local fancier desirous of joining should apply to either the assist. sec, Mr. D. P. Rees, or myself.—Alf Hitching, Hon. Sec.

LAISTERDYKE, BOWLING AND TONG (Combination).

General meeting, Jan. 10, Barley Mow Hotel, Bowling, for election of officers and other business, including rules, etc., of shows, next competition, prizes, and specials. Meeting was adjourned at a late hour till the show day, Jan. 22, at the Barley Mow. Judging at 3. Officers for year: Pres., Mr. B. Cowell; Vice-Pres., Messrs. Uttley and Co., W. Boldy, E. Murray, A. Holmes, J. W. Baker, W. H. Symes, L. C. Casey, L. Hodgson, Messrs. Hammond's Brewery, Ltd.; Committee, all members; Chair, C. Atkinson; Sec., J. E. Hudson, 12, Crawford Street, Bowling, Bradford; Asst. Sec., G. Hodgson, jun. Any member, upon payment of 9d. per year, can be a full member of the Combination. Intending members please pay as early as possible. J. E. Hudson, Hon. Sec.

LANCS. AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting, Newmarket Hotel, Manchester, Dec. 18. Decided to accept Mrs. Burgess's, Bristol, generous offer of a £3 3s. challenge cup to be competed for each year at one show, to be decided upon, and awarded to the best Lizard in show bred that season, and the bona-fide property of the exhibitor, a medal to be given to each winner until any one wins it three times, when it becomes his own property. Unanimously agreed that secretary write thanking the donor. A discussion ensued in regard to holding a club show, but, owing to small attendance, it was decided we leave matter over until meeting at Oldham, when, it was hoped, we would have a bigger attendance. At Oldham, Dec. 9, we had quite one of the best attendances, and best meetings, for a long time. Decided to hold a club show at Volunteer Inn, George Street, Oldham, Jan. 29 and 30. Six classes for Lancashires, 10 Lizards, and 4 Nov. Lizards, a 15s. Selling, and two open classes, A.V. Can. and A.V. British, members of L. and L.F.A. not to compete in open classes. Prizes will be 10/-, 5/-, 2/6, for 1/- entry fee, half prize money if less than eight entries. There will be a 2/6 spl. best bird in these two classes. Mr. Clark, the genial landlord, is giving a handsome spl. for most entries; Mr. Hampshire 2/6 second most entries; the society a spl. most entries in Novice classes, Mr. John Hamer 2/6 best Lizard, Mr. Barker Clegg 2/6 best Lancashire copy; other specials being given by Messrs. Clark, Stanfield, F. Hamer, T. Millington, G. Fliton, W. Hardy, W. Moorby, two 2/6 spls., and J. Rukin. This is a complete answer to the critics as to whether our society is trying to keep the breed going—23 spls. in 23 classes. Entries close Jan. 24, and must be sent along with fees to me. Mr. Robert Barras was appointed judge, and, failing his acceptance, two other popular judges were nominated. It is hoped to open the show at two o'clock on the first day. I shall be pleased to receive specials from any member not present, to be allotted as desired, or left to be given to special section, one for best novice or best Lancashire, for instance. I will send particulars of open classes on receipt of postcard.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec., 44, Hall Carr Road, Rawtenstall, Lancs.

LLANELLY.

Annual show of the Llanelly C.B.S., Jan. 11. Entries were splendid, over 700 exhibits being staged, the show proving the second largest in point of entries that this society has held—a well-deserved tribute to the plucky fanciers of Llanelly who ran their show on the same lines as in former years, and did not safeguard themselves behind the sliding scale. Everything worked smoothly thanks to the able management of Messrs. T. J. Gregory and Tom Jenkins, now old hands at the game, who were assisted by a hardworking committee in Messrs. H. Evans, W. J. Harry, T. J. Gregory, jun., D. R. Jones, Harry Gregory, Ben Evans, W. H. Reynolds, Sam Jones, D. J. Thomas, Sam Lewis, T. Jenkins, H. Webster, E. Teague, E. Cole, D. Saunders, J. Davies, A. McDonnell, G. Thomas, W. Hoskin, R. Anfield, D. F. Davies, Danl. John, E. Owens, W. D. Davies, W. E. Lewis, D. J. Crawford, Geo. Evans, W. Davies, and Jos. Owen. The Sec., Mr. D. H. Davies, although new to the position, had everything well in hand and proved a really worthy successor to our old friend, Mr. Danl. John, whom we were pleased to see at the show much improved in health. Amongst the many visitors present we noticed Mr. Parlett, who had accompanied his well-known team of birds all the way from Sheffield. The classes throughout were well filled, most of the noted cracks putting in an appearance, and competition was very keen. Yorks were good in qual, though we should like to have seen them more numerous. Borders were the finest collection yet seen at this show and produced keen competition, the judge having a difficult task in separating the winners. The novice Bord. classes brought 50 entries in three classes, the first four in each of the classes being really good exhibits that could have held their own in the open section. Mr. J. Robson judged Canaries, and Mr. Houlton Mules and British.

In Hybrids and British birds, most of the very best teams in the land were on view. The competition in the Hybrids was keen all through, but here and there a good one was not quite in the best of feather and so paid the penalty: "White Rose" was not at its best, as it still showed signs of not having quite got over a soft moult. Britishers were excellent, 54 in two classes H.M. and F.M. Goldfinches, and a lot of good ones; indeed, there were no real weeds in the lot. 57 Bullfinches, cocks and hens, in H.M. and F.M. classes, and such a high-class lot wanted a lot of getting together. Linnets were of fine standard quality, and Greenfinches were very good. Other British classes contained a splendid lot of exhibits, and this may be counted one of the best collections of the season in South Wales, good as others have undoubtedly been. It is horse work for the officials to so very ably and successfully conduct a one-day show of such magnitude. All the birds in the show were staged on tables, 4ft. 6in. high, and not a single cage was staged on the top of any other. The Market Hall is large enough to stage 3,000 birds comfortably and the light is good all over. Everything possible was done for the comfort and care of the exhibits, and the birds were out of the hall in a little over an hour after the show closed.

Twitterings.

The annual feed and prize distribution in connection with the Leigh C.B.S., writes Mr.
 R. Charleson, sec., will be held Jan. 29, at 5. Members and friends wishing to be present must give their names in not later than Jan. 26.

Kindly thank all exhibitors and the members who so kindly helped to make our show a great success, writes Mr. A. Sutcliffe, sec.
 Halifax C.B.S. Also the King's Cross band and harmonic parties who entertained the visitors to our show with good effect.

I have taken up the duties of secretary to Stoke-on-Trent C.B.A., vice Mr. Pitchford, who did not seek re-election at our annual meeting, writes Mr. J. Glover, 10, Brook Street, Stoke-on-Trent, and all communications should now be addressed accordingly.

I would like to inform my fancier friends, writes Sergt. J. Forster, Darlington, that through pressure of duty I am obliged to give up exhibiting, and am disposing of the whole of my stock, show cages, etc. I have come to this decision after a long and careful consideration, but I shall still take an interest in the fancy, and if I can at any time oblige any fancier I shall be pleased. I shall still keep in touch with CAGE BIRDS.

Mr. A. Thomson, sec. of Larkhall Red Cross show, writes that the awards in class 56 were accidentally duplicated in the catalogue, and appeared again in class 65. The correct awards in class 65 were 1st, No. 6; 2nd, 5; 3rd, 10; 4th, 12; 5th, 9; 6th, 2.

The many customers of Mr. H. Watson, for ten years a regular advertiser of British Birds in CAGE BIRDS, will regret to hear that, after having served his country in the trenches and obtaining his discharge, he has had the misfortune to break his leg in two places, and will not be able to do any further catching this season.

Owing to business pressure, writes Mr. E.
 Norton, I have had to relinquish the secretaryship of the Leeds C.B.S., and I thank all members and friends who have helped me so willingly during my term of office. I hope they will give my successor, Mr. J. Chambers, 22, St. Ann's Mt., Burley Hill, Leeds, to whom all communications must now be addressed, the same support which they have extended to me.

I beg to thank you and your artist for the life-like portrait of my buff cock on CAGE BIRDS' front page, Jan. 8, writes Mr. G.
 Notley, Bedford. The success I have had with my birds is entirely due to CAGE BIRDS and the drawings of your artist. Owing to a long illness which laid me aside for several years I should have been completely in the dark had it not been for CAGE BIRDS, but through perseverance I have crept well to the front under the most unfavourable conditions.

Mems for Canary Owners.

If green food is scarce, owing to the season, sow the waste seed from the bottom of the cage in a little moist earth in a box.

Place the box in a warm cupboard or sunny window, and you will soon have a plentiful supply of "salad" for your bird.

Boiled summer rape also makes a good substitute. Allow a teaspoonful per bird twice a week.

Put it into cold water, bring to boiling point, boil for ten minutes, drain in a sieve, and rub dry with a towel.

Boiled rape must not be allowed to get sour; remove at the end of the day any that is left.

If your bird sleeps during the day, red mite may be suspected; these rob him of his nightly rest, and he must sleep somewhere.

In such case dissolve an ounce of camphor in half a pint of methylated spirit, and with the solution paint all perch ends and any crevices which may be the hiding places of the parasites.

Also place a piece of soft cloth over the cage top at night, scald this in the morning, and dry for use again. This simple trap will soon clear off the red mite if consistently used.

A White Skylark.

At the recent show of the Chester-le-Street
 C.B.S., a pure white Skylark was exhibited by Mr. S. Lindsay. We believe the bird was reared from the nest by the exhibitor.

We have received the report and balance-sheet of the Reading C.B.S. Although the balance in hand at bank has been reduced by nearly £5, the report shows several satisfactory items. The membership continues to increase, and the annual show was quite a success. The hon. sec. is Mr. O. C. Smith, 73, Andley Street, Reading.

"British Birds for January," Messrs.
 Witherby, High Holborn, one shilling, opens with an account by Lord Rothschild of the work of the late Henry Eeles Dresser, the great ornithologist, who died on Nov. 2 last at the age of seventy-seven years. The name of Mr. Dresser will for ever be famous through his monumental works, Birds of Europe and Eggs of the Birds of Europe. The issue contains some additions to the list of British birds, and the usual "Notes," which are of great interest.

It was with great pleasure I saw the sketch of my Grizzle Crest on the front page of CAGE BIRDS, Jan. 1, writes Mr. C. Poulton, and I must say it does your artist great credit. The bird has only been shown twice, namely, at the City and Suburban A.C.B. annual shows.
 It won second last year, and first this year. I wish a Prosperous New Year to CAGE BIRDS, of which I have been a reader for many years;
 I have gained a lot of useful information from it, and I thank you for the honour bestowed on me.

Ten Shillings
For Your Thoughts.

The head-line to our front page this week will carry the thoughts of many of our readers back to their early days in the hobby of pet bird-keeping. If they will put these thoughts into writing they will be helping those who would follow in their footsteps, and, incidentally, they may win a prize of ten shillings, for we shall award this amount to the most helpful article received by Tuesday morning next, Jan.
 25. It may deal with the keeping or breeding either of Canaries, Hybrids, British Birds, or Foreign Birds.
 Envelopes should be endorsed "Beginner," and addressed to the Editor, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. We reserve the right to publish any essay sent in, and the Editor's decision as to the winning essay must be accepted as final.

OBITUARY.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. S.
 Hawksley, treas. Mansfield C.B.S., I have to announce the death of our secretary's mother, Mrs. Jane Gabbitass, wife of Mr. John Gabbitass, of Mansfield, at the age of 65 years.
 Mr. J. Gabbitass has been a fancier for over 45 years, and I am sure fanciers of Mansfield and district will extend their heartfelt sympathy toward the relatives of the deceased in their sad bereavement.

I regret to inform you, writes Mr. C.
 Bailey, Hon. Sec. Altrincham Open C.B.S., of the sad loss sustained by one of the members, Mr. P. Drinkwater, in the death of his wife. Mrs. Drinkwater herself was a Border fancier and an exhibitor, but for some years she has suffered ill-health. Many fanciers will be acquainted with Mr. Drinkwater, as he was a sec. of the late Altrincham C.B.S., and all will join with us in tendering him sincere sympathy in his sad bereavement.

The original drawings of our front page
 illustrations, and of most other pictures appearing on our pages, may be purchased by readers for framing. Terms for any picture will be sent on application.

Prize Money Paid.

We are informed that prize-money has been paid in respect of the following shows; if any winners have been overlooked, they should apply to the respective secretaries:—
 Llanelly and Glasgow Red Cross.

Why Not Imprisonment?

For leaving unattended for nearly a week two caged Linnets and a Greenfinch, with the result that the birds died of starvation, Mrs. Annie Tapscott, of Wilfrid Street, S.W., was, on Dec. 30, at Westminster, fined £4.

Money in Norwich Canaries.

We hear that many of the Norwich at Glasgow Red Cross show changed hands at catalogue prices, £10 and upwards. One buyer alone claimed £52 worth of birds, and we wish him good fortune over his plucky purchases.

A Tale and a Tail.

According to a local newspaper "Jacob,"
 the talking Macaw exhibited at the Glasgow Red Cross Show, is able to say the Lord's Prayer backwards. The same paper says that there was at the show a Whydah "the size of your thumb, and with a tail three feet long." Some tail, indeed.

After Nineteen Years.

In the Avicultural Magazine for January,
 Dr. Butler relates the escape of a Diamond Dove which had been in his birdroom for nineteen years. This bird was one of a pair purchased by Dr. Butler in 1896, and was therefore at least twenty years old.

Corrections in Glasgow Report.

Mr. M. B. Wallace, owner of 1st prize Goldfinch at Glasgow Red Cross Show, writes to say that the words, "3rd Ayr, etc.," used by our reporter are incorrect. The winner of 3rd at Ayr was disqualified, as stated in our report of that show, and we regret the mistake which Mr. Wallace has written to correct. Mr. Wallace's fine Goldfinch won at Glasgow the special for best British Bird, a fact which was not known to our reporter when the report was sent. Mr.
 Heggie, hon. sec., writes that 1 and 3 in the A.O.V. Canary class should read Mrs.
 Burgess, not Rakin, as in catalogue, and in our report.

The British Fanciers' Opportunity.

In opening the Red Cross show at Glasgow, at which there was a grand entry of 1,300 birds, Sir John Ure Primrose, after referring to the object of the show, which was the endowment of a bed in one of the Red Cross hospitals, said that the rearing of song birds was an industry which might well be developed in this country. The Germans had grasped the possibilities of profit-making in the training of cage birds, and no less than £20,000 worth of song birds were imported to this country from Germany every year, while at least twice as much was sent to America. At the end of the war there would no doubt be a large number of men incapacitated from their regular work, and in the rearing of song birds they would find not only congenial but very gratifying employment.

A Novel Way of Breeding Canaries

By J. WOOD (Dearnley).

Showing how Canaries may be bred among a mixed collection of birds in an out-door aviary.

THOSE who have an outdoor aviary, in which they keep, perhaps, a mixed collection of British and foreign birds, and who may have thought at times of adding a few Canaries for the sake of variety, but have been doubtful as to whether they would stand the climate, may be interested to hear my experiences of Canaries kept in an out-door aviary in Scotland during the past four summers.

I bought a buff Border fancy cock and two yellow hens in the autumn of 1911, and put them in cages inside the house attached to my aviary. Here it was evidently too cold for them, for I found the cock dead the following morning, so I brought the hens indoors and bought two more cocks. I kept them in a heated greenhouse during the winter, and paired them up in spring.

By the beginning of May it was getting too hot for the birds in the greenhouse during the day, when the sun was shining, so I put the cages into the aviary, and after a day or two in their new quarters I opened the doors of the cages and let the birds fly about. This did not interfere in any way with the breeding operations; the hens came off the nests at times, had a feed and a fly round, and then went back, quite contented, to their eggs or young ones.

At first I was careful to keep a little seed, water, and egg food in the cages, and also outside in the aviary, but as soon as the birds got used to going outside for their food I stopped putting any into the cages. The seed I supplied in three-hole self-filling hoppers, holding a pound or so in each—canary in one, summer rape in another, and a smaller one for hemp, and egg food I gave in a deep china dish. The first two seasons I made it with hard boiled eggs, using both the white and yolk, and bread-crumbs, the same as I had been in the habit of making when I bred Borders in the usual way in cages some years previously, but latterly I changed to dried yolk of egg, which seemed to answer the purpose just about as well, though the birds are not quite so fond of it.

Keeping my birds in this way, they did not give so much trouble as in cages, nor did they take up so much of my time in the mornings. I caged them all up, young and old, in the autumn, and kept them in the greenhouse over the winter. The young ones were wild when first caged, and it was some time before they became quite steady.

I continued in this manner during the following seasons, introducing fresh blood when required, and disposing of my surplus birds to avoid overcrowding. I always paired up suitable birds together in cages, and had the hens sitting on eggs or young before I let them loose in the aviary; this prevented indiscriminate breeding, as the birds remained faithful to their mates for the whole season.

Of course, odd hens mated with one of the already paired cocks, but that did not much matter, for naturally I took care to pair up my best hens. Some of the birds formed curious attachments; for instance, two hens insisted on sharing the same nests all through one season, laying, sitting, and rearing their young together in quite a friendly way.

It is advisable to have plenty of nests to prevent the birds quarrelling for possession of them. The second nests do not require to be in the cages, but can be fixed to the walls or in any odd corners. The birds will usually prefer those that are highest up. I used to fix up earthenware nest pans, felt nests in platforms, small boxes, old cages, etc., and supplied the birds with plenty of moss, which I washed before giving to them, and a few feathers when available, and they soon made excellent nests for themselves, building them of moss and dried stalks of greenstuff, and lined inside with feathers, the down from groundsel and thistles, or cotton wool. I found that those birds, bred in the aviary for a couple of generations, built better nests than the original cage bred ones.

I found that I had to be cautious about interfering with the young ones in any way, once they had their eyes open and were partly feathered, for if I touched them in order to remove a dead one, or even just looked at them sometimes, they would jump out of the nest, and it was impossible to get them to stay in it after that. They were too young and weak to get back to the nest again, so were apt to die of cold or hunger on the ground, even if they escaped injuring themselves when falling down. To prevent losses of this sort, I prefer the nests to be inside cages or boxes of some sort.

I found that a cold snap in the breeding season, especially about the end of May, was very dangerous to the cocks; it carried them off in a few hours with bronchial pneumonia—a bird might be singing in the morning and dead by the evening. The hens were not affected in the same way. Once or twice a bird got jammed between the back of a cage or box and the wall of the house, so cages should either be fixed right up against the wall, or a brick or something of the sort placed between.

The birds were always given plenty of water for bathing, and armfuls daily of greenstuff, such as groundsel, chickweed, rats' tails, dandelions, and other sorts of weeds, especially when seeding or flowering. When Canaries are given abundance of this class of food they only eat the seeds and flowers, leaving the green leaves practically untouched; this forms a natural food for all birds, and my Canaries fed their young largely on this diet, and they thrived well on it, and did not suffer from diarrhoea, as some fanciers might imagine.

From my birds kept in this way I derived considerable pleasure, with the minimum of trouble. It was a pretty sight to see perhaps twenty Canaries all flying about together in the sunshine, or perching among the natural branches, while the cocks were singing their sweetest. Visitors, too, were attracted by the birds, and often remarked how much happier they seemed than those in cages.

Is it Cruel to Ring Wild Birds?

Writing to the "Yorkshire Post" against the marking of wild birds with rings, Mr. R. Fortune says: "In my address to the Yorkshire Naturalists' Union, I said that a certain number of cases had been brought to my notice where birds living on clayey land had suffered cruelly through these rings. Mud or clay had got on to the rings and underneath, had hardened, and had caused wounds and sores to form, which had eventually caused the leg to canker and the bird to die. Two cases of Lapwings dying in this manner have come under my own notice. I have heard of a Partridge suffering in a similar manner. Another case I may mention is that of a Linnet. Some shreds of wool had caught in the ring on the bird's leg. The wool then caught in a branch of gorse; the bird was held fast, and could not escape, the result being that it died a lingering death, and was found hanging head downwards near its nest. When we know how very seldom indeed it is that a dead bird is found, we can only conclude, with even the few examples I have mentioned as an illustration, that it is quite possible for hundreds of birds to suffer in a similar manner."

The Fancy Very Much Alive.

Allow me space to thank all who replied to my advert., writes Mr. F. Stothard, Darlington. I had replies from all parts of England, Scotland, and Wales, and sold all the British in record time. The Hawfinch was claimed by first post Saturday morning. I have done a good deal of business through CAGE BIRDS, but this is the record for Christmas time. 27 applicants with a single advert. proves not only the value of CAGE BIRDS as an advertising medium, but also that the Fancy in general is very much alive, and that fanciers are doing their utmost to keep the old flag flying. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

The Old and the New.

By Jas. Rogerson (Ashton-in-Makerfield)

Chaffinch-Canary Hybrids reputed to be possible more than seventy years ago.

WHILE looking through my great-grandfather's books I came across one named the "Bird Fancier," and I thought there might be something in it that would interest your readers. It is a book published in 1842 by Henry Mozley, of Derby, and I think a few points very interesting, especially as there has been during the last few months a controversy regarding past and present methods of bird culture.

In CAGE BIRDS of Jan. 8, in the Questions and Answers column I noticed a reply to a question regarding the Canary-Chaffinch Hybrid, in which it says this is the cross we are all looking for. This is from my book: "Mules may be produced by pairing the male of another species with a hen Canary. By this means great beauty and variety of colours is produced. An old male is better, and it is necessary he should have been brought up from the nest. When from the Citril Finch, Siskin (two birds inhabiting the South of Europe) and Goldfinch, they are finer and handsomer than from the Canaries, they sing louder and longer, but are difficult to teach, and whistle imperfectly. The Mules, except from the Citril, are generally barren. They seldom breed with the Goldfinch after they are four years old, but are as fruitful till then as with their own species. When paired with the Linnet, it is seldom there is more than one breed in the year, but the produce will breed, though not with certainty, either among themselves or with the Canary or Goldfinch. They may also be obtained, but with greater difficulty, by pairing with the Chaffinch, Yellowhammer, Bullfinch, or Sparrow. It is said that from these crosses there are always more males than females. A hen without a crest is better, as this is no ornament to the large head of a Mule. The young ones must be brought up the same as young Canaries."

Bechstein's "Universal Pastes."

The author also says:—"The following paste, as a general food for all kinds of birds, is recommended by Bechstein in his excellent treatise on cage birds. Take a loaf of well-baked stale white bread; put it again into the oven and leave it till it is cold; then pound into a mortar, and if it is good flour it will keep for two or three months; every morning take a teaspoonful for each bird, and pour on it three times as much milk, luke-warm or cold. This makes a nourishing paste that will keep long without being sour or sticky; if mixed with some insects or chopped worms it will be fit for the most delicate birds, and will keep them in life and health."

These two he calls "universal" pastes, and says they are excellent where numbers are kept together. (1) "Take a white loaf, well baked and stale, soak well through with water, squeeze it and pour boiled milk over it; add about two-thirds of wheat or barley meal, and make it into a paste." (2) "Grate a carrot finely, soak a small white loaf in fresh water, squeeze it, and mix both together in a mortar with two handfuls of barley or wheat flour. These should be fresh every morning, as they soon get sour."

Ancient Canary Wisdom.

"The more simple and natural the food for Canaries the better. There is nothing which is found to agree with them better than rapeseed; for the sake of variety, a little oatmeal and millet, bruised hemp or canary, or poppy-seed, especially for those which are intended for breeding, may be added. Give some of the latter a mixture of egg, bread, maw seed and scalded rapeseed with their other food. They also require a constant supply of green meat, groundsel and chickweed in the spring, plaitain, lettuce, or radish leaves in the summer, and endive, watercress or slices of apple in the winter."

On another occasion I shall be glad to write further extracts on the birds, their food, and the old-time treatment of ills, for I think a comparison between new and old methods of keeping a subject of interest to all bird-lovers.

In our advertising columns recently a lady was asking for three dozen freshly-killed House Sparrows weekly. Are these wanted for "Lark pie," or is it a tame Owl that want five Sparrows a day? Anyway, the countryside can easily spare the Sparrows.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

THE GREAT JOINT LONDON SHOW.

What are "Louvain Whites"?

We hear from Mr. Silver that there has been a great application for schedules of the show to be held at Holborn Hall Feb. 23. Among the Foreign birds will be seen some especially rare and beautiful species; and there will be White Canaries, both of British and Belgian nationality; the latter are known as "Louvain Whites." The list of special runs to the large number of 180, about 60 in each section, and one of these is for the best Thrush-Blackbird Hybrid. There are nearly 70 classes for Canaries, about 30 Foreign, 20 British, and 8 Hybrids. The feeding of the Foreign birds will be in the capable hands of the Hon. Mrs. Bourke and Mrs. Thynne. Schedules will be sent on application to Mr. Allen Silver, F.Z.S., 7, Bampton Road, Forest Hill, S.E.

Correspondence.

On Sending Birds by Rail.

SIR,—As we recall the good that must have been done by the innumerable helpful hints, lectures and advice which have appeared in our paper, CAGE BIRDS, we cannot but be moved to say we are extremely indebted to you, and the least we can do is to say "Thank you." The wish that you may have a Happy and Prosperous New Year in return for your good service to the Cage Bird Fancy can but exist in the heart of every reader of CAGE BIRDS.

That the doings of all fanciers, with any useful hints that may appear to them worth recording, will as ever be acceptable to you for publication goes without saying, and if an abler writer than your humble can pass a few hints upon the despatch of live birds, I am convinced that some cases of suffering by our pets whilst travelling to new owners will be avoided.

From Scotland a few days ago I received a chocolate box about 2in. deep, containing three Norwich Canaries, not a scrap of food or moisture apparently having been provided by senders. For all my innumerable despatches and receipt of live birds, even to and from Ireland and the extreme North of Scotland, I do not recollect anything to equal such a case as the one which prompts me to ask for your assistance in this direction, namely, "Instructions to despatchers of live stock." For example, picture a young enthusiast who is recommended to try an advert in CAGE BIRDS in order to dispose of some of his surplus, and his predicament when a few depositors request birds on approval. He, maybe, has never sent a bird by rail before in his life, and this is where my hint applies. I feel sure these few remarks will meet not only with your approval, but with a response that will prevent any future discomfort to our travelling pets.

DESPATCHINGS.

An All-British Bird Show.

SIR,—Further to Mr. Cockerill's letter, I am quite willing to run an open show in Liverpool for British and Foreign birds only, that is if I can get the support of the British Bird enthusiasts. First of all, let it be understood that all profits shall go to charity. I am in negotiation for the best hall in Liverpool, and I am fixing the dates for June 10 and 12, Whit Saturday and Whit Monday. These dates will give every fancier a chance of attending the show.

This, I think, is the first venture of its kind to be attempted in England (I am open to correction). So let the British Bird men rally round me. There will be classes for novices and a liberal classification. Seeing it is to be a charity show, I appeal to any fancier to guarantee the class he is interested in. I want no amalgamation if possible, so here is a chance for all to help a little. I am willing to give all my time to making it a success. Anyone who has run a show knows the amount of work there is, so I think I am quite in order in asking British Bird men to help the show by guaranteeing classes. I shall be pleased to receive suggestions of any kind, also specials in galore. Mr. V. H. Deacon, of Liverpool, has promised £1 ls. in cash to the exhibitor who sends most entries.

Now for the judges. I will leave this to the exhibitors. Any exhibitor may nominate whom he likes, the judge who receives most votes to be appointed. I shall reserve the right to appoint one judge, if he will officiate, that is Mr. Chas. Houlton, St. Helen's, who has helped us along so well in the past. Now fanciers, don't be afraid, let me have your opinions, through CAGE BIRDS, or by letter.

J. W. METCALFE.

Colour in the Norwich Plain-head.

Its Origin and Importance.

SIR,—It's a pleasure to let Mr. Williams know how I bred my winning yellow cock, which I don't call "extra" good in colour, neither am I a worshipper of the last and least to be considered factor in the making up of a good Norwich Plainhead. Its father was a thigh ticked yellow of good all-round properties, whilst its mother was a short, thick-set clear buff bred from my saddle-marked yellow hen that produced the cup winner at our last Plymouth show.

As regards the use of Cinnamon or the Lizard as a cross, I know little about either, but I know a fancier whose stock, about twelve years ago one of the best in the West of England, was absolutely spoiled by the introduction of the Cinnamon, and I think Mr. Gill will bear me out in this respect. As regards the Lizard, I should say it was a move in the wrong direction.

You may go on and on advising, covering the same ground time after time, and yet the proportion of winners or even uniform stock bred year by year is very disappointing. I find many fanciers cannot take telling, and should you attempt to point out faults in their stock they get ruffled. If a person were to call me a fool I should ask him why, and if he convinced me, I should thank him for it. The only sure way to success is to have birds properly mated, and there is more in this than meets the eye.

I don't like to see people repeatedly laying out money and making no progress, neither is it certain that the pairing of two show birds is the right thing to do, for they may have the same failing, and such will be so apparent in the progeny that in the course of time you can spot them on the show bench as belonging to Mr. So-and-So. Keep up size by mating up the biggest for stock only, and breed typical hens from good-shaped and clean-cut mothers; then mate the big cocks to your home-bred hens which have a fair percentage of "green blood" running through their veins. That's how I breed my winners.

W. SPILLMAN.

SIR,—I am sorry to see that my attempt to get Mr. Allsopp to disclose his knowledge of the origin of colour in the Norwich Plainhead has got no further than to make him admit that in no manner has he made a definite statement.

What he wrote, therefore, was the outcome of a fertile imagination having for its origin certain "globular markings" he had seen on "Norwich" Plainheads. He does not know how they got there, but assumes from certain similarities they must have been obtained from the Lizard. He apparently does not wish to blend the Lizard with his Norwich, bearing in mind this variety has for some years past been of a "mongrel" character, so he tempts others to try their luck. Further, his statement is put forward merely as circumstantial, and he "gladly throws it into my lap." What a generous spirit! Let him keep it, and work out his own salvation. What I have said about green-marked birds I can prove, because I, with others, know the value of the suggested mating.

His statements as to one of your contributors "lifting his elbow" and as to me being "fair game" do not assist the discussion, but I trust they have given him satisfaction.

As Mr. Allsopp knows nothing "definite" about colour, I wonder if he remembers that in writing about size nearly a year ago he said that stock cocks carrying Lancashire and Crest-bred blood were used in some rooms with success, and again tempting the beginners who were looking to this corner for practical help with the statement "I understand the first cross of the Crest with the Lancashire produces youngsters in which no effect of the cross is apparent, so with the Norwich and Lancashire, or Crest-bred, for many such change hands each year as good Plainheads, even though first crosses." He also stated, "It is no secret, however, when one realises how close has been the attention Crest breeders have paid to the breeding of short-beaked Crests and Crest-breds of late years. If the Crest-bred has brought so much heart-burning, please credit it with some good." I would consider it worth my while to take advantage of the Crest-bred cross if for this reason alone. Perhaps Mr. Allsopp will tell us whether he has used these crosses either before or since he made those statements, and, if not, why not? Does he think that the Lancashire-cum-Norwich on page 14 of this week's CAGE BIRDS would do good in his room? Now please, don't tell us that you made no definite statement, or that the views then given were based on circumstantial evidence. These red-herrings have been in pickle too long to tempt any but the vaguest tyro. We don't want to know what was done years ago when the Plainhead was in the making, but let him tell us what he is doing now. Come, Mr. Allsopp, actions speak louder than words, and a little practice is worth more than a whole heap of theoretical philosophy. Mr. Sanders, "Yellow Green," and myself have told you how we get colour without going to the Lizard. Now empty out your stocking and let us see what there is in it; peradventure it is like a schoolboy's pocket.

FRANK COLE.

SIR,—I am pleased to hear that someone was interested in Mr. Allsopp's letter, and I am sorry "Yellow Green" thinks my criticism was in anything but a friendly spirit. I am sure it is far from my thoughts to be in any way unfriendly. My only object in tackling Mr. Allsopp's letter was to put him right where I knew he was wrong, and Mr. Allsopp admits he may be wrong in his reply to Mr. Cole. When a man writes for publication he lays himself open to criticism. I am sure that nothing Mr. Allsopp or "Yellow Green" can say will put me out, and as long as one keeps to the point, the birds, I shall enjoy a good argument. But after the way Mr. Allsopp treated "Novice" in his articles of a season or so ago, he ought to be the last person to squeal when he gets his corns trodden on. Mr. Allsopp knows my motto is "Help the novice and encourage the Fancy," and I shall be pleased to help Mr. Allsopp in any way. I am sure the man who becomes a successful fancier has to have the patience of two Jobs, and the luck of Old Nick. I have known scores who have puzzled their brains to produce something fit to look at, and have struggled on season after season without success. They become really down-hearted, and feel like giving up in despair, when by a lucky chance they find they have mated a pair of birds up that hit, and have produced something above the ordinary. All their old enthusiasm is lighted up when they are enabled to place on the bench a bird or two that will hold their own amongst the best, and when a fancier has reached this stage he seldom turns back. Now what can be done to help the beginner to reach this pinnacle?

J. BASTOCK.

Specials at Chester Show.

SIR,—I have not yet seen a report on the novice section for the Southern Border F.C. at Chester, at which I was an exhibitor, and although I have a catalogue, it does not state who won the three specials offered in the schedule. I should be very glad if the sec. would say, through your valuable paper, who won the three specials and who had most points in the novice section.

S.B.F.C. NOVICE.

A Homing Budgerigar.

SIR,—Having read in your interesting paper, CAGE BIRDS at various times of the homing instincts of birds, I thought it might interest you to know that I sold a young green Budgie to a gentleman about a quarter of a mile away from my outside aviary, and he came about a week after to say it had escaped out of the bird room window, and asked if I would sell him another. On taking him out to the garden to select another, there was the escaped bird running about on top of the open flight/trying to get in to the others. I trapped it and returned it to him no worse after being at liberty two days. Wishing CAGE BIRDS every success, and looking forward for your Annual.

Proposed New Society for South Shields.

SIR,—We intend holding a meeting on Jan. 26, at 7.30, at Mr. Hunt's shop, Ocean Road, and we give a hearty invitation to all who would like to attend. Those not able to attend the meeting are invited to write to

J. W. WATSON,

75, Leighton Street.

Congratulations.

SIR,—Hearty congratulations on your excellent Birthday Number; it is full of interesting matter from page 1 to 24. The Cage Bird Fancy ought to be grateful to have such a medium devoted entirely to their hobby. I should like to mention how pleased I was to see my article on Budgerigars standing first in the Essay Competition (Foreign Section). It is indeed an honour to be thus mentioned in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. At some future time, with your permission, I will write you an article on a few of my experiences during twenty-eight years as a fancier.

W. LIDGETT, hon. sec. Norwich C.B.S.

[We are sure that Mr. Lidgett's account of his experiences would be of interest and value to our readers, and we should be glad of the opportunity of publishing them.—EDITOR, CAGE BIRDS.]

The Proposed Federation of Roller Societies.

A Scheme Outlined.

SIR,—In connection with the recent proposal of the Leeds Roller Club for the federation of all the Roller societies, it is now ascertained that we have been waiting for some one to open the matter for discussion (with your kind permission) in your columns. At a meeting of the Andley R.C.C. held Jan. 15 the matter received a favourable reception. The club would welcome a scheme that would have for its object the federating of every society in the kingdom, the protection of its members, and loyalty to the "parent society," the British Roller C.C.

Whilst at Birmingham show I had a chat with Mr. Hill, of the Birmingham Club, Mr. Kishaw (Bolton), and Mr. Willows (the Midland), and ascertained that the personal opinion of each of these gentlemen was federation, with loyalty to the B.R.C.C. That's good, for they hold prominent positions in their respective societies.

I wrote in CAGE BIRDS' Annual for 1916 that I had a scheme of federation whereby every member of a recognised society would become part and parcel of the B.R.C.C. Briefly outlined, it is to call a meeting of representatives of the different societies. (Such has now been convened by the Provincial club, to be held in Manchester on Feb. 5, but as the B.R.C.C. show and general meeting, or an informal meeting, would be held on that date, will it not be advisable to postpone the Manchester meeting until Feb. 12? This would allow all desirous the opportunity of attending and placing the matter before the B.R.C.C. meeting for discussion previous to attending the Manchester meeting.) Each federated society to become a branch of the B.R.C.C., but to manage its own local affairs, as at present. Each to have a distinguishing title, say, the Leeds branch of the B.R.C.C., and to raise the yearly subscription to provide a levy payable yearly to the London society. This levy, together with the profits realised from rings, would be utilised in providing special prizes to be given at each federated club's open show, also to meet any deficiency that may arise in the working expenses of the London club.

It is feasible that such deficiency may arise, as under federation every member of a federated club would enjoy the privileges now enjoyed by members of the B.R.C.C., and many of us would then sever our membership, so that it would lose our 3s. 6d. yearly subscription. Such resignations would deplete the yearly revenue of the B.R.C.C. The amount could be arrived at if, after the first meeting, in the event of federation being decided upon, each present member who is so desirous send in his resignation to the B.R.C.C. The secretaries of federated clubs shall send to the London club the number of their members. It would then not be a difficult matter to fix a levy upon each member to make up any deficiency that may arise through the depletion of the B.R.C.C. membership. No member to be levied who continues his membership of the London club. An annual meeting of the federated clubs to be held in some selected centre, and each club to have option of sending one or more delegates, according to the number of its membership. The situation of the following year's annual meeting to be fixed by the delegates. One ring to suffice throughout the federated clubs, and alterations to judging standard only to be made at the annual meetings.

I appeal to all in the Roller hobby to do their utmost to help to cement the present threatened split amongst us, for there is nothing to prevent each club, as we now stand, from having a ring of our own if we are desirous of doing so. The larger the number of clubs having a ring of their own, the less competition, and it is unnecessary for me to explain what the ultimate result would be.

There is no doubt that the above briefly outlined scheme of federating can and will be improved upon, and such a course of action would be welcomed, but there is absolutely no necessity for us to waste our time in discussing the "little storms" that have led up to this threatened split. Let us form a bond of unity, and join in the spirit of "each for all and all for each."

Catching Mice in a Bird-room.

SIR,—Can anyone mention a certain lure for these to get mice into the traps? Cheese and burnt oatmeal they seem to have no time for, and I am afraid of them getting into the cages presently!

J. WADSWORTH.

A Yellow Yorkshire Lost at Aberaman Show.

SIR,—On reading CAGE BIRDS this week I was pleased to find that Mr. Powell had come out of his shell. As to his answering any straightforward question I might put to him, I am of opinion that my question was a bit too straight. On his own admissions in his letter this week, I blame him for the lost bird. He admits that he packed the birds at 9.50 on Thursday evening, and that they were not sent off until Friday afternoon by the 3.49 train. Had it not been for Mr. Davies (show manager) turning up at 2.30, I suppose the remains of the other birds would still be at Aberaman. According to Mr. Powell's own statement, the birds were packed up eighteen hours before they were sent off from the show, and the only excuse he tenders is a hitch with the railway company, as they wanted to charge 3d. per hamper for collecting.

Why did he wait for Mr. Davies to call on him, knowing that he was ill in bed up till that time? Surely he or Mr. Thomas, his partner, could have gone to the station, as it is not more than three minutes' walk from where the show was held. Besides, the 3d. charge should have been paid by the exhibitors, not the Society, and if he had paid the 3d., instead of detaining the birds, he could have deducted same from prize money.

As to my second question, my informant was in his shop on Christmas morning when he made the statement, so he knows perfectly well who I mean without mentioning names. With regard to his being a sport, better known to other people than to me, I will make him a sporting offer for £2. He shall select three members of his Society known to me, and I will pick the same number from Cardiff personally known to him. A meeting can be arranged, his own club room preferred, and all his members may attend. I will then prove all I have said, and more. Providing he gets the best of the argument, I will divide the money between the societies represented, after deducting what little expense is incurred. Should I have the best of the argument, then Mr. Powell to pay.

There are several items on the agenda yet to be settled, and until these differences have been adjusted I fail to see how he can seriously hope that his society has come to stay.

J. O'LEARY.

[We have a letter also from Mr. W. Davies, the show manager, which is in too personal a strain for publication in full. He says, in short, that Mr. Powell did not go near the show on the Friday, that those who packed the birds were Mr. W. Thomas, the treasurer, and one or two of the members, and that Mr. Powell refused to assist in getting the birds to the station.—Editor CAGE BIRDS.]

Is the British Bird Fancy Worth Catering For?

Mr. Frostick is More Optimistic.

SIR,—I am hoping to be able to reply in the affirmative to my own query, as the response to my appeal for help for our great joint members' show at the Holborn Hall on the 2nd and 3rd Feb., has so far been excellent. I am very grateful for the encouraging letters I have received from members; it stimulates one to make greater efforts. I am delighted to report that the large numbers of classes provided (31) for British Birds and Hybrids will have no less than 50 valuable special prizes in addition to the prize-money—2s. 6d. for best bird in each class, 10s. 6d. for the rarest Hybrid, 5s. for Thrush-Blackbird Hybrid, 7s. 6d. most points insectivorous classes, five championship diplomas, bound volumes, show cages, five silver medals, two bronze medals, silver plates, many cash specials. Schedules will be posted this week.

The British Bird Fancy is on its trial, for never before has such an opportunity offered itself even at an open show, much less a members'. We are looking forward to a record show, and it now rests with the members to push on the good work by making every possible entry. We want every single member of the club to consider that he is responsible in some way for the success of our venture, and if he will only take his part success is assured.

Ever Seen a Waxwing's Nest?

The lately deceased ornithologist, Henry Eeles Dresser, the celebrated author of "Birds of Europe" and "Eggs of the Birds of Europe," discovered, as long ago as 1858, a breeding place of the Waxwing on an island in the Baltic Sea, and took a nest. In a short biography of Mr. Dresser in the December issue of British Birds, Lord Rothschild says that probably to this day no other Englishman has done so.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Deswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is bristling of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/6, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc. Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1, "Hardbills," and Part 2, "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-keeping easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert judge; (associate editors, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos, with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A.

Show held Dec. 8, headquarters, 2, Cheapside, Brighton. Owing to the war the society this year decided not to hold an open event, but content themselves with members' classes, and considering this limitation the entry was a good one. The quality was excellent, and the competition close. The show was divided into two sections—champion and novice, and in each the exhibits were a credit to all concerned. There were 22 Yorkshires in two classes, and 14 Norwich classes. The Mules, as usual at this beautiful seaside resort, were excellent, and the British birds a grand display, here was a long list of specials, including three silver cups. These were won as follows: Cup, medal, and diploma for best 1915 (closed lung) Canary, Mr. Pearson; silver cup, medal, and diploma for best 1915 Mule or Hybrid, Mr. H. James, with a lovely Siskin-Canary Mule. A life honour for the best British bird was won by Mr. James, with a most beautiful Greenfinch. Best in Canary section was awarded to Mr. P. Black for a beautiful feathered, grandly fed, rare type varieg. Norwich plainhead. Mr. James' Greenfinch also won spl. for best British bird in show, and Mr. S. Smith for the best Mule. The other special winners were: Messrs. James (3), Black (4), H. T. Gibb (3), Firth, Williams, Smith (2), Loomes, Mrs. H. T. Gibb. Points specials were won by Messrs. Gibb, James, Smith and Black. Mr. W. H. Gibb ably officiated as hon. sec., and it was a pleasure to observe how his efforts were backed up by the officials generally. Mr. G. Gardner judged. YORKS. CHAMP. (9): 1, spl, 3, vhc, Gibb, leader lengthly, well-modelled yell. of rare stand, leg, and action; 2, cup, hc, c, Pearson, equally stylish buff, hardly so much of him, but very smart. YORKS. NOV. (13): 1, hc, spl, Williams, upstanding buff, not quite finished yet, but very full of style; 2, res. for cup, vhc, c, Fisher, very neat, not quite the taper or length of leader; 3, Fellows, var. buff, just a wee bit open at chest, else beautiful feather, nice style and length. NOR. CHAMP. (13): a good class, hard to separate after the winner: 1, 4 spls, 2, Black, the var. bird already referred to, and a chubby short-winged and tailed saddle mkd. buff, hardly so well boxed up as winner, but a grand stamp; 3, c, spl, Gibb, a bonny thick-set yell. green; vhc, hc, Absolon. NOR. NOV.: 1, Black, grizzle capped buff, rare body and feather, a trifle weak in head. A.O.V. CAN. (9): 1, spl, 3, Gibb, very fair buff cinn. leading; 2, Mrs. H. T. Gibb, natty little Bord. Fancy; vhc, Brown; hc, c, Upton. MULES. LIGHT (8): 1, 2 spls, 2, vhc, hc, c, Smith, grand team, charming light var. Goldie-Can. leading; 3, Brown, smart exhibit: spl, S. Loomes. MULES. DARK (9): 1, 2, cup, 3, res. cup, vhc, hc, James, a tip-top Siskin-Can. heading the list, the whole team was grand; c, Smith. GOLDF. AND BULF. (2): 1, James; 2, Brown. LINNET, &c. (5): 1, 2, vhc, hc, James, a charming and nutty-col. Linnet leading, closely followed by a little swell of a Lesser Redpoll; 3, Gibb, nicely mkd. Siskin. GREENF. &c. (8): 1, cup, 3, vhc, spl, hc, James, the winner a front-rank Greenf., 3rd a "rich-col. grandly mkd. Bramble; 2, Miss Mantell, Chaff. of rare size, wing mkg. and col. diffusion, will be better yet awhile. A.O.S. BRIT.: 1, cup, res. 2, 3, James, the 1st being a lovely Cirl Bunting, shining like glass, 2nd a charming Yellow Bunting, and 3rd a nice Redstart; vhc, Gibb. F.M. BRIT. (9): 1, spl, James, a Bullfinch, perfect blaze of col. nice poll, might be a little stonier; 2, 3, vhc, Gibb, a nice Goldie and Linnet respectively: hc, c, Miss Mantell.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING C.B.S.

Annual show, Queen's Head Inn, Nov. 27. Mr. H. Seely, Choppington, judged, and his awards gave satisfaction. The entries were short of previous years, owing to some of the members being away serving their country. The large room was well arranged, and visitors were quite numerous all day, and in the circumstances the show was highly successful.

WIGAN C.B.S.

Annual show, in the Assembly Hall, Legs o' Man Arcade, Dec. 4, when about 90 exhibits turned up. Prizes were on the 1/- sliding scale. The quality all through was quite as good as is to be expected in these times. Various exhibitors had good deal of their own way in the special varieties that were showing, but in the Novice and British sections, there was rather keener competition. Several classes, Mr. E. Ball makes a quiet and efficient secretary. The damp, cold, muggy weather made some of the Yorkshires get their backs up, and one or two had to stand down on condition of the day. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and gave satisfaction.

A.V. CK. NOR.: 1, Johnson, rather fuller and thicker set than 2, Ball, a very nice good quality bird, well up in Nor. points. HEN: 1, Johnson grand yell. hen; 2, Ball, very cobby buff, A1 bloom UNFLG., CK.: 1, 2, McAndrew, grand cobby buff, leading, both good order. HEN: 1, McAndrew, buff tick head. YELL. GN. Goldf.-Canary hybrids, in fine order.

ASTWOOD BANK C.B.S.

Cage birds had only a small classification at this show, held in the Assembly Room on Nov. 25, but a nice entry was received and some excellent birds were staged, especially in Yorkshires. The members' challenge cup was won by Mr. A. W. Austin, with a most typical variegated yellow Yorks, the same bird as the judge awarded the cup to two years ago. Mr. Austin's team were grandly shown, and took all the prizes. The birds were nicely staged, and well looked after by the committee. Messrs. Warwood and Austin again acted as secretaries, and got through their work in good style. Half the proceeds were to be given to the Soldiers' Hospital. Mr. C. A. House judged.

YORKS (19): 1, 2, 3, res, hc, Austin, hot lovely slim yell. varieg., fine head and neck, rare wings and tail, beautifully tapered, and full of style; 2nd, heavily mkd. yell. lovely type and feather, hardly so smart; 3rd, long slim buff, not so good in wing carriage; 4th, good bodied yell. but opens his tail when in position. A.O.V. CAN. all Nor. (9): 1, 2, 3, 4, res, vhc, hc, c, Parker Bros., hot, nice cobby full-chested sound coloured yell., capital head; 2nd, rare qual. yell., not quite so stout, but even better qual. of feather; 3rd, good shapely buff, nice col. and style. BRIT SMALL (5): 1, 3, Robinson, beautifully feathered Greenie, superb colour, splendid wings and tail, in grand form; 3rd, nicely spangled, shapely Bramble; 2, W. Parker, rich coloured buff rather small Goldie, capital shape and feather, well mkd.; 4, Austin. A.O.V. (7): 1, Robinson, very handsome Waxwing, fine shape and size, lovely col. and markings, and shown very fit; 2, Austin, nice shapely Lin-Can. Mule, well mkd., needs a bit more col. in training; 3, Mills Bros., another grandly shaped and feathered Waxwing, not quite so clear in wing bars; 4, Bennett; res, Robinson; vhc, W. Parker.

LONDONDERRY.

There are sterling and enthusiastic fanciers in the North of Ireland, but unfortunately, like others, they are fallible, and little disturbances occur from time to time to mar the harmony and good fellowship. Londonderry is, in this year of stress, struggling against the adverse influences of a split. A faithful few, however, held together, and determined that the City of Derry C.B.S. should not fail through. They decided to hold the annual show as usual, and it came off in the Union Hall, Jan. 13. What with the war and the split, the entry was not up to Derry form, still some very choice exhibits were shown, and quality was "right there," and that is what counts most. Mr. J. M. C. Knox, although new to secretarial work, made a most excellent official. Mr. W. J. G. McClelland, the president, is no mere figure-head, but a worker, and an enthusiastic one, whilst Mr. S. Hyndman, the vice-president, is also one of the right sort. In these gentlemen and Mr. Scott, the treasurer, who unfortunately was ill, the Derry fanciers have a quartet of workers whom they should support to the uttermost, and bring back to the society its past position. The other members of the committee are Messrs. S. Hyndman (vice-president), R. Paulkner, E. Fox, W. J. Gilliland, T. Platt, J. Kincaid, D. Reulstone, J. Nevin, and J. Dunlop, and a practical and hard-working executive they make. They deserved better luck than came their way. Still, "never say die." Scots, although few, were good, and Mr. Dunlop's team deserved more extended competition. Crests were indeed the section of the show, and Mr. Arthur Creighton's team alone were worth a visit to the fixture. His successes were big, but they were well deserved. More profuse feathering we have seen, but never a team combining such wonderful quality, accuracy of regulation, and perfect droop. Those four teams which won secured the admiration of all who saw them, and were quite the feature of the show. The Crest-breds also from Mr. Creighton possessed the same beautiful quality and shape. Lucky man! He secured the Crest cup easily. The Norwich Plain-heads carried our minds back many years to the time when English breeders valued type and quality above all else. Mr. Foreman, who wrestled the Norwich cup from Mr. Thompson, put down a team of gems. Colour, type, and feather, they had them all, and a fair amount of size. Smartness and neatness, and no slackness, were their characteristics. Works were hardly up to those we have seen at Irish shows, but the competition was close; Mr. Goligher's wins in the non-fed classes just landed him the cup. Mr. Creighton's well-known Mules and British continued his winning sequence, but Messrs. Kincaid and McClelland, and Mrs. Atgeo all staged some capital birds. It was a quality show. Pity it was not a quantity one too. Mr. C. A. House judged.

SCOTS, CK (3): 1, 2, 3, sp. Dunlop, massive, long eided, buff, capital head and neck, great drive, capital shoulders, brings tail well under, and moves quickly; 2nd, capital shape and style, good back and side, shorter in drive, and slower in action; 3rd, smart nery yell. green, does not get his head down quite as he should. HEN (3): 1, 2, 3, sp. Dunlop, big shapely buff, quick in action, nice length of side, capital drive, uses her tail nicely; 2nd, pied buff, grand shape and style, gets tail well under, perch, shorter in drive; 3, slashing hybrid, but soft, and would not work. CREST CK (12): 1, sp. 2, sp. Creighton, lovely oval, wing-marked, neat centre, beautiful radiation and droop, nice leafy feather, splendid droop and finish; 2nd, green, pied tail, tremendous spread and density of crest, nice centre, not so perfect in radiation; 3, sp. McClelland, stylish and nice bodied yell. green, nice centre and spread, good qual. and shape, useful; 4, sp. res., sp. vhc. e. HALIFAX.

Annual show, Jan. 8th, Liberal Club, Haugh Shaw Road, King Cross. The room is an ideal place for a show, having a splendid light and being near to the station and cars. 301 entries were staged, which is very good for the last show of the season, and quality was above the average. The unlighted classes were the strongest, as usual, and novices rolled up with a good entry. The society gave an unusual number of special for a Union show. Special winners: Dr. Craig, Messrs. Dykes, Priestley, Symes, L. Hodgson, junr., Spencer, and Maiden, Ellis, Gledhill and Blackburn, and Mitchell. The president, Mr. Sharpe, took an active part in the working of the show, and sec. Sutcliffe saw that everything went with a swing; he was ably assisted by E. Stobart. The show stewards were Messrs. Priestley, Mitchell, Saville, and Gelder, and Mr. P. Child had charge of the sales, and the way in which they all did their duty is deserving of the highest praise. The King Cross prize band was in attendance, and also the Harmonic Quartette Party, both rendering enjoyable and appropriate music. The judge, Mr. Philip Mason, seemed to give satisfaction. Prizes were paid to winners who attended the show, and the packing and sending away was got through without a hitch.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

WHAT SEEDS, ETC. (C. H.).—(1) You ought to have said under what circumstances the birds are kept. Whether the Canaries and Linnets are kept together and have access to the same seeds, and whether they are kept in cages or aviaries. As regards the Linnets, you should address a separate query to our Mr. Norman, and in doing so give the particulars named. For Canaries outdoors a staple diet of two parts Canary to one part summer rape, and in addition give separately, every second day, a small quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp and crushed bisulphite, dry, allowing about half a teaspoonful for each bird if flying loose in an aviary, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts niger, teazle, white millet, and broken groats, with just a sprinkling of linseed during spells of severe weather. Give a morsel of sweet apple or banana two or three times a week. If caged indoors give a staple of plain canary only, and separately, half a teaspoonful of egg food once or twice a week, add the hemp to the mixture and omit the crushed bisulphite and linseed, and give a similar quantity of this twice a week, with a little fruit or green salad, when the latter is available in good condition, three times a week. On the whole, you would be best advised to get copies of the Nutshell booklets on the "Canary" and "Linnets," Nos. 5 and 2, respectively, which our Manager would send you for 2d. each, post free, to should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battley's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Norman's "Colour-feeding" (3/4d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cages Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." see more details. (2) In the absence of more definite details I should say the reason a cock Canary nine months old carries feathers in his beak is to make an impression on some avine damsel, whom he desires in this birdy fashion to "name the day." Such precocity should be "rewarded" by caging him alone out of sight of the hens until a more seasonable time for such dissipations.

STOPPING HEN LAYING (H. T. E., King's Cross).—No serious trouble is likely to arise from casual laying at this season. Many unusually prolific hens are subject to it. Keep the hen on a diet of plain canary seed only for a time, and add twice a week to the drinking water a pinch of Epsom salts whilst the weather continues mild, and if convenient keep her in some place out of sight and earshot of the other birds. This will reduce the chances of laying to a minimum, but even if it does not quite stop it you need not worry about it, as it will not be likely to have any injurious effects on her results in the proper season.

SENDING BIRDS BY RAIL (X.Y.Z.).—If properly packed and despatched there is not the least difficulty, and practically no risk, in sending birds a distance of 100 miles by rail. Proper "travelling cages," as used by bird dealers, are much the best, and if there is any dealer near you there would probably not be any difficulty in buying one or two of these cages for a very few coppers, or if you could see one it would be but the matter of a few minutes to make them for yourself. For a rather large size to suit your purpose, capable of carrying three birds each, imagine a cigar box nine inches long, five inches deep, and five inches high, with the lid removed, and a strip one inch wide nailed along one side in the space. Pierce holes 3-in. apart along the top edge of this strip, and holes to correspond through the opposite side of the box, which will form the top of the "travelling cage," and fill with wires. Cut a 3-in. square piece out of the top at one corner next the back, and pivot it in the same space from which it was removed by driving in two small wire nails at the two back corners, to work it up and down as on hinges. A bit of wire driven into the side of box near to where the free end of lid closes down, and bent down to a right angle will turn round and form a fastening for the door. Fasten a fair-sized perch across the length, not more than an inch from the bottom of cage. Then you have cage ready. Put in birds, throw a handful of canary-seed on the floor, and at the last minute put in a small piece of stale bread thoroughly saturated with water. Put three birds in each cage, place front to front, tie together with twine, and wrap completely in brown paper, and tie all securely with string into a compact parcel, and label prominently on top with the address and "Live Birds—With Care." Nothing else is needed, and no holes should be made in the paper wrapping at this season. Any small wood box about the above size might be made to serve the purpose by securing a perch near the bottom, and otherwise packing as above, but the advantages in every direction of the travelling cage are more than worth the slight trouble of making them.

A SECOND MOULT (E. N.).—Keep the bird in a fairly warm temperature, but you need not overdo the heat, and see that it is free from direct draughts and sudden or extreme fluctuations. In addition to the usual diet give every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod-liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give 20 drops of the following mixture in the drinking water. Mixture: Dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and use as above. Continue treatment until the feathers have quite ceased dropping. The bird should be quite ready for mating at the beginning of April, or even the last week in March if the weather is suitable.

EGGS FOR SITTING (R.D.).—No, I am afraid the practice which is so common among poultry fanciers of selling sittings of eggs for incubation has not penetrated to the ranks of Canary fanciers. At least I do not know of any trade being done in "sittings" of Canaries' eggs for hatching, from high-class birds, the cost of which is beyond the poor working man. There may be material difficulties and objections to such traffic which do not apply to the produce of the poultry yard, and doubtless when the owner of such birds as you have in view has obtained the eggs he is too keen on hatching them out himself to think of bartering away his potential cup-winners.

PERCHES AND CAGES (Norwich N.S.).—(1) If the birds are in good, vigorous health, and active, they will fertilise the eggs under almost any conditions of unstable perches, but with certain types of bird such perches are a detriment to fertility. Therefore, so far as breeding cages are concerned, it is best to leave these fancy contrivances alone and fix firm and secure perches which do not shake and wobble about when the birds jump on them. (2) The two smaller cages will each accommodate four birds the size of a Norwich, and the larger one eight birds. With strict attention to cleanliness, two extra for each of the smaller cages and four extra for the larger one may be added temporarily, but the first-named quantities are quite sufficient for a permanent. (3) The change of room will not necessarily affect the results of the breeding season at all, although a change in the opposite direction would have been preferable; that is, for the sun to commence to shine on the room at three in the morning instead of three in the afternoon, as then it would have tended to start the hens feeding earlier in the morning. Still, one cannot always have the ideal.

MOULTING AND FERTILITY (G. E. Arnold).—(1) Treat the Norwich cock the same as advised to "E.N." in this issue and continue it until two or three weeks after the bird has quite ceased dropping feathers. If in good health and vigour and it has resumed song by about the middle of next March you may mate him, providing, of course, the hen is also ready for mating, with a fair chance of successful breeding results from him. The deterioration of song is doubtless only what is natural when a bird is moulting, and will probably remedy itself as soon as the effect of the moulting has passed off. (2) It is not at all improbable that the cock was the faulty partner as regards the unproductive clutches last year. Still, provided he recovers from the effects of the moult and resumes full song some time this side the end of March, there is no reason why he should not breed quite successfully in the coming season. But I would not advise you to try the experiment of running him with two hens, and as you will have a spare hen, you might double your chances of success this year by getting a lusty young cock in stout song to mate with her. Please see Mr. Norman's column for reply to your Muling query, which should have been sent on a separate sheet.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

FEEDING A BULLFINCH (F. H. Pink).—A captive Bullfinch requires a rather more varied diet than the one suggested. Make the following mixture: Canary 4 parts, teazle 4 parts, rape 2 parts, linseed 1 part, and give him this as a staple diet. Supply a little sunflower daily; he can have a pinch of niger and maw twice a week, and a little hemp seed occasionally, particularly in cold weather. You should also supply him with privet berries, which you can obtain from the hedgerows or from many gardens; of these he can have a small spray daily. You may also offer him a small piece of any fruit you may have, and when the spring comes he must be supplied with various green foods and wild seeds, but for these I think you had better consult our Nutshell Booklet No. 11, on the Bullfinch, which you can obtain from this office, post free 3d. It gives you a good deal of useful information regarding these beautiful Finches.

COMMENCING MULE BREEDING (G. E. Arnold).—You could pair up all your Finches to hen Canaries, excepting the Bullfinch, as he is usually a failure when mated for breeding in captivity. If you pair the others to yellow Norwich hens you should breed some nice birds, but their usefulness as show specimens depends a good deal upon the size and quality of the hen Canaries. If you have several, select the two largest to pair with the Linnet and Goldfinch, and match the others according to size, so as to make fairly even pairs, with just a shade of substance on the hen's side. No doubt the instructions in the Canary book will assist you as regards feeding the young, and perhaps general management, but I think you would do well to get "The Secrets of Hybrid Breeding," published at this office. It deals with all kinds of Mule and Hybrid breeding, and is a particularly interesting volume.

CATCHING WILD BIRDS (Taffy).—In every county a list of the birds that may not be caught between certain dates is posted up, generally at the police stations and municipal buildings. If you are unable to see one of these and are in doubt, you could obtain the necessary information at the nearest police station. The inspector on duty would give it to you, or even a friendly policeman.

TROUBLE WITH GOLDFINCH (F. J. W. S.).—I fear your Goldie is suffering from nervousness. When you cage him up from the aviary it is almost like caging a freshly caught specimen, without the robustness of the wild bird; for every year in captivity, with artificial feeding, makes a difference to them. I would advise you to keep him for a time in a roomy breeding cage, and run him into the show cage gradually. Give him ten drops of tincture of cubana roots in his drinking water, fresh, twice daily for 4 or 5 days; then discontinue for a week and repeat.

UNSUCCESSFUL WITH LARKS (Wyke).—The trouble you have with your Larks arises from the food not suiting them. The mixture you mention is all very well for a change, but I do not care for it given regularly. No doubt the best food is a good brand of insectile mixture, as used for the more delicate softbills, but this is rather expensive compared with other foods that can be used. I think your best plan will be to get a copy of our Nutshell booklet, No. 3, on the Skylark. In it you will find more than one recipe for mixing your own foods, and a lot of other useful information. You did quite right in giving your birds an aperient, you had better repeat it, or give plainer salts instead, and then make a complete change in his food. If you get a pound of the insectile food, mix some scraped raw carrot with it, this will assist in keeping the bowels regular; a little should be mixed fresh daily, just sufficient for the day's consumption. Keep all vessels perfectly clean.

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

BREEDING LIGHT MULES (R. Rodd).—The usual method of breeding Mules is to pair a cock Goldfinch with a yellow Norwich hen Canary, but in the majority of cases the young ones so bred are dark. To breed light ones you must have a strain of Canaries that will throw more or less light feathers when paired to the Finch. Such hens are naturally very valuable and generally come from a light muling strain. Occasionally a fancier tries a number of hens and finds one of them produce light birds. He then breeds Canaries from her and makes her the nucleus of a light strain by careful in-breeding, so as to preserve the blood as pure as possible. You will see by this that you cannot put a couple of birds together and breed light Mules right away. If you are quite a novice I would advise you to get three or four clear yellow hens and pair them up with Finches, and see what you get. These hens should not only look clear, but should show clear when the feathers are blown up, particularly around the thighs.

MORE LIGHT MULES (W. B.).—The reply given to R. Rodd upon light mule breeding will answer your question No. 1 if you will kindly read it. (2) The same applies equally to the Linnet. (3) The term Sib. bred, as applied to the Canary, means a bird that has been considerably inbred with a view to making a strain for the production of light Mules.

MOULTING THE HAWFINCH (Britisher).—I have carefully read your interesting letter, and I am glad to note your success up to a certain point, and it appears to me that you have failed in your second moulting of your Hawfinches from lack of variety in food, and I also notice (and this is very important), that you make no mention of giving them mealworms or insects of any kind. Now these birds are particularly fond of mealworms and certain caterpillars, and during the moult they should have two or three daily; these should be given direct from the fingers, as this helps to keep them steady. They are also fond of beechmast and various nuts, and a little greenfood should be offered, although they are not particularly keen on it. The above may be useful to you in your next attempt, and I trust you will be more successful.

EXHIBITING A GOLDFINCH (Novice).—If the schedule of the show simply states "British Birds, Goldfinches," then you may exhibit either a house-moulted or field-moulted specimen. In such a class the judge generally gives the preference to house-moulted birds; besides, it is seldom a field-moulted one can be staged in quite the same condition.

ABOUT YELLOW BUNTINGS (M. W.).—We have no authentic record of the Bunting and Canary Hybrid. Anyone who succeeds in breeding and staging one will be looked upon as a celebrity in the Cage Bird Fancy; that is, providing he is able to satisfy the judges that it is genuine. This according to recent events is very important; so, if you find you are likely to be successful do not fail to secure plenty of witnesses. The Yellow Bunting is not a difficult bird to feed, and if you are keeping yours with a Canary, see that there is plenty of Canary seeds supplied, as this is his chief food. You can offer him various other seeds, a few oats, or coarse oatmeal. They will also eat a few insects, such as mealworms, small caterpillars and green fly. He may be encouraged to take a little soft food when you supply some to the Canary; add a spoonful of good ants' eggs that have been soaked in warm new milk, and turned out on to a cloth to drain. The hen is mostly greyish-green in colour and rather spotted. I can scarcely advise you as to the best way of obtaining the cross, but if I was trying for this Hybrid myself I should pair up both ways, and be sure to keep each pair out of hearing of the other. I would advise you to procure our book, "The Secrets of Hybrid Breeding," post free, 1/2; it will interest you immensely and give you some valuable information.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

AFRICAN GREY PARROT (Stewart).—Of course you must give it sufficient of the items it will eat to secure it being properly nourished. Put three drops of tincture of opium in its drinking water (one ounce), do not leave this in the cage, but let it have a good drink every two hours. After a week, omit the opium for two days, then resume, but give clear water every fourth day; as soon as the abnormal thirst yields discontinue the opium altogether. For a time give a little milk-sop daily, prepare so: Put about a score half-inch cubes of bread into a small dish, also one third teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion, one teaspoonful of Nestlé's milk, mix with sufficient boiling water to leave a little liquid, and supply to the bird when cool. You can supply ripe figs and walnuts. Keep a small tin of sunflower seeds in the cage, and it would be well to place several of these on the top of its sops; it may get accustomed to seed in this manner. I should give a purge of tasteless castor oil, 3 drops daily, till bowels have been well cleared; but two doses should suffice. Of course, with a bird confined in the class of dietary yours is (no fault of yours) you can only seek to induce it to take seed by some such methods as that named, and you must supply sufficient of what it is now eating to keep it going. Only glass or glazed earthenware dishes must be used when giving drugs. Report progress in about fourteen days.

AILING PARROT (Dickinson).—Give the bird the Condy's fluid bath every other day. The sore places should be first bathed with tepid water, dabbed dry with a soft cloth and then anointed with "Antezema." When using ointments, etc., on a bird, use sufficient to cover the skin, but it should not be put on thickly enough for the heat of the bird's body to cause it to run into the plumage. The cleansing and anointing to take place daily. The bowels must be kept moving quite freely, at the same time the voidings should not be continuously watery-lose. Use one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water as often as may be required to keep the bowels so regulated. When not giving the magnesia lightly colour the drinking water with chemical food. The all important question of how it has been fed you tell me nothing about; but for the present, as a medicine, give about a tablespoonful of milk-sop daily, consisting of small half-inch cubes of bread, one teaspoonful Nestlé's milk, half teaspoonful cod liver oil emulsion; mix just sloppy with boiling water. Apart from this it had better be plainly dieted: seed mixture, ripe fruit, pieces of biscuit and plain cake. It must be kept warm, but the temperature should be kept as regular as possible, that is, not subject to sudden and frequent changes. I certainly consider there is a good prospect of recovery. Report progress, with full details in about fourteen days.

BLUE-FRONTED AMAZON (Wyke).—There is no "royal road" in which to teach a parrot to talk, much depending on the tact of the teacher and the demeanour of the individual bird. Some respond to the constant repetition method, others will have none of it. Personally I have found it best to keep a bird where it will have sufficient to see and hear to keep it interested, yet not where any operations of a bustling nature, likely to scare it.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3/4d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Goulden Finches," No. 16 "Budgerigars," No. 17 "The Green Parrot," No. 18 "Waxbills." are being carried on, and as a rule a bird will respond by uttering and mimicking the words and sounds it hears. By all means try the constant repetition method as well, when the bird is restless and quiet is the best period, but cease at once if the bird shows any signs of irritation. Also say a word or two to it when you give it any tit-bit with your fingers. Other methods will suggest themselves to you, probably prompted by the bird's demeanour.

IS IT A PARROT? (S. Hodges).—Your bird is a Roseate Cockatoo, a species which always raises its crest when excited or alarmed. Certain things seem to excite or alarm them, and I should avoid putting anything, e.g., the pencil, which did so near the cage. I had many Parrots and Cockatoos which were thrown almost into a frenzy if anything resembling a snake, lady's boa, etc., were put anywhere near it, or came within range of their vision. Some of these birds make very good talkers, become very chummy, and all are droll and accomplished acrobats. Avoid disturbing noises, or anything which you see irritates it. In the vicinity of its cage, and there is no reason at all why yours should not become such an one. See reply to another correspondent re teaching to talk.

AFRICAN GREY PARROT (T. Thwaites).—Your friend must take the bird to a vet. at once, as means must be taken to prevent the protruding of the intestine; it may be necessary to put in a stitch. I have known many cases in which this has had to be done; it is no use my suggesting remedies, the vet. will be in the best position to do this after examining the bird.

WILL IT GROW AGAIN (Mrs. F. Barwick).—There is no cause for anxiety, the mishap has done the bird no harm, and the feathers will be reproduced again at once; I should say in about a month they will be full grown again.

PARRAKEETS WITH GROWTHS ON BEAK (Anxious Heywood).—I expect these growths are not actually on the beak. If the bird will let you handle it foment the growths with hot water (as hot as you can use without discomfort) dry with a soft cloth and lightly anoint with a little spermaceti ointment, but do not use sufficient to run among its plumage. Your query is very vague; you do not say whether it is a new purchase or not, nor yet how you have fed it, etc., so I am afraid my reply cannot be very helpful. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking-water every fourth day, so long as the voidings do not become watery-lose; and on the intervening days lightly colour the drinking water with chemical food. If you have to write again, make a rough sketch of the beak and indicate by dots or crosses where the growths are, and also give other details in full.

POST MORTEMES.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letterpost; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

C. Harrison.—Starling died from enteritis following impaction of the intestine.

POWICK'S CHAMPION YORKSHIRES
the same strain as the winners at all the leading shows, cocks 7/6, 10/6; hens 5/6, 7/6; sure winners, 15/6 each, worth 30/- each; ten days' approval: W. Powick, Eastfield Cottage, Dewsbury, Yorkshire. (194)

G. SNEAD'S

Yorkshires still prove to be the Fancy their fine quality and high standard by winning in the highest and keenest of competitions; every bird his own breeding; having selected my breeding stock I have a grand selection for sale from 15/- a pair upwards; odd birds proportionately; satisfaction guaranteed; 10 days' approval; cash or deposit; address: 133 Arcliffe-terrace, Horton Grange-rd., Bradford. (180)

CHAMPION YORKSHIRES

I have the finest stock of Yorkshires in Bradford for sale; long slim cocks, in full song and over 3in. long, at 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 upwards; grand racy hens to match at 4/-, 5/-, 6/6 each upwards; pairs matched to breed your own winners, at 10/6, 12/6, 15/- a pair upwards; no better value in the Fancy; 5 days' approval, cash or deposit; Editor: Edwin North, Breeder, 413, Manchester-rd., Bradford. (200)

ZEPPELIN RAIDS

Have not kept "Dykes' Yorkshires" in the dark. They have again been very much in the limelight this season. Winning the following valuable trophies in the world's keenest competition:—"Yorkshire Canary Club, Challenge Cup" (outright), "National Green Marked Trophy" (outright), both these third year in succession; "The Bristol Challenge Bowl" (second time), "Bradford East Rose Bowl," both above for best young bird bred for exhibition; "The London and Provincial Challenge Cup"; "The Carlisle Yorkshire Cup"; "Bolton Woods Cup"; "Llanelli Cup" (outright); and 101 firsts, 57 seconds, 20 thirds, and numerous other specials since October 2. The above is a fair average of what my Yorkshires have won each season for years, and I have bred and sold "winners" to most of the leading exhibitors all over the kingdom. Some really good birds for disposal, Cleared, Ticked, and Marked, and those wanting fresh blood should try one of my matched pairs at 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- per pair. Single birds in proportion. Every bird cold room bred and kept, and in perfect condition. I invite you to come and inspect my stock, also my rooms, which are the most up-to-date in the fancy. Or I will send on approval with pleasure; cash or deposit; kindly state wants: L. Dykes, "Reliable Aviaries," 16, Shann-st., Bolton Woods, Bradford. (193)

TALKING PARROTS

The finest selection of genuine trained talking Grey and Green Parrots in Great Britain. Over 500 genuine Amazons in stock. Also several very fine African Grey Parrots, in perfect condition, on dry seed and water. We can offer fine healthy, free chattering, blue-fronted Amazons, finger tame, saying 5 or 6 words, the right age to develop and make excellent talkers. These birds are in magnificent plumage, fed on dry seed and water, price 30/- each. A grand selection of King Amazons, extra brilliant colouring, saying a great number of words, laugh, whistle, and mimic, price 45/- each. These Amazons are collected by our own representative in Brazil, brought over in clean, healthy condition. We can also offer very fine Indian Rock Parrots, Red-fronted Amazons, Yellow-fronted Levallant Amazons, tame talking Macaws, and Cockatoos. We are by far the largest importers in Great Britain, and our prices are the lowest. We guarantee safe arrival of all live stock to any part of Great Britain. All orders despatched the same day as order arrives; no tedious waiting: G. B. Chapman, Parrot Aviaires, Birmingham. Telegrams, "Parrakeet." Phone, "Central 689."

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale is effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

HOW IS IT THAT I AM ALWAYS HAVING SUCH SUPERIOR ST

Well, I think some of the enclosed extracts of letters which I give below will partly explain, and the fact is, I have just concluded several more important purchases from well-known exhibitors. They include a lot of really useful birds, and will be sold, not at their value as pedigree birds, but what they are worth on the perch.

EXTRACTS OF OPINIONS.

Jan. 22, 1916.—"I am in receipt of the cheque in payment of birds. I am exceedingly gratified with the promptness of this our first transaction, and sincerely hope it will not be the last. Wishing you all success.—H. H."

Prices as follows: No "gush" or absurd exaggeration; but sold, for what they are worth on the perch—not bogus strains. Cocks or hens, for exhibition, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Pairs, correctly matched to produce best results by me personally, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-. These are marvels at the price. Other useful birds. Cocks, 7/6, 8/6; Hens, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6. Pairs, matched to produce best results, 10/6. Cages to hold one bird, 3d., to hold two or three birds, 4d.

Twitterings.

At the annual meeting of the Hartlepool C.B.C. Messrs. R. Watson, of 3, Stirling Street, and J. Wright, Ashgrove Avenue, were elected joint secs.

Mr. Sears and I have arranged to become partners, and will show as Buckingham and Sears. All communications to 211, St. Albans Road, Watford, writes Mr. W. Buckingham.

Mr. W. L. Page, hon. sec., writes that the annual show of the Southampton C.B.S. has been fixed for Nov. 29, 30. Mr. J. Robson judge.

We have received the schedule of the Joint Members' show at Holborn Hall, Feb. 2-3. No purpose would be served by reviewing the schedule in full, for entries close Friday, Jan. 23. It will be sufficient, therefore, to say that no less than 119 classes have been provided, and there is a wonderful list of more than 170 special prizes. A treat should be in store for those who visit the show.

Our Front Page Drawing.

The original drawings of our front page illustrations, and of most other pictures appearing on our pages, may be purchased by readers for framing. Terms for any picture will be sent on application.

Thanks from Cardiff Show.

Allow me to thank all the exhibitors who supported our charity show, writes Mr. E. Thomas, sec. Cardiff C.B.S. We have a balance to the good of £13, and this will purchase a good many articles of clothing, also food, for our unfortunate comrades who are prisoners of war in Germany.

We hear from Mr. McLauchlan, sec., that prize-money in respect of the Glasgow Scotch Fancy show has been paid.

Mr. Thomas Bewick has removed from Low Fell to 30, Nursery Road, Windy Nook, Gateshead.

The young stock show of the Croydon F.A. has been fixed for Aug. 16 and the annual show for Nov. 1, writes Mr. F. B. Roberts, sec.

The annual show of the Warrington C.B.S., writes Mr. H. Warburton, will be held Jan. 29 in the Blue Bell Sale Rooms. Messrs. J. D. Leigh and R. Johnson will judge.

The Warrington C.B.S. is holding its annual show on Saturday, the 29th, in the Blue Bell Sale Rooms, writes Mr. H. Warburton, hon. sec. Messrs. J. D. Leigh and R. Johnson judges.

Mr. W. H. Synes has resigned the secretaryship of the Laisterdyke B.F.A., and all communications must be addressed to Mr. Leo. Hodgson, 586, Rooley Lane, Dudley Hill, Bradford, who has taken over the duties.

I have taken over the duties of secretary of the Oxford C.B.S., writes Mr. A. F. Fifield, 6, Buckingham Street, Oxford, and all communications should be addressed accordingly.

Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., writes Mr. A. G. Cant, hon. sec., has fixed the following dates for its shows for 1916. Pairs, Feb. 15; young birds, July 11; annual, Nov. 14. Secretaries please note these dates.

OBITUARY.

I regret to inform you, writes Mr. E. Sisson, assist. sec. Sheffield C.B.S., that Mr. W. Bingham, a well-known local fancier, has suffered a great loss by the death of a son about 18, from pneumonia, after nine weeks' illness. Fanciers and friends will extend their deep sympathy with the family in their sad bereavement.

I should like to thank you, writes Mr. O. C. Smith, for publishing my photo in CAGE BIRDS of Jan. 15, also for the grand coloured plate. I think this is very instructive, as well as interesting.

We learn from the balance-sheet of the Guiseley Yeadon C.B.S. that the past season has been a very satisfactory one. The substantial sum of ten guineas was granted to the Belgian Relief Fund, and the balance at bank is £12 5s. 7d., as against £6 7s. 9d. brought forward from 1914.

The balance-sheet of the Eastleigh C.B.S. shows that after handing £1 4s. to the wounded soldiers' cigarette fund, the balance in hand is £1 8s. 9d., as against 18s. 5d. brought forward from last year. The Committee wish to thank all those who have helped to bring the year's work to so successful a conclusion.

Accept my sincere thanks for depicting my yellow Yorkshire cock, on the front page of CAGE BIRDS of January 22, writes Mr. Geo. Thomson. He was one of the finest quality birds for a big bird I ever bred, and I consider it a life-like picture of him, which gives great credit to the esteemed artist of this most instructive journal.

"I had so many answers to the advt. of Java Sparrows in CAGE BIRDS that I was unable to answer them all."—MARY BOYD (Bideford).

Mr. Toundrow, one of our members, writes Mr. O. C. Smith, Reading, has had the somewhat unusual experience of catching a Brown Owl in his back garden, which is situated right in the town. I had the pleasure of seeing it, and it is a good specimen, but very tame, which leads me to think it has escaped from some owner. Mr. Toundrow is going to try and keep it, but not near his stock of Yorkshires.

We hear that Mr. W. Rudd, the well-known bird specialist of Norwich, has recently despatched consignments to Canada, S. Africa, China, Malta, Italy (two), New Zealand (three) and United States (four). The consignments have included many kinds of Canaries and Mules, together with cages and appliances of all descriptions.

Mr. A. G. Cant, Dulwich, writes that besides 2nd prize at Dulwich and Peckham show (not 1st as in our inscription, his variegated Yorkshire depicted on the front page of our Jan. 22 issue has won 1st and sp. best novice at S. London Col. and F.A., and Dulwich and Peckham young bird shows, 1914, ditto at S. London Col. and F.A. annual show, 1914; 4th Dulwich and Peckham annual, 1914, and 2nd at S. London Col. and F.A. annual, 1915.

Mr. J. W. Norris, hon. sec. British Roller C.C., 31, Scylla Rd., Peckham Rye, S.E., writes that, in addition to the 45 specials offered in the five classes, others will be printed in the catalogue of the show at the Cock and Lion Hotel, Wigmore Street, London, on Feb. 4-5. Among these will be 10s. presented by a lady for best champion young bird, and 5s. for best novice young bird. Those who have not received a schedule should apply to Mr. Norris, as above; entries close Jan. 31.

BITS FOR BEGINNERS.

Get your cages, appliances, and foods before you get your birds.

Plenty of advertisers will offer you these in our next issue.

Don't buy, or even accept as a present, a second-hand cage. You never know why it is empty.

Don't be too ambitious at the beginning. There are more steps than one on the ladder of fame.

If your taste inclines to Foreign bird keeping, don't begin with a Hummingbird. Try a Java Sparrow or a Budgerigar.

Among the British birds you will not get any satisfaction out of a Golden-crested Wren or a Long-tailed Tit.

A Linnet or a Redpoll would be better for a beginner.

In Canaries, try a pair of common birds. You will get on better with high-class birds when you are no longer a beginner.

SOLD OUT.

"I beg to thank you for the assistance CAGE BIRDS has rendered me in disposing of my sale stock of Yorkshires. I am now quite sold out, even at this early period. I have received a great many applications and have replied to all, except those who omitted to enclose a stamped reply."—PERCY LANE (Worcester).

"Kindly thank all enquirers for my White Canary advertised in the splendid Birthday Number of CAGE BIRDS. The bird was sold on the following day, and I have replied to all enclosing stamp. This is my second advt. this season and, as a result of the same, I could have cleared my entire stock."—EDWIN WILCOX (Derby).

Where Hybrid Specialists

Will Gather.

Visitors to the combined show at Holborn Hall on Wednesday and Thursday next will be afforded the opportunity of seeing the bird which is claimed to be a Thrush-Blackbird Hybrid, and about which so much has been written in our columns, for we hear from Mr. Silver that the bird has been entered for exhibition.

How I Started WITH Zebra Finches.

By D. JACKSON, Eingley.

A Short Story of a Beginner's Success.

UNTIL just over a year ago I had never kept a bird in my life, but seeing some Budgerigars I became interested and procured a pair. I started taking CAGE BIRDS and soon afterwards procured a pair of Zebra Finches, and put them in a Yorkshire breeding cage in my workshop.

I had got the craze very bad by this, and read all the books I could find at the free library on Foreign birds. All these recommended an aviary, so I decided to build one.

My space was very limited, but I built one on the lines recommended by Mr. Page in "Foreign Birds for Beginners," and just before Easter I turned in the Budgies and the pair of Zebras. I hung up a few husks, and a small box about six inches square. I also threw them in a few feathers and hay, and had the satisfaction of seeing them get to business in a day or two.

On Easter Sunday the first egg was laid. The excitement was now getting up, and I paid another visit to the library and re-read all the articles on Zebra Finches I could find. But, alas! no young hatched. I think it must have been too cold for them.

The birds were not downhearted, however, but commenced building in a hush this time, and laid four eggs. Three hatched, but two of the young died in a day or two. The other survived, and in about a fortnight was hopping about the aviary. Once out of the nest, the parents behaved like Huns to it, but it soon started picking for itself, and I was very proud of it.

Meanwhile the parents had laid again, but, as before, the youngsters all died but one, which was reared successfully. I gave the birds spray millet, canary, and ordinary millet, also crumbled sponge cake, with ants' eggs, and bread soaked in milk.

My two young birds both proved to be cocks, and I advertised them in CAGE BIRDS at 5s. each. To my great surprise I received an offer of six shillings each from a lady to whom I sold them, also the parents, so I thought I had done very well for a beginner. I have had a few hobbies, but I consider Foreign birds is the most fascinating of all.

How I Began Canary Breeding.

By S. T., Dover.

A Comprehensive Account of the first season's doings of a novice, which should make Canary Breeding easy to those similarly placed.

TO those about to start Canary breeding perhaps my experience will be of some service, and also show that this hobby can be made profitable as well as an endless pleasure. I am not going into details of my very first ridiculous experience, as it would not be appropriate to this article, but before I ever thought of breeding birds I was very ignorant of any kind of feathered pets, so it will be seen that one can really make a success if one makes a study of this amusing pastime.

Anyone with a few spare hours and a few shillings can do wonders. Now let me state my methods. I first obtained a good matched pair of Yorkshires, costing 10s. 6d., and some reliable written matter which needless to say was obtained through good old CAGE BIRDS. Having bought a two-compartment breeding cage, I placed the cock in one side, and the hen in the other, having a wire partition to make the division. Naturally I would sit and watch proceedings, and as soon as I found the cock bird singing furiously at the hen, and the hen calling to him and sidling up to the partition continually opening her beak for him to feed her, I let them fly together.

When to Pair the Birds.

I had learned never to put a pair together until they are in the pink of condition, and this is obtained by giving them rather a generous diet consisting of a little egg food daily, and, added to the staple diet (canary and a little rape) I gave about equal parts of maw seed, gold of pleasure, and sesame seed every other day, and during the intervening days a small quantity of the following mixture: Equal parts of teazle, broken groats, white millet and niger.

A little hemp-crushed or whole helps the birds along, but I used this with great care, for only a very little should be given. I do not like hemp for many reasons, although I do use it for special purposes.

In addition to the above food I used to seek for the half-ripened seed heads of the dandelion, and offered these to the birds, giving about three good plump heads per bird per day. If I could not get the heads I gave them the leaves, seeing of course that these were young and clean. After the birds had been together for a day or two I introduced the nest pan, which I hung up about midway, i.e., about level with the perches.

Leaving the birds for another day to get used to this, I placed a little nesting material and when I found the hen pulling at it and gathering it up in her beak, finally going to the nest and putting it into shape, I placed a larger quantity and kept this up until she had completed her nest, which happened in under a week. It was surprising how soon she put her house in order.

The First Trouble and How it Began.

I come now to a critical period with the hen, she sat on her nest at night, and of course I looked eagerly for the first egg the next morning, but I was disappointed, and awaited results of the next day. Still no eggs, and my hopes nearly fell through as I saw the poor old lady looking rather queer on the bottom of the cage huddled up in the corner. I was very upset over it, as may be assured after having got so far.

I looked up my little book, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and studied every word, and soon found out that my bird was egg-bound. Then racing round I soon got some hot water, a jug and a piece of muslin. This piece of muslin I placed over the jug of hot water, doubled twice so as to take the sting of the steam off, and placed the hen gently over it, with the result that the egg dropped after about two minutes of this treatment.

My hopes were high-strung again. I did not place this egg in the nest, but placed the dummy one instead. The hen was soon normal, next morning she did not lay, therefore I expected more trouble, but the morning following that I found my second egg, which again I took away. No more egg-binding came my way, for she completed a batch of five which I placed altogether in the nest and let her do the rest.

Not knowing what to do with the cock, as I was only a novice, I let him remain, thinking perhaps if he was taken away it might disturb the hen. This is a matter I have found out since which has to be carefully watched.

Birds for the Beginner.

By H. C. PERKS, Dollis Hill.

In this article the writer tells how from small beginnings, the hobby of bird-keeping grows when once begun.

SHOW me the man without a hobby of some sort, and I will tell you his disposition.

Many people do not realise the value of a hobby; it is the very essence of life. Some are interested in art, science, and various crafts, but give me the man interested in live stock, and particularly cage or aviary birds.

The first cost in many cases prevents the would-be fancier from making a start. This is probably due to the fact that his vision of "cage birds" flies to Canaries, and although a cock bird can at times be purchased for as low a sum as five shillings, he feels this is too much to pay without any knowledge of management.

There are many more interesting birds than Canaries. What better bird for the beginner than the intelligent little Redpoll? They can be purchased for the small sum of sixpence each, require no special feeding, can be taught a number of tricks, and are always cheery and confiding.

A Modest Beginning.

How well I remember my first purchase. It was at the age of nine or thereabouts. I procured a cage-moulded specimen and cage from a boy for the sum of 2½d. All he had been fed on was canary and rape, and he looked well on it too. He was finger tame, and after a time I gave him his liberty in the sitting room. He was a continual source of amusement. He used to "loop the loop" on a piece of wire stretched across the room, and always returned to his cage for food.

I commenced to make cages later out of boxes and half-inch wire netting, and then I purchased a hen Greenfinch. This bird had not been treated any too kindly, but after I had her a few weeks she came along nicely. She was quite tame, and as she had rather a good appetite, I was advised by my father to give her her liberty, so I hung her out in the garden and opened the cage door. As she did not leave the cage after an hour, I had to forcibly eject her. She flew into some trees near by, but after looking round for a time, to my astonishment she returned to the cage, and incidentally the seed. After this I let her out every day for a week or so, and, as the spring was coming, my father suggested making a big outdoor cage for her and the Redpoll.

Hopes of Hybrid-breeding Dashed.

We set to work with a will, at least my father did. I am afraid my suggestions as to cage construction in those days would not bear going into. At last it was finished and the birds put in. After a scrimmage which lasted about five minutes, they settled down nicely. We fixed a little wooden box up in one corner and put in some cow-hair and moss. The birds set to work with a will, and in a short space of time a nest was completed, but apparently this did not suit their tastes, and it was accordingly pulled out and a fresh start made.

The Greenie was later sitting in the nest for a good spell each day, and I was expecting to find an egg, when alas I got up one morning and found she had been pulled through the wires by a cat. So great was my disappointment at this loss, after all the preparation, that I sold the Redpoll for 3d. the same day.

My next venture was a Jackdaw; I happened to see this bird in the street. It was a young hand-reared one, and probably escaped from somewhere. I commenced to chase him, and was joined by three "never works" (very plentiful in those days). One of them caught the bird, and demanded 3d. each for himself and his pals, which I willingly paid, and I took my prize home and kept him for about three weeks. When I returned home one evening I found my mother had sold him for 6d. Such are the trials of the beginner.

Later Favourites.

Since that time I have kept at one time or another nearly every British bird, and many Canaries, also the smaller foreign birds. The later years I have devoted to the rarer softbills and mule breeding. What more delightful songster than the Blackcap Warbler? I have had some beauties. He is my greatest favourite. I think my next favourite is that beautiful and sprightly foreigner, the Pekin Robin, with his bright eyes and confiding manner.

Of the British Hardbills my first choice now goes to the Linnet, for I do not think there is a finer songster. They will readily pair with almost anything, but they are rather apt to sulk at times, a thing you never or rarely see in the little Redpoll or Goldie. As I write, my Goldie and Linnet Mule are flying loose in my sitting room. The mule I had to hand-rear last year, as its mother died when it was 12 days old. I am not even now sure of the sex, but I have an idea it is a hen. It is playing hide and seek round the back of my neck, pulling my hair, and trying to find a stray thread in my shirt, which will be the forerunner of a hole before it has finished. It comes at call, and practically lives on me when I am in the house.

A Hint for Cage Makers.

I have not mentioned feeding, for I have nothing to add to the particulars set out in the little "Nutshell" booklets, but I could say one word about cages. How is it so few cage makers make a suitable cage for Britishers? I mostly make my own, and my idea of a cage for a Linnet or Goldie is a back cage with three wire sides 18in. long by 7in. deep by 10in. high, a seed drawer, and, to keep on the best terms with the wife, glass 4in. high all the way round. The bottom cross-piece not more than 3in. board. Why don't manufacturers make something on these lines, and particularly a mess-proof cage? I have yet to see one marketed.

Let the beginner's fancy turn to British, Foreign, Mules, or Canaries, his first purchase should be the "Nutshell," then the suitable cage (for the above mentioned reasons) and lastly his bird, and he has then a beginning. Who knows where he will finish? It is just possible he will be the breeder of a Chaffinch-Canary Hybrid or the Black Canary.

MY BULLFINCH "JOEY."

By G. GLOVER, Nuneaton.

A Story of a Pet Bullfinch and the string that was not there.

FROM a lad I have always kept birds of one sort or another, namely, Linnets, Finches, Larks, etc. One Skylark lived for twelve years, and an old favourite Bullie nearly fifteen, and it is about this Bullfinch I wish to speak. "Joey," as we called him, was reared from a nest taken by a railway guard near Evesham, and which contained two cocks and one hen. He used to take the young birds backwards and forwards with him on his trips to feed, and after they could do for themselves he gave me one cock and the hen.

I tried the hen three years in succession with Canaries, Greenfinches, etc., but did no good; she laid plenty of eggs, but they were always clear, so I disposed of her. The cock bird I kept until it died at the age of about fifteen years, as stated. We used to give it at meal times a bit of almost everything we ate, and it was surprising how jealous he was of our youngest child; he would run along the front of his cage with his mouth open and make a noise as if he would worry him. But above all he was always pleased to see his master come home. It did not matter to Joey which shift I was on, night or day; he would drop off his perch and give me a tune when I came home.

One day a friend named Brown, from Leicester, a relief man, came in to see my birds, and when I had shown him round I took him into the house especially to see "Joey." I lifted him down, and he stood on his perch quite still. I said, "Sam, would you like to hear the old soldier sing?" He said he would, so a couple of low whistles from me started him off; he was mad proud, and did his song well.

My friend went back to the station cabin, and while he was praising the bird one of the men said, "Did you not see the piece of string Glover had in his finger attached to the bird? It was only a dummy." Sammy said, "Now you come to talk about it, I did not see the bird come off the perch; it only wagged its head about. Glover is a bit artful."

A couple of mornings after, in comes Sammy, looking a bit old fashioned. I said, "Hullo, Sam; have you come to have another look round before you go back home?" I showed him round again, and got back to the house door, about to say good morning, and then I said, "I know what you want; you want to hear the old soldier again," and he agreed. Into the house we went, I took the cage down, and Joey soon started off with his old song. To see Sammy looking round for the string was amusing, and at last he said, "Old pal, he's genuine; he's a marvel." Joey's diet was best hemp, rape, and canary seed, besides scraps from the table at meal times.

My Indian White-Eyes (Zosterops palpebrosa).

WHILE engaged in house-building, incubating, or caring for a family, they are even more fascinating, and when the little family leave the sheltering walls of "White-eye castle," the picture is bewitching indeed. Thus one might wander on, but this feeble sketch must suffice; it indicates faintly their power to charm and interest. For the rest my readers must avail themselves of the first opportunity of acquirement, and I am sure, whether they keep them in cage or aviary, their verdict will be that my little sketchy rhapsody of their deportment falls far short of the actual picture.

The Dawn of Hope.

To resume the story, all went well, but not for some weeks did they give indications of being a true pair. Then I caught them (or one of them) carrying bents into a large elder tree, but could trace no signs of even the beginnings of a nest. I only got occasional glimpses of them, and sometimes missed them for a couple or more days at a time. On the evening of June 27 I noticed one of them fly from the tip of a hawthorn branch. A dangling piece of hay caused me to investigate, and I then found a nest which contained a clutch of eggs (pale bluish-white); my feelings were, well, ecstatic—but I will leave this to the reader's imagination.

The birds, for both shared the duties of incubation, sat very closely, and did not leave their eggs unless one approached within a foot of their domicile; in such case the bird returned—at once on the withdrawal of the intruder.

On the morning of July 7 the nest contained three young chicks. The same afternoon two well-known bird-lovers, Mr. and Mrs. Miller, paid me a visit, and Mrs. Miller very aptly likened the chicks to caterpillars—this expression conveys some idea of their minute size. On the evening of July 17 three fully-fledged birds left the nest; on August 1 they were feeding for themselves.

The fledglings were quite naked. For the first four days they were fed entirely on small flies, etc., which their parents, actively foraging from sunrise to sunset, captured in the aviary. Afterwards a few small mealworms, which I supplied every two hours during daylight, were taken, and on the morning of the tenth day I first saw them being fed with banana and milk-sop.

Fears, and a Pleasant Surprise.

On the evening of this day I received a big shock, for on making my last visit of inspection for the day I found the nest empty, though about half an hour previously I had seen three gaping mouths stretched above the top of the nest. I searched everywhere, but could not find a trace of the young birds, and a very sad and disappointed aviculturist closed up his aviaries for the night. I was on the spot very early the next morning to renew the search, for I wanted at least a skin to record the event, when to my joy I speedily spotted three beautiful young birds, almost as strong on the wing as their parents. I shall not tell you what I thought, did, or how I looked. I will divulge this much though. I supplied fresh fruit, sop, and insects, and feasted my eyes on that little family party, as the parent birds guarded, guided, fed and tended their precious progeny.

The nest looks fragile, but is really strong; it was in the form of a cradle suspended beneath a spreading hawthorn branch which in the wind swayed and dipped into the tall grass beneath. When the fledglings were a week old they fully filled the nest, and for the last three days of their occupancy of it appeared to be sitting on their tails. Consequently, after the young had flown it was not the pretty structure it was when it contained the eggs; it had been distended, and the sides much flattened down by the parents' feet while feeding their babies. In plumage the young resemble their parents, but their feathers lack the silky texture of the adult bird. Their eyes opened on the fifth day, but they did not get their spectacles till a month after they had left the nest. One of the young birds I sold to Miss Clare, and it won for her first honours in its class at Wimbledon Show. The other two young birds also passed into Miss Clare's possession at a later period, and all did well.

Murdered by Singing Finches.

My White-eyes were not at all difficult to cater for, as the other occupants of the aviary required a bill of fare covering seeds, insects, sop, insectile mixture, and fairy-sprites helped themselves to an even taking a few seeds; but their main dietary was fruit, sop and insects. I found them enduring, as my pair spent all the winter out of doors, and appeared none the worse therefor.

I regret I must sound a sad note in conclusion. My pair of White-eyes, after the experience of an English winter, were in the pink of condition in the spring of 1912, but before nesting operations began they fell victims to the pugnacity of a pair of Green Singing Finches, which had been in the aviary for several years.

I should say that the above success occurred amid a mixed series ranging from a Waxbill to a Thrush, including such as Tanagers, Flycatchers, Weavers, etc., and the young White-eyes described herein were the first White-eyes of any species to be bred in England. In 1913 I again bred the species, and last year Mr. Bainbridge was similarly successful. During same period Dr. Lovell-Keays and Dr. Amsler both bred the African White-eye (Z. virens), the former gentleman rearing several broods. These, however, are the only successful instances I know of in this country.

An All-British Bird Show.

SIR, I am glad to see Mr. Metcalfe thinks my appeal worthy of his consideration, but I should like him to make it clear what the classification is going to be. I also thank Mr. Deacon for his generous special; if a few more gentlemen would contribute specials so generously the venture would be a decided success. I append an amendment in classification, hoping it will meet with Mr. Metcalfe's and his Committee's approval. The classification did not appertain to the proposed late spring show. So from my point of view the appended should meet most exhibitors' approval.

H.M. Goldf., F.M. Goldf.; ditto Linnet, ditto Bullf., H.M. Greenf. (fed), H.M. Greenf. (non-fed), F.M. Greenf., Siskin, Lesser Redpoll, H.M., ditto F.M., Mealy Redpoll, Twite, Chaffinch, Bramblef., Yellowhammer, Hawfinch, A.O.V. cock or hen. Hen classes: Bullf., Greenf., Goldf., Linnet, A.O.V., Albinos, Large Softbills, Small Softbills, Foreign Hardbills, ditto Softbills, Full Mule and hybrid classes. Novice: Linnet, Bullf., Goldf., Greenf., Softbills, Chaffinch, Bramble, A.O.V., Bullie hens, A.O.V. hen, Mule, Hyb. The poor novice quite escaped my attention before. If Mr. Metcalfe puts the novice classes on I think he will get good returns. The specials I will give to classes I am not represented in are, cash: 2s. 6d. best H.M. Greenf., 2s. 6d. 4th Yellowhammer, 2s. 6d. best Goldf. hen, 2s. 6d. most points novice classes.

Mr. Minoprio, a Liverpool gentleman, would give a suitable special in mule, hybrid, and foreign section, and I will arrange and defray the expense of a little local public advertising to help the gate, and possibly recruit new fanciers to take up British.

I have dealt with one cause why the British do not fill. I am sure railway companies are responsible for short entries through delays in transit, and I feel keen on bringing them to book. Complaints to the company are no use, and litigation is worse, as they are too strong for insignificant chaps like me to tackle. I have for years sent birds to different parts, and 50 per cent. of the consignments are 24 hours instead of 12. We have ample proof by their own showing that it is their servants' neglect, for insured birds are rarely late. We pay rate and half for express delivery; why cannot we have it without paying more still? I think they regard birds as hardware.

I have been waiting to furnish a strong case, and I have now evidence to work on. Recently a box of birds consigned from Liverpool to Manchester, a two hours' run, took the outrageous time of 24 hours. It is, indeed, gross neglect, and 5s. should not get their slate clean either. I think the above and other delays experienced by fanciers should be reported to the R.S.P.C.A. as cruelty to animals, as in my opinion they are the only people who can put the "screw" on. Who is in favour of a move in this direction? F. COCKERILL.

SIR,—I was delighted to see my friend Mr. Metcalfe's letter in CAGE BIRDS last week proposing to hold an all-British show in June next at Liverpool. I shall be very pleased to support the show with my entries. I think too little interest has been taken in the British in the past, especially the hen classes. I think the proposed time is the right one, and I have never yet been able to understand why most of the shows are held in cold winter months, it is very unsuitable for the birds and the owners, and I have always held that early spring and early summer is the best time.

Catching Mice in the Birdroom.

SIR,—I have a large aviary full of birds, double cased, and packed between with peat and sawdust, and I have had a trying time with mice. I have tried all sorts of dodges, but failed until I tried my late father's old wrinkle. Get some seed, damp it, place it in some small saucers or tin lids, sprinkle with Battle's Vermin Killer, and place away from cages. The mice die at the saucer or tin lid. This poison is difficult to obtain, but the finest I have used; after the first night, 12 were found dead in the morning and 8 the next.

C. UPTON.

SIR,—Re catching mice in a birdroom, having had several years' experience as professional rat-catcher, perhaps I can help your correspondent. If he is using a spring trap, the bait should be soaked in oil of aniseed, and if that does not succeed oil of rhodium is a certain lure for mice, but it is rather expensive. Another method to catch mice is to fasten all holes up but one, and leave it for a couple of nights so that the mice get used to it. Then procure a piece of picture-framing, and nail it to the wall around the hole, one piece each side. Then get a slide, if always use an oven damper, and run it into the rebate of the picture frame. Tie a piece of string to the knob of the damper and lead it through a few eyelets or small pulleys to the outside of the door. Tighten the string to lift up the damper and fasten it to a nail. Place in the centre of the room a plate containing oatmeal and oil of aniseed; the mice must eat out of the plate as they cannot carry the oatmeal away. Keep outside the door until you know they are busy, and then release the string and the damper will fall over the hole. Then go into the room, and you will have the mice at your mercy, as they cannot get away.

WM. JEPSON.

The Disqualified Yorkshire at Bishop Auckland.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Studholme's letter, the reason I disqualified Mr. Stewart's young buff is because the schedule stated "unflighted." Now any bird having four outer flights drawn in each wing, eight in all, is not an unflighted bird. Personally it was a great grief to me to do it, and in doing it I did not intend to reflect upon Mr. Stewart's honesty, but simply to do my duty as a judge. Mr. Studholme asks me why I did not protest at Blaydon and Northern Yorkshire shows. The reason is that I did not notice that the flights had been pulled when I saw the bird at these shows. At Blaydon I saw it in gas-light, and at Northern Yorkshire show in a very dull light. At Whitehaven Mr. Studholme will see that the schedule reads "bird bred 1915." The bird is rightly shown in such a class, but where it reads "unflighted" he is not entitled to compete.

T. C. CRAWHALL.

A Gourmet—or a Gourmand?

SIR,—Some people will eat anything, but I think "Bird-eater," who writes to the "Birmingham Daily Mail," takes the cake. He says that he has bought, "chiefly out of Birmingham market," and eaten, the Gannet, Heron, Razorbill, Crested Grebe, Little Grebe, Eider-duck, and all the varieties of duck he has ever seen there, Knot, Redshank and other waders, Cormorant, White-fronted Goose, Pink-footed Goose, Barnacle Goose, etc., Whooper Swan, Tame Swan, the Thrush tribe, Sparrows, Greenfinches, Chaffinches, etc., Rooks, Starlings, Larks, the Plover tribe, game birds, Land and Water Rail, etc. It would be interesting to know what birds are included among the "etceteras." Anyway, he seems not to have had much time to eat anything but bird-flesh, for he says that he thinks Peafowl are the only birds of those appearing from time to time on sale in Birmingham which he has not eaten. How do the Birmingham butchers manage to live?

SOUTHERNER.

New C.B.S. for Penygraig.

SIR,—At a recent discussion held at the Butchers' Arms Hotel, it was carried unanimously that we should have a cage bird society. The members are most fortunate in having as a chairman Mr. Ellis Hughes, the well-known Northwalian judge and exhibitor. A committee of keen and enthusiastic fanciers was elected, with the strong intention of making rapid progress for the society. After a lengthy discussion it was decided that no mile area should be made, therefore fanciers from all surrounding districts may become members. We have fixed our first annual members' show for Feb. 26, entrance fee 6d. per cage. Any fancier desirous of becoming a member should communicate with the sec., when full particulars will be forwarded.

The Great Joint London Show.

The British and Hybrid Section.

SIR,—I have received, too late to insert in schedule, a special prize of 2s. 6d. from Mr. J. E. Jeffreys for the best dark Linnet hybrid at our joint members' show at Holborn Hall on Wednesday and Thursday next, also the following donations to the show fund: 10s. from Mr. W. F. Lloyd James, 3s. Mr. P. McQuiston, and 2s. 6d. Mr. J. Sykes. An important omission was made in the schedule in not mentioning that Class 84 (Crows, etc.) is guaranteed through the generosity of Mr. J. R. Trower, so that exhibitors in this are certain of full prize money, which will cover the extra carriage incurred for such large birds.

Entries must be posted on Friday, Jan. 28, otherwise it will be impossible to accept them.

I am glad to report that several new members have joined the N.B.B. and M.C., and many old ones have paid up their back subscriptions, so that altogether the prospects seem to point to a successful show. The Holborn Hall, which is very central and convenient for a bird show, is probably better known to Londoners as the Holborn Town Hall. Trams and buses from all parts pass the door.

The Right Way to Commence.

An Old Fancier Advises the Beginner.

SIR,—Last week I gave you a picture of the struggling fancier; this week I will give you one of a lucky one, though the luck is greatly augmented by the methods adopted. He perhaps has been breeding a few song birds, and comes to the conclusion that it costs no more to keep good ones than bad. He joins the local society, gets to know who's who in the Fancy world, and then, instead of purchasing from some promiscuous advertisement offering champions at giving-away prices, he places himself in the hands of a breeder who he gets to know is a successful one. I have known hundreds who have started this way, and who have gone right away from the start. Perhaps they have not bred anything really champion the first season, but some good enough to compete in members' or novice classes. A fancier of this kind has an advantage from the start, because he begins with the benefit of an older breeder's experience. The time to make a start is as early in the year as possible, for there is always a good demand for stock from noted breeders.

J. BASTOCK.

New Society for Maesteg.

SIR,—A cage-bird society has been finally formed for Maesteg, with a membership of twelve, and I trust that all interested in the Fancy in the district will rally round and give this new society the support it deserves. I will gladly furnish particulars to all who wish to become members.

Proposed Federation of Roller Societies.

What It Might Accomplish.

SIR,—It was with great pleasure that I read Mr. Tomlinson's letter in last week's CAGE BIRDS, and as the mover of the proposition at the Leeds Club meeting I would like to outline the scheme as I suggested it. The central idea in my mind was to endeavour to capture part of the foreign overseas trade in Rollers, it having been written by Mr. Tweed that about 450,000 birds are exported annually, some 40,000 of these finding their way to this country. To do this we must be a far more united body than ever we have been since I appeared in the fancy, consequently the idea of a Control Board, made up of one or more representatives from each club. This would do away with several clubs issuing rings, as all rings would be issued through the Control Board's secretary to club secretaries. The judging standard would be fixed by this Board, and altered only after they had voted on the matter, twelve months' notice being given of such alteration to clubs before it came in operation. In cases of dispute between a member and his club appeals could be heard by the body, their decision being final.

Now I arrive at what is to me the outstanding feature, and will presume we have got something like cohesion amongst clubs. Every Roller breeder does not breed show birds, and very few breeders who show breed all show birds. If you approach a fancier who breeds a poorer class of birds with regard to joining your club you are asked what is the use, as he cannot afford show birds. We must offer some inducement to get him to join, and the one I propose is a ready sale of his birds, worked in the following manner.

The Control Board would issue to club secretaries, in the same manner as rings, small wicker cages, at so much per dozen. On given dates each club would gather, pack and despatch its quota for sale, of course through the Board, who would take a percentage of all monies received for working expenses. Thus we should have a central distributing agency, who would classify the birds, advertise, and supply the British and foreign markets with all grades of Rollers. Clubs would be financially better off through increased membership, the country would benefit by increased trade, and capital kept at home, and the fancier by an increased turnover.

Mr. Tomlinson's letter suggests to me some fear of injustice to the British Roller C.C. I trust the delegates appointed for the first meeting will be broad-minded and generous enough to allay that fear, as this Society has undoubtedly done good work in the past. I used to be a member, and received nothing but courtesy from its officials, and the last thing I would do would be to cause them hurt in any way. My sole aim is to benefit the Roller fancy generally, by getting complete unity and combined action, and nothing would please me better than to see the genial secretary of the B.R.C.C., Mr. Norris, in stalled as general secretary of a large, wealthy, and powerful organisation, known as the British Roller Canary Club. A new club if you like, formed from the ashes of the old. Times change, and tactics must change with the times. In conclusion, I might say I think Mr. Tomlinson's motto, "Each for all and all for each," absolutely "It." Roller fanciers, the decision is in your own keeping.

A. MONTAGUE.

SIR,—In answer to Mr. Tomlinson's letter, I think he has made a slight mistake in regard to my views of the above and the B.R.C.C. I am a member of the B.R.C.C., the P.R.C.C., and Bolton Club, so that no one can say that I have any prejudice, and I think that the resolution passed by the Leeds Society is the best way out of the difficulty caused by the split between the B.R.C.C. and the P.R.C.C. I am not going to enter into the nature of the differences of the two societies; sufficient it is to know that they are there. Now the Leeds resolution, in my opinion, means that a Board of Control be formed consisting of delegates sent from the different societies, the number of delegates to be according to the number of members. That this board takes over the business of the rings and points competition so that we shall have one ring for the whole of the fancy; that they will fix the prizes and rules of the competition. They will also fix the standard of the Roller song, so that all the birds will be judged from the same standard, and also any other business of vital importance that might affect the Roller fancy from time to time. That a meeting be held either once or twice each year, a different centre being chosen each time, and the different clubs to pay the costs of their own delegates. I think every club will agree that the above view is an extremely fair one, and the decisions of the Board ought to govern the B.R.C.C., the P.R.C.C., and every other club. Of course, all the different clubs will be allowed to conduct their own business in their own way, as the board will have no control over anything except what it is formed for. I am sorry that the date of the conference clashes with the B.R.C.C. show. I don't know whether it can be altered or not, but, if not, I hope the B.R.C.C. will send delegates to Manchester so that they will be able to have a voice in the matter. Hoping that the conference will settle all the differences in the fancy, and that we shall have a thoroughly united hobby.

About Starlings.

SIR,—The "Millgate Monthly" for January, in its "Wayside Walks and Talks by an Observer," says "Starlings are comparatively a recent addition to British birdland, just as Sparrows are in America, and rabbits in Australia. Starlings found their way here from the Continent about sixty or seventy years ago. They have multiplied with astonishing rapidity, and there is no evidence of slackening."

Rabbits as "recent additions to birdland" may be all right, but it is really a fact that Starlings have only been known in Britain for "about sixty or seventy years"? I myself am unfortunately nearing the former of these periods in age, and I can recollect that Starlings were plentiful in my early youth. Perhaps some more experienced ornithologist will tell the ordinary readers of CAGE BIRDS whether the statement quoted is correct. I don't mean the rabbit part of it, but the Starling portion.

HALIFAX O.S.

Annual smoking concert and prize distribution on January 15, headquarters, Plummet Lane Hotel. A large number present. Mr. D. A. Macpherson presided and presented the prizes to winners at the series of members' shows. He said it was very gratifying that our shows had been a success, but two-thirds of the entries were made by the novice, and he hoped exhibitors in the open would let us have our classes better filled. He trusted that the novices who had won gold medals would still continue to show and prove to the champions what can be done. Special winners were: Open Yorks, Burdakin Bros., 58½ points; R. E. Helliwell, and J. Riley. Open Nov., H. Clegg, S. Heap, and J. Corney. Open Brit., D. A. Macpherson. Nov. Yorks, W. Horsman, 76 points, cash and society's gold medal; Sladdin and Baldwin, 71 points, cash and gold medal; H. Ambler, J. L. Thornton, L. Whitlam, Serution and Harris, cash, and two Yorks show cages. Nov. Nov., S. Rolfe, 39½ points, cash and society's gold medal. Nov. Brit., E. Benn. The total value of prizes was £10 4s. A splendid musical programme was provided, the following giving of their best: Messrs. H. Dale, J. Marshall, W. Moran, J. Hamer, and J. Rushion. Mr. R. F. Calvert accompanied. Thanks were accorded to the President, Committee, and to the artistes for so ably entertaining.—J. J. Dunn, Sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, headquarters, Jan. 19, with a large attendance. Vice-chairman, Mr. A. Hayling, chair. Report of the Hon. Sec. and Treas. and balance-sheet presented. The Sec. said that in spite of the apathy shown by many of the members in the early part of the year, when it was considered advisable to suspend the meetings, the latter part of the year had been very encouraging, and a splendid show was held. This resulted in a profit of over £6, which had been given to the local Red Cross Society. Apart from this, the funds of the society were in a very flourishing condition, with a balance in hand of over £11. All officers were re-elected, viz., Pres., Mr. W. Theobald; Chair, Mr. J. Madagan; Vice-Chair, Mr. A. Hayling; Auditors, Messrs. Stevens and Houghton; Asst. Hon. Sec. and Show Manager, Mr. W. Pounsett; Hon. Sec. and Treas., Mr. A. S. Treasure, who remarked that that was the twelfth time in succession that he had been elected. Several new members were proposed, and an attractive syllabus drawn up. The annual show will be held on November 1 and 2.—A. S. Treasure, Hon. Sec.

CODNOR PARK AND EASTWOOD.

Meeting, Three Tuns, Eastwood, Jan. 22. Accounts for Open Show were found correct. One new member was made. Suba. for coming year are due. The society is open to receive new members, subs. 2s. 6d. per annum. Suggested that a series of table shows be held at our monthly meetings, and a special meeting will be held on Feb. 19 to make arrangements; members are requested to attend.—Smith and Lees, Secs.

SCOTTISH ROLLER C.C.

Annual General Meeting, Neilson's Temperance Hotel, Glasgow, Jan. 15. Mr. Nettleship chair. Sec. read a letter from Mr. Best, the Leeds sec., on the proposed federating of Roller clubs. Agreed unanimously that we fall in with scheme, and that one ring be used by all clubs. Officers elected for year.—Pres., Mr. Jackson, vice-pres., Mr. Stewart; committee, Messrs. McGowne, Arrott, West, Anderson, and McKeehan; Sec., Jas. Macdonald, 169, Glasgow-st., Ardrossan, to whom all Roller fanciers desirous of joining should apply.—Jas. Macdonald.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting Jan. 15, Mr. Farrer presiding over a good attendance. Vote of thanks was given to chairman for gift of bird and cage for competition, and a letter conveying thanks and appreciation to Miss Farrer for devoting her time at our show, Dec. 27, to its most successful management. Decided that 2s. per class be paid as prize money for members' show. Specials were paid out. Decided to pay prize money away next meeting, Jan. 29. Members elected: Messrs. T. Taylor, R. Kircaldy, F. Thwaites, J. H. Beadle.—J. Peacock.

WEST STANLEY (Workmen's Club)

Meeting, Jan. 22, Mr. R. Peart was elected chairman, Mr. R. Hutchinson sec. pro tem. Decided to run the patriotic show on Feb. 26. Open to five miles radius. Decided that chairman and sec. get suitable hall for show, and admission tickets printed to be sold at 3d. Fanciers please apply for tickets to Robt. Hutchinson, 58, Joicey-terr., West Stanley, as we would like to have a turnover for those who have given their best for our King and Country. Decided to make 6d. each entry to go for prize money; all ticket money, donations, etc., to go to the wounded soldiers and sailors. Next meeting, Victoria Club, 10.30, Feb. 6. Fanciers please attend and let us have record show and record takings.—R. Hutchinson, Sec., pro tem.

BOURNEMOUTH C.B.A.

Annual General Meeting, Quadrant Restaurant, Jan. 20, Mr. G. W. Jones presiding: the attendance was not so good as in past years. Balance-sheet adopted, showing an increase of £2 18s. 6d. on the year's working, the total balance now being £45 5s. 6d. Decided that officers and committee for past year should stand until after the war, also that membership should be open to the British Isles. Decided that arrangements for show, etc., be made at a later meeting. Those wishing to join the association should apply to the Hon. Sec., G. W. Jones, 156, Holdenhurst-rd.

GUISELEY AND YEADON C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, Jan. 15. Balance-sheet shows a profit on the year's working, after purchasing a silver challenge cup and handing the handsome sum of 10 guineas to the local Belgian Relief Fund. The Members considered the Secretary's report and the balance-sheet satisfactory. We have had an increase in membership of 14, and in addition, made four new members same night. Officers elected for 1916: Chairman, D. Robinson; Vice-Chair, F. Fawcett; Treas., W. H. Dibb; Sec., W. Rose. Decided to have show, July 1. Judge, F. Self. Clayton, Bradford. We are having a supper, Jan. 29, supper to commence at 6.30, at the Regent Hotel.

OPEN NORWICH P.H.C.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/6, post free 1/2.

PAYROLLS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authorities. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc. A Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-fool, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCY PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business note-paper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos, with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 1/250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

DUBMIRE (Workmen's Club) C.B.S.

Meeting, Jan. 23, good number attended. Decided to hold a show on Feb. 19, for the benefit of the St. John's Ambulance and the Red Cross Society, and to ask the members of the Houghton-le-Spring and Hetton-le-Hole C.B. Societies to join us. All proceeds to go towards this good cause.—Geo. T. Lynn, Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Mr. E. J. Banks presided over a good meeting. The auditors, Mr. H. C. Smith and Mr. A. Ball, stated that the accounts of the Charity Show showed a balance to the good of £12 19s. 7d. Resolved that Sec. obtain addresses of local prisoners of war as soon as possible, and all other information, and then call Committee to deal with same. Mr. Maggs was elected to judge Norwich, Mr. H. C. Smith Yorks and Bord., and Mr. D. G. Lewis British and Mules at the Pair Show, Feb. 2. We had a grand Table Show of Yorks., many well-known winners being present, and this being such a great success it was decided to have a Table Show of Norwich at next meeting. Mr. H. C. Smith to judge, Mr. H. James and E. J. Davies promising cash specials to member placing birds nearest the judge's awards. Mr. H. C. Smith won the watch given by Mr. Braille for the bird receiving the highest number of votes as best bird. The following specials were promised for the Pair Show: Mr. Ball, 3 boxes of chocolates; Mr. H. C. Smith, 5/- for Yorks and 2/- for Borders; Mr. Weeks 2/6 for the best buff Yorks. Mr. J. O'Leary was enrolled a member. Nomination of officers for next year will be taken at next meeting. Will all members please let me have their contributions then as I have to produce general fund balance sheet at the March meeting.—E. Thomas.

WEST LONDON F.A.

Annual General Meeting, Headquarters, Windsor Castle, King-st., Hammersmith, Jan. 20, 17 members present. Mr. Turner chair. On the year's working £1 10s. 9d. was added to the treasurer's balance, making a total of £4 14s. 11d., which was considered very satisfactory. Officers elected: Chair, Mr. Turner; vice, Mr. Withers; committee, Messrs. Butterfield, Bevington, Gibbons, Crust, Chappell, Bennett, Onslow, Mears, and Bonniwell (a new member); auditors, Messrs. Gibbons and Crust; sec., Mr. J. Dewhurst. Challenge cups were presented to the winners, viz., Crests, Mr. Turner; Yorks, Mr. Dewhurst; Nor., Mr. Burt. Points prizes followed, champ Nor., Mr. Butterfield 116, amat., Mr. Bevington 176. Nov., Mr. Onslow 91. Mr. Turner after the presentation said he thought we had done well under the stress of this terrible war. We have three members serving in the colours, viz., Messrs. Bevington, Knight, and Gibbons, jun., and he hoped each member would do his best to bring one new member so as to bring the W.L.F.A. up to its old reputation of being the best F.A. in London. Pair Show Feb. 10; Judge, Mr. J. Robson; specials were offered by an old and esteemed member, Mr. J. Freeman, 5s. cash, and Mr. Butterfield, and the meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the chair.—H. Chappell, press corres.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE (East End)

Second Annual Show held in the Assembly Rooms, Byker Bridge End, Nov. 26 and 27, and judging by the grand entry (517 birds in 66 classes) and the number of visitors must have proved a huge success. The hall is not one of the largest but every available space was used to the very best advantage. Almost all varieties of Canaries were represented at the show by some fine specimens, many well known winners at leading shows doing battle. Norwich were a fine display and well up in numbers. It was in this section that the winner of the Manor House bowl for the best young bird in the show was found. A fine buff bouncing buff cock, the property of Mr. J. Morrison, of Byker, which was hard pressed by a little model of a buff marked cock (Border Fancys) owned by Mr. J. Johnston, of Wallsend. As neither of the judges would give way the Committee decided to call in a referee, Mr. J. Rieborough, who gave the vote to the Norwich. Border Fancies were a fine display, as also were the Greens. Yorkshires were a bit disappointing in number, but some good ones were staged. Crests were fairly good in quantity and quality, as were the Cinnamons. The British birds were fairly represented, especially field-moulded Linnets, there being some good birds in this class. The management left nothing to be desired. Mr. J. Hutchinson did duty as Show Manager on the first day; Mr. MacNalling took his place on the Saturday. Mr. J. W. Coutts proved a hard working and ever obliging Secretary, and had every detail in perfect order. He was supported by a good working Committee. Mr. J. Johnston won the President's prize, a silver teapot for most points. Messrs. Archbold and Lascelles winning spl. for second most points, the section specials going to the following: Nor., J. Morrison; Nov., J. Hunter; Crests, T. Bewick; Nov., J. Rushton; Cinn., J. Roy; Nov., R. Busbel; Yorks., Archbold and Lascelles; Nov., Graham; Bord. Fancys, Cleary, W. Espie; Greens, Johnston; Cinn., Johnston; Nov., Bord., Rander; Lizards, Hyslop; Scotch Fancys, Little; Mules, Greenwell; Brit. Birds, J. Johnston. J. Stanger and A. SOUTH-EAST LONDON F. & F.S.

Annual Members' Show at the North Camberwell Constitutional Club, Old Kent Road, Dec. 4. Mr. R. Jackson, the hon. sec., and his hard working committee, deserved a better entry. The challenge cup for best unfledged bred by a member, was won by a smart yellow Yorks. owned by Mr. A. J. Clarke. Mr. Clarke also won special for second best with a buff Yorks. Some very typical Norwich were staged. Mr. George Gardner judged. Nor., Cl. or Tkd. Yell.: 1, Hembrow. Mkd. or Varieg.: 1, Gardner, a varieg. buff, one of the best, if not the best bird in the show. Hens, buff: 1, Gardner, very typical, rare qual. Unfig. Buff: 1, Gardner, chubby varieg. buff, good head, nice feather. Yell.: Both exhibits were buffs. Yorks., Cl. or Tkd.: 1, 2, 3, Saunders. Unfig. Buff: 1, Clarke; 2, 3, Fairman, good feather and well on the leg. Unfig. Yell.: 1, cup, vhc, Clarke; 2, 3, Fairman, splendid type and qual.; vhc, Saunders. A.O.V.: 1, 3, Boswell, leader a sweet little buff green Border; 2, Saunders, nice sized Linnet-Can.

ROSSENDALE F.A.

Although there was a nice collection of special this show, in the Town Hall, Bacup, Nov. 27, was not the success it should have been. Part of the failure is due to the fact that recruiting has made heavy inroads on the fanciers of the district. The special for the best bird in the section fell to a beautifully-spangled Gold Lizard shown by Mr. J. Rukin. Mr. J. Ormerod took that for the best British with a rich coloured, shapely Goldfinch. The birds were nicely staged in a room by themselves, and were well looked after by the committee. Mr. J. Howarth made an obliging and energetic secretary. Mr. C. A. House judged. In Rollers the prizes were divided between Messrs. Ormerod and Rukin. The latter won in each of the Yorks classes with birds of a nice style. Mr. Ormerod won in each of the Brit. classes, and in A.O.V., which were all Lizards, Messrs. Rukin and Teasdale shared the spoil.

LONDON C.B.A.

Meeting, Jan. 18, 2, York Street, St. James's. Mr. Rob. in the chair; good attendance. Details of annual show were settled, and notice of alteration in rules given by several members. Three new members nominated. Sec. reported over 47 has been allotted in special prizes for Canary classes. So now L.C.B.A. members make the show the success it deserves to be.—A. Wallington.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

LARKHALL C.B.A.'s FIRST VENTURE.

So successful it will become an Annual.

Larkhall C.B.A. held its first annual show under the auspices of the Lanarkshire branch of the Red Cross Society in the Drill Hall, Victoria-st., on Jan. 7 and 8. The success of the effort means the establishing of an annual open event, and as the entire proceeds are to be given over to the Red Cross Society, we look for a nice donation being the result of labours so ungrudgingly given and heartily responded to. The Hall is comfortable, spacious, and well lighted from the roof, the temperature was even, and without the slightest draught. The gate was good, visitors thronged in patriotic fashion to the first real cage bird show in the district. Entries were good, encouraged by capital classification, they massed to fully 600 strong, and many of the season's winners were represented. The officials are of the best, from the president to the stewards every one was in this element, kindness to everybody seemed to be the law. Office bearers were: President, Jos. Rindell; vice-president, J. Kennedy; show secretary and treasurer, Allan Thomson; assistant secretary, R. McEwan; show manager, W. P. Campbell; Committee, Messrs. McLean, Kerr, Perrie, Smith, Graham, Marley, Gibb, Clark, and Bone. The judges got through their work in good time, and to the general satisfaction.

CANARY QUERIES

F. J. L., F. L., R.C.B., and G. H.—Replied to by Post.

YORKSHIRE NOT SINGING. (F. Ford).—Certainly, Yorkshires are, as a rule, quite free singers of an uneducated type of song, but, as with all other breeds, it is quite possible to find one now and again that does "more thinking than singing." There is a possibility that the bird is a hen, and you would do well to make yourself quite sure on this point before the breeding season commences, and thus spare yourself possible disappointment. If it is really a cock, the following should very soon bring it out if it is ever likely to be much good as a singer. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts of niger, white millet, teazle and linseed, and on these days give also a morsel of banana, sweet apple, or watercress, provided you can get the latter in a fit condition to use. In the drinking water every second day for a week add 20 drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. Omit the latter in the second week, and give it again as before during the third week.

SEEMS VICIOUS (Pimpo).—The peculiar behaviour of the bird which you describe is simply indicative of a tame bird courting familiarity from you, and I do not think there is anything else wrong with it. The looseness of feather may be more apparent than real, as many birds when thus familiar puff out their plumage a good deal in their efforts to attract attention. Anyway, you may try the treatment advised to "F. Ford" in this issue for a few weeks, but in your case you may add to the sponge cake two drops of cod liver oil emulsion as well as the sherry, and after giving the salts mixture in the water for one week, go on at once and give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. The second week's course with the salts mixture you will omit altogether. If the bird is not quite as well as you would wish, in, say a month, write again, repeating particulars, and I will advise you further, if necessary.

A SNEEZING HABIT (Novice, Norwich).—Really, the best remedy for Canaries that have got into the habit of sneezing is to hustle around and discover the cause and remove it, when the effect will soon remedy itself. Here are the most frequent causes: Cold, direct draughts, which may be only occasional, or constant; sudden extremes of heat and cold, the sneezing developing after the onset of a cold spell; hanging birds in windows, where the fluctuations are generally extreme, and draughts common; hanging near or over burning lights in the evenings, or high up near the ceiling where the air is foul and vitiated, or in a dusty atmosphere. See that any or all of these causes are removed, and then you may treat the birds the same as advised to "F. Ford" in this issue, but instead of giving the medicine advised in that reply give four drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a fortnight. You may also with advantage add two drops of cod liver oil emulsion to the sponge cake mixture in addition to the other items named in that reply.

HOW TO MATE (Miss A. Mischamp).—As you mention having only one pair of birds and two double breeding cages, and yet ask if you could keep two hens in one cage, I take it you mean getting a second hen. If this is so, you would find it more convenient to adopt the following plan of mating the birds: Place a hen in each breeder, and you may leave the slide out so that the hen can have the advantage of the whole cage for exercise from now until time to mate, about the beginning of April. Keep the cock in a cage by himself. A moderate-sized singing cage will do for him. Then, about the end of March, if the birds are in good condition and the hens jumping excitedly from perch to perch, calling to the cock, and clapping their wings, and the cock in good vigorous song, you may start mating by putting in the slide and limiting the hen to one compartment of the breeding cage, and place the cock in the other. Keep them thus until you find the cock singing violently to the hen through the wires at bottom of the centre which divides one compartment from the other, and calling the hen to these wires and feeding her. Then you may put a nest pan in the hen's compartment and remove the slide and allow the cock to run in with her. A few days later, if you see them busy in and out of the nest pan you may offer them a nest bag, and leave them as much as possible to their own designs from this stage. As soon as the hen has laid her clutch of eggs and commenced to sit, remove the cock and repeat the process with the second hen. When No. 2 commences to sit, remove cock, and cage him alone again until No. 1 is again ready for him for the second brood. Both hens will be left to hatch out and rear the young by themselves, which they will do just as well as if the cock were left in permanently. For more precise details, you should get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager would send you for 7d. post free.

GROWTH ON BEAK (Stone Fox).—The substance sent is an adventitious growth of sebaceous matter, which might have commenced as the result of some slight injury, or from natural causes. Such growths are not very uncommon about the head and beak in old birds, and will sometimes disappear, as this might have done, as the result of the bird rubbing or scratching them off when they have reached a certain stage. The bird does not need any special treatment, unless the hole left in beak looks sore, when you may anoint it sparingly daily for a week or so with boracic ointment or Lanocylin. The hole will gradually disappear and the beak assume a normal shape. There is no reason why you should not breed with the bird in the coming season, if it is in good health and condition.

AILING NORWICH COCK (D. W.).—You to have given full particulars about the appearance and symptoms shown by the bird. In the absence of these I cannot advise you so well as I might have done. Keep it in a fairly equable and warm place, free from direct draughts, and bright and healthful. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and in addition give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw every second day, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle. In the water add every second day for a week six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and after this give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. If not quite well in that time write again giving full particulars, and I will advise you further.

DIARRHOEA AND DUAL MATING (Crest).—(1) addition to the staple diet give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, maw, teazle and broken groats every third day, once a week on the intervening days give a similar quantity of crushed dry arrowroot biscuit, and on each of the remaining days give a morsel of banana or raw carrot. To check the loss of feathers add to the drinking water six drops of dilute sulphuric acid and a crystal of sulphate of iron as big as a split pea every third day for two or three weeks. If this does not succeed in preventing the continual loss I am afraid there must be some obscure cause at work which you have not yet discovered or mentioned. Anyway, you may report result of this course in, say, a month. Only time can show whether the feathers of the one bird's neck will be reproduced. Well mix 12 drops of glacial acetic acid in a teaspoonful of glycerine, and slightly moisten the bare skin with this once a week for a month. (2) If you mate a Roller cock with two hens, removing him when each hen begins to sit, and keep him caged alone when not engaged with either hen, leaving the hens to hatch out and rear the young by themselves, there will not be the slightest risk of injuring the cock from overwork. The quality of the chicks will not suffer in the least on account of this dual mating.

GONE WEEZY (H. T. Croydon).—Probably the bird was not a suitable subject to keep in an outdoor aviary, or, possibly, it had not a proper sleeping quarter, where it could roost without being exposed to the weather. Only birds that have been bred and reared under normal conditions of temperature should be selected for keeping in outdoor aviaries. Keep the bird now in a fairly warm place, which need not be overheated, but must be fairly equable and free from direct draughts, or sudden extremes of heat and cold. Do not hang it near or over burning lights in the evenings, or high up near the ceiling. In addition to the staple seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day, and on the alternate days give first a morsel of banana, and next half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and broken groats. In the drinking water add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid and a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a split pea every second day. If the feathers have ceased dropping at the end of a fortnight, stop the iron mixture, and give instead four drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for another fortnight. You should not be feeding him up with egg and biscuit for breeding yet. In fact, it is useless thinking of breeding with him at all, until he is in a very different condition.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

TREATMENT OF CHAFFINCH (C. E. Green).—I am rather surprised to hear your bird refuses to sing, although in the best of health. I would advise you to cage him up separately and make a slight change in his diet. The following should suit him. As a staple food give this seed mixture: Canary and teazle 4 parts each, rape two parts, and linseed 1 part. Give sunflower seed daily. Offer occasionally some smashed nuts, walnuts, or other nuts as a special tit bit. Just a little hemp, say once a week. Let him have a mealworm or two daily, and as the spring advances offer small caterpillars, grubs, earwigs, spiders, greenfly, etc. Greenfood should also be given, such as shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, dandelion, and others. Take a handful of radish, turnip, and rape seeds, and keep moist in a warm corner until it commences to germinate, then cut out a square inch daily, they are particularly fond of this.

CANARY-CHAFFINCH HYBRIDS (Constant Reader).—I am glad to hear you intend to try for the above hybrid. We offered a medal for anyone who could produce a hybrid that had not previously been bred; and the Canary-Chaffinch comes under this heading. I do not know that I can give you any particulars that would help you excepting (and I think this is very important) to feed the Chaffinch as near to nature as you possibly can, and give it plenty of exercise and facilities for bathing. The difficulty is in getting fertile eggs. I have known of several cases of pairing, and of eggs being laid. Of course this is the chief difficulty in all rare hybrid breeding, therefore you can understand that the birds must be in perfect health and in high breeding condition.

THRUSH NOT SINGING (Song Thrush).—You need not despair about your Thrush not singing just yet, as some birds are more backward than others. He certainly should be a singer, considering the price you paid for him. You do not say how you are feeding him, and this is important, as it is necessary to give him good treatment to get the best out of him. He should have a good-sized cage, one about 30 inches in length, and be given a bath on all suitable occasions. Give it early in the morning so that he and his cage are quite dry before roosting time. I would advise you to feed him just now on a good brand of insecticide mixture made slightly damp with scraped raw carrot or boiled potato. He should also have mealworms, beetles, spiders, or any live food you can get hold of, also any fruit, such as apple, banana, etc. If you are interested in these birds and would like to know the proper way to manage them, you had better get one of our Nutshell booklets, No. 4 on the Thrush and Blackbird. It tells you all about them, much more than I can in these answers.

BULLFINCH LOSING FEATHERS (C. R. T. Hutehings).—Yours is a cock Bullfinch, and should of course sing in the spring and summer, but the Bullfinch song is not a noisy production, it is best described as a soft piping note. If you have carefully examined him for red mite and lice by taking him in the hand and blowing up the feathers under the wings and lower part of the body, I am afraid your feeding is at fault, and you are not giving him enough fruit and greenfood. Dissolve as much glaucous salts as will cover a sixpence in two tablespoonsful of water and give for one day only and repeat two days later. Supply soaked seeds and a little soft food twice a week, not both on the same day, and give a piece of apple daily. Just wet the bare place occasionally with fresh lemon juice.

BREEDING LINNET-CANARY HYBRIDS (F. H. Puck).—You should be able to utilize your breeding cage for the pair of birds intended for Mule breeding. I have bred Linnet-Canary Hybrids in quite a small cage, although a large one is much to be preferred, the birds get fat and lazy in a small one, and seldom feed the young so well as they do in the others. (2) I do not use the method you suggest to sex Canaries; you cannot do better than rely on general appearance, colour, and shape of the vent. (3) The seed sent is not the usual small summer rape, but it is a capital sample of rape, beautifully sweet and mild, and I should think the bird would eat it readily.

LINNET MULE FRIGHTENED (Doubtful).—It appears to me that your bird has never been properly steady or perhaps your cage is too small for him, and he is unable to take exercise unless he dashes about. I expect he has injured his foot at some time or other, and you had better examine it, and if swollen bathe it in warm water (not hot) first dissolving a teaspoonful of boracic powder in it. Do this carefully and get someone to clean the cage and perches while you are operating.

BREEDING IN AN AVIARY (Ortsac).—You will have to supply plenty of nesting material, such as moss, cow-hair, a little wool, and feathers, also short lengths of grass and fine roots. Fix up boxes, small flower pots half filled with earth and moss, and old wild birds' nests, any kind will do, place them in odd corners and twist some heather and furze round them, to partly conceal them from observers. In addition to the usual seeds, you will have to give soaked seeds, and all kinds of wild food, such as seeding grass, chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, etc. Put in good big bunches every day when they are nesting. They should also have some kind of soft food, and I do not think you can do better than use a good brand of insecticide mixture as used for Warblers. Watch these replies for the next few months, you may be able to apply some of the information given to suit your own birds.

TREATMENT OF LINNETS (C. H.).—I cannot do better than advise you to get the small Nutshell Booklet on the Linnet, No. 2, post free 3d. from this office. It gives you all the information about feeding, and a good deal also about caging and general treatment. The stock mixture is canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, summer rape, charlock, and linseed one pint each. Particulars about other foods to give them you will find in the little book. For your birds in the outside aviary add 1 pint of hemp seed to the above mixture, but reduce the quantity somewhat during the summer months.

LARK FOOD (Kral).—Thanks for sending me the sample of your Lark food. There is no doubt the recipe given makes a splendid food, good enough for almost any softbill. I must congratulate you upon the careful way in which you have made it, it comes out splendidly. If you add crushed hemp to it, crush it fresh daily, you can moisten it as you suggest, and occasionally do so with a little warm milk. Glad to hear our advice has been useful to you.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

GRIMSON-CRESTED CARDINAL WITH COLD (E.T.S.A.).—Get the following mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine in equal parts, and put half a teaspoonful of this mixture in the drinking water (one ounce should suffice) daily until the cold yields. Add any kind of ripe fruit it will eat to its "bill of fare." The cold should yield to the treatment in its present quarters, and it will be better not to change these if it can be avoided. However, if the cold should prove obstinate, then you must remove the bird to a warm room, and keep it there till spring is well advanced; of course, treating it as above. Only a glass or china drinker must be used when giving drugs.

TO HASTEN A MOULT (B. J.).—An abnormal moult is sometimes produced by changing the bird suddenly from cold to warm treatment, or vice-versa, but I cannot advise this, as the bird may be affected adversely thereby. Commence with the tail and draw the stumps, say, two at a time, at intervals of several days. The feathers should then be reproduced in the course of a month, or a little longer. After the tail has been so treated you can proceed with the wings in a similar manner, but you must go carefully, as it by no means follows that because it has remained at liberty with poultry for some months it will continue to do so when the power of flight returns. Apart from one of these methods, the latter for preference, you must await the ordinary course of the moult. A bird often experiences difficulty in shedding the stumps of cut feathers, and often requires to have the stumps removed as above, and I really advise this course.

FOREIGN SEED-EATERS (Foxe).—The wires of most Canary cages are half-inch apart, and this would suffice to contain most foreign hardbills, and would mostly confine the small Waxbills, unless the wire got bent, though wires 3-in. apart are better for the Waxbills. In your uncoccupied Canary cages you could keep such as: Silverbills, Bengalese, Bib Finches, Zebra Finches, Cuthroats, Spice Birds, Bronze-wing Mannikins, Cordon Bleus, Alario Finch, Cuban Finch, Gouldian Finch, Long-tailed Grass Finch, and Saffron Finch. You could also keep hatcher Weavers (Bishops) for the sake of their lovely plumage, such as Grenadier, Scarlet, Orange, Napoleon, etc. These all live on seed, but need a few mealworms at moulting time, or one or two per diem regularly. Re your Javas, the canary and millet will suffice. Keep a small quantity of paddy rice by you and give a little twice a week as change. Give them an occasional millet spray for the purpose. When they do nest, most will take a little of some good soft food mixture, but they mainly rear their young on seed and green food. When I kept them in cages (very many years ago) they used to be pretty keen after seeding and flowering grass, and also to pick over other garden weeds.

OUTDOOR AVIARY (Mixed Birds).—I am pleased to note you have an outdoor aviary, but cannot advise the inclusion of Budgerigars with Finches. It is far better to make it either a Finch or Parakeet aviary. With such British species as you wish to keep, you could keep Zebra, Alario, Green Singing, Bib, Ribbon, and Long-tailed Grass Finches, Silverbills, Bengalese, Spice Birds, Bronze Mannikins, and, say, three hatcher Weavers (Orange, Napoleon, and Madagascar), a pair of Red-billed Weavers, and an odd cock Red-crested Cardinal, which would give nice variety and some good colour. I should advise you to remove the rock plants and mosses (saxifrages, I expect), grasses, an evergreen, and one or two of the plants of the evergreen variety. Yes, a cock Green will mate with a hen Yellow Budgerigar. Their progeny, however, would be Green, with the exception of an odd Yellow bird turning up at intervals. But, I repeat, you must not put Budgerigars with Finches. The risk (a real one) must be your own. Sooner or later disaster comes, though you may enjoy immunity for quite a period. Moreover, they would soon eat up all the plant life in the aviary.

PARALYZED BUDGERIGAR (Betty).—Leave her the cuttlebone and wood to amuse herself with, also the young Budgie, and you must just let her live her little life in her own way under the circumstances, giving her relief whenever egg-binding occurs. If the bird were mine I should consider it kinder to painlessly destroy it than to leave it in this semi-paralyzed condition, even though apparently happy. Of course, if a matter of sentiment stands in the way, there is no actual cruelty unless her condition becomes more acute. As regards palliative measures, I can add nothing to my previous reply.

POST MORTEMES.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the less will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

"John Smith," Everton.—Your letter is libellous, and we cannot see our way to publish it.

Anxious Reader.—Please see our rule as to names and addresses of correspondents. In any case, the secretary of the show in question should be able to answer your questions.

A. Jenkins.—The matter of which you write concerns the societies which held the shows, and if you have grounds of protest you should communicate them to the committees. Questions of the nature you send cannot be answered in our columns.

Rook or Crow? (W. Stewart).—Strictly speaking, the word "Crow" applies to a large family of birds, including the Rook, Chough, Jay, Nutcracker, Magpie, Raven, and many foreign birds (a Bird of Paradise, for instance, is a Crow). As generally understood, however, especially in an argument such as yours, which we may say is continually cropping up as an old friend, the word "Crow" means either the Black (Carrion) Crow or the Grey (Hooded) Crow, while the Rook is the familiar bird which is seen in flocks over the whole of our country. The Rook, unless it be a very young bird, may be easily distinguished, not only by its gregarious habit, but by the bare skin in front of its eyes. This is visible from a considerable distance. You will see, therefore, that while a Rook is a Crow, a Crow is not a Rook. The answer to your second question is "No."

RADCLIFFE C.B.S.

Show held Dec. 4, Conservative Club, Church St. The room was ideal for holding a cage bird show, being well supplied with light, and close to the railway. The show was a complete success, 14 more entries than at our last show. Many well-known fanciers paid us a visit and promised their support if we held an open show, which may be next season. The class for householders, 14 entries, should improve each show, judging by what we heard. Mr. J. Chambers, Burley Hill, judged. In Yorks., notable birds were seen in Mr. Spiby's buff cock, the Liverpool winner, and Mr. W. Pickup's 2nd Ardwick. Mr. W. Noonan also staged some nice birds. Among the Norwich Mr. J. Allen's buff cock stood out prominent, securing special best bird.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING ADVERTISEMENTS.

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous issue, Page and Column are stated by the advertiser.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

IDEAL RINGS.—All embossed numbers, 6d. per dozen, 2/- gross.

6.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter of arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Meadowlarks? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2d. from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

THE VERDICT

By one and all who inspect my wonderful collection is—

"Never seen anything like it before."

The others, by the hundred, are as follows: "Burton-on-Trent, Jan. 29, 1916.—Birds arrived safely on Friday morning. I am delighted with them. I think they are a grand pair and well matched.—A. E. Cliff."

Superlative Value in Norwich and Yorkshires.

EXTRAORDINARY TALKING GREY PARROT—The most polished and polite bird living; one in a million which can be made to talk at demand. Will hold a conversation with any lady and will follow about like a dog. Most pertinacious talker and gossip, especially when you do not answer her. "Thank you," "Au revoir, bon soir," "Come on, Rosie. What do you say?" "Come on, Kitty," "Ta-ta, good-bye," "Come on, Agnes," "Where's Agnes?" "Hello, echo; what do you say?" "It's cold, cold, cold." Shouts "Willie!" "Express," "Where's the kitten? Puss, puss, puss," "Germans, then pauses, and in a voice of command, "Fire, fire. Germans shut up." Imitates police, tram, motor, dog, cat, "Puss, puss, puss," then says, "Lie down, dog," "Polly wants a drink; Polly wants her tea," "Where's your pretty wing, Polly?" "Kitty, Kitty, come on Kitty; go down now," "What's to do, Kitty," "Kiss me, Polly," and then kisses. "Scratch Polly, Zoie," scolds, "Willie get the paper," "Good morning; it's a nice morning. Is Agnes better?" "Give Agnes medicine," "Little Willie at the front. I—don't—think," "1, 2, 3, 4, Polly at the cottage door," "Mother, don't you hear me? Polly got no dinner," "Mother's going to the pictures," "God bless you," "Good-bye, funny face," then shakes hands, "Cock-a-doodledoo, my lady's lost her shoe," "Mother, come on; you know it," "Hello there, pretty Polly," "Is father going out?" "Where is my pocket book?" "Polly, Polly," "Is that cart ready, Joe, Joe?" "Hello, Polly, how are you getting on there?" "Good-night love; are you going to bed?" "Are you going to shut up?" "Mother wants a biscuit," "Good-night, love, and cover Polly up," "Polly, you will get the cane," "There's someone in the coal yard." ... £15 0 0

We are holding a smoking concert and presentation of prizes at the Red Lion Hotel, Stoke-on-Trent, on Feb. 7, at 8, writes Mr. J. Glover, Hon. Sec., Stoke-on-Trent C.B.A. All fanciers are welcome, and a real good time is in store.

The balance-sheet of the Newcastle E. End C.B.S. shows that after paying all entry money, and £2 15s. as special prize-money at the annual show, and £4 6s. 6d. for the Manor House bowl, there is a balance in hand of £30 5s. 2d., as against £15 10s. brought forward.

The drawing of my Yorkshire Canary on your front page of Jan. 22, writes Mr. A. G. Cant, does your artist credit. The bird is peculiarly variegated, and the drawing is perfect. He should be a valuable stock bird as a variegated yellow is a useful specimen for a breeder.

Mr. E. W. Allsopp writes that he shipped a small consignment of Plainheads in November last per the s.s. "Metagama" to Toronto, and has since received word of landing all safely, even without a cold. The business, he says, was due to a small advt. appearing in CAGE BIRDS.

We regret to find that the advertisement of Messrs. J. Howard and Sons, London and Norwich, which, under the heading of "Wanted for Export," has for some time been a weekly feature of our advt. columns, was accidentally omitted from our last week's issue. The advt. appears again in this issue.

There seems to be some misunderstanding that Stanley and District F.F. and C.B.S. patriotic show is only for club members, writes Mr. Robt. Hutchinson, Sec. (pro tem.), 58, Jocey Terrace, West Stanley. It is for all fanciers within a radius of five miles, so let us have a big attendance at the next meeting, Feb. 6, at Victoria Club, at 10.30. I have plenty of tickets to sell at 3d. each.

I thank you for the honour you have done me in depicting my winning unflinching buff Norwich in your grand Birthday Number of CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. G. W. Saunders. Though not one of the largest, he is of good type and quality, so it is not always the largest birds that win, as some would have us believe, for we still have some judges who will put type and quality before mere size. I have sold the bird to a London fancier at a nice figure, and I am pleased to see he has proved himself worthy of a red ticket for his new owner.

The December issue of "Bird Notes," the Journal of the Foreign Bird Club, completes Vol. 6 of the New Series, and has a full index to the contents of the volume. It contains accounts of the breeding of the Melba Finch by Mr. H. Willford; the Lesser Saffron Finch, by Mr. Maurice Amsler, and the Chinese Greenfinch, by Mr. W. Shore-Baily. Mr. Whittier concludes his "Ornithological Diary from the Punjab," and among the other articles is a most interesting account by Mrs. E. L. Beadnell of the rearing of a young Cuckoo by a Robin.

The Yellow Wagtail as a Resident Bird.

Answering a correspondent who wishes to know where the Yellow Wagtail spends the winter, "W. C." of the "Manchester Dispatch," says: "Of late years there has been a tendency to regard this bird as migratory, but the great bulk are to be found in the southern counties, where they escape the severe weather of the north."

(We had an idea that the Yellow Wagtail spent its winter in West Africa. Still, we live and learn.)

An Outside Seed Hopper.

By F. THOMAS (Ramsgate).

A Handy Contrivance to Lessen the Labour of the Busy Bird-keeper.

THERE is an old saying that necessity is the mother of invention, and necessity has prompted me to invent a seed-box for busy fanciers who, like myself, are perhaps through the war obliged to work short-handed in their business, so that their birds do not get quite the attention they otherwise would.

Possibly they have found that unless the seed-box is emptied fairly often a lot of dust accumulates at the bottom, and the seed clogs together. To obviate this, I made some boxes like the sketch, and they answer splendidly. The dust drops through the perforated zinc, and the seed is perfectly clean.

By putting the narrow slip of glass in the centre, the space between the two bits of glass can be filled, and as the birds feed the seed drops down in hopper fashion, which is handy if you have a number of birds in a cage together.

The hopper may, of course, be made of any size, either in respect of length or height, according to the fancier's requirements. I have made some long enough to supply two partitions, and a brother fancier seeing them thought it a good idea, hence the reason I'm sending it to CAGE BIRDS for the benefit of the Fancy in general. The top edge of the box next to the cage is bevelled off, so that the seeds or husks have no top edge to rest on.

If very small seeds, such as maw seed, are used, the false bottom should be of wire gauze instead of perforated zinc, or the smaller seeds would drop through with the dust. Figure 1 represents one of the end pieces, showing the grooves for the two glasses and the perforated zinc; Fig. 2 shows the hopper complete.

We have engaged as three of the judges for our open show, Oct. 20-21, Messrs. H. W. Battye, J. C. Barnes, and C. Houlton, write Messrs. Green and Metcalfe, Secs., Liverpool O.S.

A lighthouse-keeper reports that whereas before the institution of bird-rests at the lighthouses innumerable birds perished on the migratory journey, it is now a very rare occurrence to pick up any dead birds. As the vast majority of birds which formerly met their death belonged to the smaller insectivorous species, the new conditions must be all to the good of agriculture.

OBITUARY.

MR. W. H. SYMES (Bradford).

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. W. Helliwell, sec., that I have to acquaint members of the City of Bradford O.S. of the very sudden death of our esteemed member, W. H. Symes. I know all will join me in offering our sympathy to his wife in her great loss.

The Avicultural Magazine, the Journal of the Avicultural Society, of January, opens with an article by Dr. A. G. Butler on the Zosterops (White-eyes). The article is illustrated by some charming photographs from life by Mr. Geo. Lowe. Mr. F. E. Blaauw contributes notes on Humming Birds in nature, and among the other articles are "Spring in New South Wales," by G. A. Heumann; "The American Bittern in Captivity," by Innis Dorrien-Smith; and "Our Winter Breakfast Guests," by Mrs. K. Curry.

Chaffinches in London.

Cock Robins and Hen Robins.

I am asked, says the writer of Nature Notes in the "Oldham Weekly Chronicle," why it is that the Robins which come to our houses in winter are always cocks. To be frank, I had never before thought of this, and have no observations to work upon. The plumages are exactly alike in both sexes, although this fact is not at all well known. Some men claim an ability to tell a cock from a hen, even in winter, by a faint difference in attitude and actions; but the usual test lies in the voice, for the cock has a sweet song, while the hen utters nothing beyond the familiar click or the thin wail.

Affairs of the Southern Cole asks us to urge upon all members the necessity of attending, or of sending in their voting papers to him at 51, Melbourne Grove, East Dulwich, S.E., if they find it will be impossible to be present at the meeting.

SOME HANDY APPLIANCES.

By J. W. WILSON.

It may be thought a curious commencement to notes on appliances to mention mice, but, next to red mite, mice are the worst enemies of the bird-keeper. Where there is bird seed there is sure to be mice, and recent correspondence in CAGE BIRDS testifies to the annoyance caused by these little rodents. If they get into a vessel containing seed, they not only steal the seed, but they contaminate that which they do not eat, and seed which has been fouled by mice is a deadly poison.

The first consideration of every bird-keeper, therefore, should be to keep the mice from his stock of seed, and this is fortunately an easy and inexpensive matter. Whether the stock be large or small, it should be kept in tins, and such tins are obtainable cheaply, either as having already contained household necessities, or from the grocer. Each kind of seed should have its separate tin which should be clearly labelled.

A seed mill is another article which no bird room should be without. Many seeds, such as sunflower, beech mast, etc., require breaking before being given to the birds, and if a mill is not at hand, they are either withheld from the birds or are only given to them after very considerable trouble in their preparation. Mills which will answer this purpose are inexpensive, and repay their cost in a very short time.

Where hard-boiled egg is used, and there are few bird-rooms in which it is otherwise than indispensable, some means of preparing it other than mincing it with a fork is very necessary. Small sieves with strong wire bottoms answer the purpose nicely, or a piece of perforated zinc may be fastened to four strips of wood. The egg may then easily be rubbed through the holes by using a knife or a piece of hard wood, or even with the ball of the thumb if only a small quantity is needed at a time.

About Baths.

There is no need to say that a bird is not healthy unless it is always ready for its daily bath. Baths may be purchased of all shapes and sizes, but of whatever pattern they be the interior must not be dark, or the birds will not go into them. The best shape therefore is a square wood and wire box, like a cage with one side taken out. Pieces of removable glass may easily be fitted to the three sides, and will prevent any splashing of the water to the outside of the bath, and at the same time will not obscure the light. Inside of this box should be a porcelain or glass tray which just fits it, and is easily removed for cleaning.

The proper bath for an aviary of birds is a matter which is of some importance, for unless some precautions are taken to minimise the effect of the splashing of a number of birds, the floor of the aviary becomes unpleasantly wet, and in time unsanitary. An admirable method is to have two square zinc trays, about an inch deep, one considerably smaller than the other, so that when the one is placed inside the other a fairly wide space extends all round. Then if the smaller one is filled with water the larger one will catch most or all of the splashes, and the floor of the aviary will not be wetted.

A New Use for a Hairpin.

A holder for a piece of apple or other fruit may easily be made from a lady's hairpin. Bend up the two points into a hook shape, hang the hairpin on the inside of the cage around one of the wires so that it rests on the crossbar, and the holder is ready for use. A longer piece of wire bent into the same shape, and also with the ends turned into hooks will, if bent again at right angles, make a handy appliance for keeping open a sliding door in a cage-front while the bath is in use. One part lies on the top of the cage and the top bar of the door is slipped into the hooks.

A Novel Nest Box.

Get a penny wooden, square, nest box and a straw "envelope" from a wine bottle. Split the envelope partly up from the wide end, fasten the bottom around the box by tacks through a narrow piece of tin, and a warm and cosy nest box will be formed for small foreigners or for birds in an outdoor aviary. A small perch may easily be fitted to the front edge of the box by a bent wire.

To Circumvent the Mice.

When mice are troublesome in an aviary, turn a flower-pot upside-down, stand on this a bottle of any kind, to the centre of a square piece of wood; fix a peg which will fit into the neck of the bottle, and you have a seed stand which no mouse can climb.

A FINE SHOW AT HOLBORN.

The grand Joint Members' Cage Bird show, under the auspices of the London C.B.A., the National British Bird and Mule Club, and the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League, was held on Wednesday and Thursday this week at the Holborn Town Hall. A comprehensive schedule had been provided, and met with a fairly generous response, a capital entry of 800 birds being staged.

The Canary section was well supported, especially by the Crest and Crestbred exhibitors, this being one of the best collection of birds ever staged; many very high-class birds were on view.

Yorkshires, although not heavy in numbers, were an extremely high-class collection, some of the finest specimens of the breed being staged, all in the pink of condition. Norwich were not so numerous, but good in quality, shape and colour. Border Fancies were somewhat weak in numbers, but good in quality.

The collection of British Finches was quite a feature of the show, competition being very keen all through—some excellent specimens being staged, while the Mules and Hybrids also came out well, many noted winners again putting in an appearance and occupying their usual prominent positions in the prize lists. The reputed Thrush-Blackbird Hybrids were not accepted by the judge, Mr. Robson, and stood cardless.

The Foreign Bird section was again an excellent one, although hardly so large as at previous club shows. Many rare and beautiful birds were staged in this section, especially the winning Malachite Sunbird shown by Hon. Mrs. Bourke, staged in faultless condition. Parrots and Parakeets were also a very interesting collection.

The birds were staged at a convenient height, the room being well heated, and there was a capital attendance of the public; in fact the space between the benches was at times impassable.

The judges were: Yorkshire, Mr. R. L. Crisp; other Canary classes and Hybrids, Mr. J. Robson; British Hardbills, Mr. C. Prior; Softbills, etc., Mr. J. Dewhurst; Foreign, Messrs. C. Cooper and R. J. Watts.

The show had only just opened at the time of going to press, and catalogues and list of special prize-winners were not available. A fully detailed report will be given in next week's CAGE BIRDS.

"From my last advert. in the Foreign Bird Column of CAGE BIRDS I received over 30 replies from all parts of England and Wales. This speaks well for the great circulation of your paper in these times of stress."—F. H. PERRY (Rhyl).

"The last advert. I had in for Canaries got me a good sale. I could have sold above 50 times, thanks to your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS."—J. TAYLOR (Alfreton).

Improper and Proper Cages.

By BIRD LOVER.

An Article which shows how Pet Birds should be Housed so as to keep them in Health and Happiness

UNFORTUNATELY one of the last things which enter the thoughts of the majority of those who think of keeping a bird or a few birds in the cage. If they were only to realise that in whatever habitation the bird is put there it has to remain for good or for ill, the cage would be the first consideration rather than the last.

Unfortunately also, about the very worst kind of cage in which a bird may be kept is the one mostly used by those who keep only one bird, or only a few. That is, the all-wire cage, which is the stock in trade of the general ironmonger. These cages generally, besides exposing the inmates to every draught that blows, and to every change of temperature that occurs in the living-room in which they are so frequently hung, are entirely of the wrong proportions; their height is more than their width, and their floor space is inadequate.

Further, they are generally fitted with two perches, which are not only wrongly placed, i.e., one across the other, so that the bottom one gets soiled by the bird's droppings, but are made smooth and round, and not nearly of sufficient thickness. When a bird has continually to use a thin round perch, its claws get overgrown, and the necessary cutting only aggravates the evil, for a cut claw grows apace, and soon needs more cutting.

A Haven for Red Mite.

The wooden "boss," or block, which is generally inside the cone-shaped top which carries the totally unnecessary swing and the ring by which the cage is hung, forms an ideal hiding and breeding-place for the wicked little pests known as red mite, and it is scarcely too much to say that half the troubles which affect "pet" birds are due to the presence of these blood-sucking parasites; a presence which is totally unsuspected by the fond owner of the bird.

A cage for any kind of bird should be of what is known as the "box" pattern. Such a cage is entirely closed in excepting at the front, which is of wire, and affords not only partial seclusion for the inmate, but protection against draughts and other evil influences. The floor space should not be less than one square foot for a bird the size of a Canary (16 inches by 12 is better), and it should be from 10 to 12 inches in height.

The Things that Matter.

Such a cage may be made to be quite as "ornamental" as the contraptions of all wire, or wood and wire, that are so universally used by novices in bird-keeping. It may be of polished mahogany or other fancy wood, and can be finished off with a shaped pediment if desired. So far as the bird is concerned, however, ornament is not a consideration. The things that are vital to its well-being are comfort, cleanliness, and reasonable room for exercise, and these are all to be had at very little cost, certainly less than the cost of an all-wire "drawing-room" cage.

But whether the cage be cheap or expensive, one point is imperative; it should be so made that there are absolutely no crevices or cracks for the deadly red mite. A cage as it comes from the maker should be carefully inspected before use. A few extra brads will tighten up any gaps, and a coat or two of enamel inside and out, of a colour to the taste of the owner, will not only improve its appearance, but hermetically seal up all crevices. A cage so finished can be kept absolutely clean with a minimum of trouble, and a very occasional re-enamelling will keep it "as good as new."

The wire front should be of the "punched bar" type, with the food and water openings large enough for the bird to get its head through with comfort, and without damaging its neck feathers. A large door, which slides up and down, should form part of this front, to give facility for hanging on the ever-necessary bath. The whole front should be easily removable, for an occasional thorough cleaning or re-enamelling the interior of the cage, and it should be enamelled to match the interior of the cage.

In the interests of Tidiness.

The bottom rail should be of a good depth, say, three inches wide, and this, with a sand drawer one inch deep, will form a sufficient screen to keep the sand and seed husks inside the cage, rather than about the floor of the room. One perch should run along the whole length of the cage at the front, level with the top of the bottom rail, to allow the bird easy access to its food and water. Two or three perches should be screwed to the back of the cage, and these should not quite reach the front wires, so that the bird cannot sit close to the bars and foul the feeding perch.

These cross perches should be preferably of differing thicknesses, but if they are uniform in thickness, then they should be quite half an inch wide and three-eighths of an inch thick. Two of them may be placed level with the feeding perch, and one or more sufficiently below the top of the cage to allow the bird comfortable headroom. The wider the perches are apart the better for the well-being of the bird, as the jumping from perch to perch affords healthy exercise, and if the bird has to use its wings in the "jump" so much the better.

A door in one end of the cage is an optional matter, but it has its uses. A bird will readily go through the end of its permanent cage into a temporary one placed outside the open door, and if it has to be caught out the end door offers an easier means than the sliding door in the wire front.

A spare sand tray is a great convenience. Nervous birds are apt to be badly frightened by cleaning operations, and if there be a spare sand tray the soiled one may be removed and a fresh one substituted without scaring the bird. Provided there are more cages than one, one extra drawer will, of course, suffice for cleaning out any or all of them, that is, if the cages be of uniform size.

HOW TO CAGE BRITISH BIRDS.

By F. Z. S.

A Plea for Uniformity in the Birdroom.

It adds much to the appearance of a bird-room if the cages are of uniform size. They can then be disposed on racks or shelves, and every available inch of wall space may be used, but when they are of different heights the wall space required for any row is equal to the height of the largest one, and over the smaller cages there is waste space, while if they are of different depths from front to back there is waste room on the shelves in front of the smaller ones, and a skeleton rack, which is greatly to be preferred to a range of shelves, cannot be used at all. It is scarcely necessary to say also that the interiors should be painted all of the same colour, for nothing looks worse than a dozen or more cages of all the colours of Joseph's coat.

A very nice size for a cage for a British Finch or small softbill is 18 inches long, 14 high, and 10 deep. It should, of course be of the box pattern, and the front should be of punched bars so as to be easily removable in one piece. Cages are usually made with a small door called a bolting door, in one end, generally the right hand end, but if they are made in pairs, one with the small door in the right-hand end and the other at the left hand, and then if the opposite ends be made so that one end takes out almost entirely, the removable piece being secured by buttons, any pair may be converted into a flight 36 inches long when required, and restored to single cages in a moment.

The wires of the fronts should be half an inch apart; this is sufficiently close for any British bird, and the view of the interior of the cage is not obscured, as it is with closer wires. The painting of the wires is a matter of choice; some like them of the same colour as the interior of the cage, others enamel them black as the outside.

Every cage for a British Finch should be provided with two seed hoppers, one to contain simply Spanish canary seed or a mixture of canary and summer rape, and the other for a mixture of various seeds, according to the season or the requirements of the birds from time to time. The drinker should be of glass or china, for either of these is much more easily kept clean than metal, besides which, it is sometimes necessary to use drugs, and the action of these on a tin or zinc drinker may entirely pervert their purpose.

The sand-tray may be of wood, but there is much to be said in favour of a metal bottom. It is easily cleaned, and the cleaning when done is thorough. Unpleasant smells in the bird-room need never exist if zinc-bottomed sand trays are used, and with insectivorous or fruit-eating birds they become almost a necessity.

The large insectivorous birds need of course a cage of dimensions to suit their size. A Chough or a Magpie for instance requires a cage not less than 3ft. long, 2ft. high, and 18in. deep. To endeavour to keep birds of this kind in smaller cages is only to court failure, not to speak of the discomfort involved to the birds.

Correspondence.

An All-British Bird Show.

SIR,—I am very pleased to see Mr. Metcalf still to the fore in the Cage Bird Fancy. He is one of the right men for the job; I will do my best for his welfare, and for the good of the Fancy. I will offer to guarantee full prize-money in two classes, 1 in Mule section and 1 in British section.

R. D. PARLETT.

The Steadying of Yellowhammers.

SIR,—I should like to ask, through the correspondence columns in CAGE BIRDS, if any British Bird exhibitor will kindly tell me how to steady a Yellowhammer, and the best cage to use for that purpose. A short time ago Mrs. Dalton wrote an article on the above bird, but it was minus the information I require. Thanking you in anticipation.

Yorkshire Greens for Novices.

SIR,—The rise in the advt. rate will not make any difference to me for this season, as I have sold all the birds I had for sale. I could not have wished for better results from the three adverts I had in CAGE BIRDS. I did not think the Yorkshire Green was in such demand, although it is one of the most beautiful birds in the Fancy, and I am sure one of the most useful. I have had a very successful time with them, and if it be of any use I will give your readers my methods of feeding and breeding. Novices would be well advised when taking up the Fancy to start with the Yorkshire Green, as it does away with the necessity of colour feeding, and lots of failures. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

A. MOCKRIDGE.

[We are sure that the notes kindly promised by Mr. Mockridge would be of interest to our readers, and we shall be glad to have the opportunity of publishing them. EDITOR, CAGE BIRDS.]

Catching Mice in the Bird-room.

An Old, But Effective Method.

SIR,—It seems to surpass the wit of man to entirely shut out these pests from the bird-room. I accidentally found out a very efficient method of thinning their ranks in my aviary. Procure a piece of stout board four or five inches wide. Set this on its edge on the floor with the top edge leaning against the wall, in such a way that there is an inch or so of space behind it. Every time you enter the bird-room make a point of stooping down and forcing the board hard against the wall. I have killed many mice in this way, sometimes two and three at a time. The space behind the board soon becomes a favourite refuge for them, and you will frequently see a mouse, when surprised, make for it rather than for its hole. In fact, they seem to use it at all times as a feeding place, carrying seeds there to be eaten at leisure. The board may be as long as can be conveniently manipulated, regard being had to the fact that pressure must be applied firmly over the whole space without any fumbling. I hope this wrinkle will be of use to fellow bird-keepers, and I shall be very glad to hear through your columns of favourable results.

Should Britishers be Shown in Uniform Cages?

SIR,—I notice with pleasure that British bird fanciers seem to be waking up to the fact that if something is not done soon exhibiting will be a thing of the past. Personally I don't believe the fancy is declining in the least, but exhibiting undoubtedly is, and probably from the same cause that decided me to keep my birds at home. Unfortunately clique judges are rampant in England, and they do undoubtedly look after the birds of their friends or members of the society to which they themselves belong. I was so disgusted with my experiences of judges that I gave up exhibiting, and only keep a few birds for pleasure. You have only to read the reports of shows to see how often some member of the committee has swept the deck. Cages catch the judge's eye right across the room. The bird does not count, not a bit. Some few years ago I visited a show, and among the winning British was a bird as wild as possible, in winter plumage, and in the prettiest of cages possible; an arrangement of reeds, grass, and imitation frost. The owner had several exhibits, and they were all among the money, though there was not a real exhibition bird among the lot. He then advertised his birds at fancy prices, although the real key to his success was that he was a member of the local committee. I do not say emphatically that there was dirty work at the cross roads, but this kind of thing gives other would-be exhibitors a nasty taste in the mouth. Now, till the British birds.

hybrids, foreign, etc., are put down in the same manner that Canaries are, in uniform show cages, the exhibiting of them will steadily decline. Let us have standard cages, plain drinkers, and the same pattern of food boxes, and, above all, honest and fair judging; then I firmly believe the fancy will have a fillip. It is nearly 20 years since I exhibited, but I would do so again if fancy and distinctive cages were done away with. Judges should be specialists. I remember a well-known Halifax exhibitor who used to show a remarkably good Ring Ousel. I heard a well-known Canary judge say he would have disqualified this bird as being wrong class, as it was pied. He thought in his ignorance that it was a pied Blackbird.

Closed Rings for the Northern Yorkshire C.C.

SIR,—At the general meeting of the above club I was requested to obtain numbered closed rings for those fanciers who desire to use them, and it is necessary that I should know at the commencement of the breeding season how many are required. Every member present at the meeting gave me his order. If anyone who was unable to be present is going to use closed rings, and will let me know how many he requires, I will book his order. The price will be 1s. 1d. per dozen, postage free, any profit made will be given to the club, and go towards special prizes to be given during the coming show season. I may say that in the past I have been disappointed in the closed ring competitions, and this last season, in addition to the cup, I gave three specials, yet only three members competed. The cup still runs, but I think it probable that its conditions may be altered this coming season. Up to the present I have orders for 24 dozen rings for this season, and if this points to a greater interest in the rings I will be pleased to help in the way of specials to the best of my ability.

How the Roller Canaries Went to Ohio.

SIR,—A few weeks ago, a prominent member of the Roller Club, received an application for birds for U.S.A., so he wrote to me, asking if I would kindly tell him how I packed some that I sent in December, 1913. I am sending an account of my method, in case it may be useful to others.

A shipping agent said the carriage would be about 30s., and the company would not insure the birds unless I paid carriage; so I sent the birds carriage forward. A friend showed me an illustration in the "Daily Sketch" for Nov. 24, 1913, entitled "Where it is really winter; Ohio." The snow was 24in. deep, and that is where my hardy little Rollers arrived the following month. A local man made me a double-decked double breeder. I fixed two penny loaf tins at the back of each, and filled them with seed, then put the Roller hems in the upper cage, and the cock bird in the lower one; all could fly about. I put seed hoppers outside each cage, and also sent a large tin of seed with them. I put open drinkers, as well as blue glass-topped ones, so that the birds would not be without water if the stewards should be too busy for a time to attend to them. Then I tacked a piece of blanket over the front of the cage, and over that I fastened a loose piece of American cloth. On the outside of it I wrote "Please raise this if these birds are in a temperature over 60 degrees," and on the inside I fastened a label with "Kindly drop cover, if these birds are in a temperature under 60 degrees." They went by the "Cedric" on Dec. 13, 1913; they were ten days out at sea, and two days on rail; all arrived at their destination, in the pink of condition. All had a bath, then a banquet of fruit and egg-food; then the cock bird began to sing, and the purchaser was delighted with him, and with the hens also; he said they were almost tame. He complimented me on the way I had packed them, and said there was quite a lot of seed in the little loaf tins; he very kindly sent me a memento of our pleasant transaction.

An Impudent Forgery.

A Disclaimer from Everton.

Sir,—I notice in this week's CAGE BIRDS a note under "General" signed John Smith, Everton. I beg to state that as far as I know I am the only John Smith, Everton, exhibitor of Canaries, and wish to state that I have no knowledge whatever about the letter written you,

JOHN SMITH.

18, St. Domingo Grove, Everton.

[The letter in reply to which our note was written purported to come from "John Smith, 18, St. Domingo Grove, Everton," the same name and address as the above. The writing, however, is totally different. Enquiries as to the bona-fides of the letter in question were already in hand, and they will doubtless prove that the letter was, as we suspected, a forgery. Our correspondent, the real "John Smith," may have the original letter if he wishes.—EDITOR, CAGE BIRDS.]

Identity of Thrush-Blackbird Hybrid Challenged.

The Breeder Says He Expects Some More this Season.

Sir,—I would like to thank your correspondents for their kind congratulations and good wishes expressed re my Song Thrush-Blackbird Hybrids. I am glad to know that nearly all, if not all, are willing to accept my claim for the birds. It will hardly be desirable for me to enter any further into the discussion, but I would like to ask Mr. Robson if he has any ideas of his own as to what a Hybrid between the two birds mentioned should be like. I would also state, in my defence against his suggestion that by accident I might have mixed my Thrush eggs and put one into the Blackbird's nest—1st, that I have no breeding Thrush pair in my possession, nor did I handle a Thrush egg last year; 2nd, if that theory should stand, I could hardly expect to pass it off as an accident, for out of the two nests there were 6 young hatched, 5 of which left the nest, 4 coming through the moult, and they all have similar markings. If there was 1 egg put in, therefore, there must have been 6, and I think if that were the case all must pronounce that there had been a deliberate and premeditated attempt to defraud, not an accident. Regarding the nests, they were typical Blackbird's nests, lined inside with fine grass, and built by the Blackbird alone. I cannot say I ever saw them actually pairing last season, hence my own surprise at finding young in the first nest, but I have noticed during the last week or so evidences of pairing up with the same two birds, and they look quite like breeding again. I shall be very pleased to report any further developments that may take place, and will be glad if any of your correspondents care to call and see the birds in my aviary.

Proposed Federation of Roller Societies.

Sir,—At present I, and many more fanciers, are quite in the dark as to the real object at the back of the above movement, therefore we Roller men in Birmingham will deprecate any hurried decision at the meeting called in Manchester for Feb. 5. Before any drastic interference with present government and song standard is attempted, or the formation of such a body as the suggested Board of Control, meetings of every Roller Club should have been called, and their views organised.

I hope I am wrong, but the Manchester conference appeals to me as an effort to destroy the power and authority of the British Roller Canary Club. The fanciers of Bolton and Manchester will have the chief say. The meeting has been called on their own doorstep, and at a time when the hands of the B.R.C.C. and their loyal supporters are tied, on account of the date of the conference being that of the B.R.C.C. show in London. I do not say this has been intentional, but it is true.

Mr. Kilshaw, in his letter, declines to dwell on the cause of the differences between the P.R.C.C. and the National Club. I suggest that the only differences existing are those caused by the Provincial Club and its supporters, who have refused to accept the B.R.C.C. judging standard, have refused to print the names of their judges over classes in schedule, and have now started an opposition ring against that supplied by the National Club. This is rebellion! Mr. Kilshaw ends by an appeal for unity in the Fancy; but, so far as I can see, there would never have been disunity had it not come from the P.R.C.C. and that club's supporters, chiefly in Manchester and Bolton, who have rebelled against the ruling of the B.R.C.C. I appeal to all clubs to take no steps that will injure the power or prestige of the B.R.C.C. It is, and should be, the ruling club. If fault is to be found with it, then let us try to improve its working, and its organisation, not set up another. My idea of good sportsmanship is to conform to the ruling of constituted authority. That authority is the B.R.C.C. It is the National Club. Its rings should be the only rings used in the British Fancy; there is no earthly necessity that I can see for any other.

If such a Control Board is formed contrary to the wishes of the B.R.C.C. and its members, I feel quite sure that it will receive no acknowledgement from the M.R.C.C., or the Birmingham Club. I trust it will not either from Leeds, whose fanciers, I feel quite sure, suggested this scheme in good sportsmanship, and good faith. But why has it been taken out of their hands, the meeting convened on the very doorstep of the P.R.C.C., where all those who oppose the B.R.C.C. can easily attend, and where those who loyally support it can not, except at great inconvenience, and expense?

I hope that every Roller club in the country will at once convene a meeting to discuss this crucial point, and that no steps will be taken to set up a new authority in the Fancy—and a new song standard—until the views of the B.R.C.C. members all over England and Scotland have been ascertained.

I have written this letter with no intention of widening any split, or of giving offence to our brethren in the North. I sincerely hope they will not take it as such. But in the face of so drastic a change as they suggest, it seems to me a time when one's views and fears, should be expressed with the utmost frankness. If my impression as to what lies behind this new move is incorrect, I shall be only too pleased, and happy, to have that impression removed. H. G. HILL.

Sir,—I am pleased to tell you that for the B.R.C.C. Show entries have closed with a total of 240 in the five classes. In view of the correspondence in your columns, re control board for the Roller fancy, a meeting will be held at the Show on Saturday, at 5 p.m.

I am sorry to say I have just heard that Mr. J. H. Willows, who was engaged to judge has suffered through the recent Zeppelin raid, and will be unable to come and judge.

Specials at Chester Show.

Sir,—For the information of "Novice, S.B.F.C.," and in reply to his letter in CAGE BIRDS of Jan. 22, I append list of winners of specials he enquires about. Best bird in show: Roberts, No. 6, Class 31. Best 4th prize: Thomas, No. 5, Class 36. Most points novice: Thomas, 13 points. All winners, points, etc., have been in the hands of his club secretary, Mr. Burton, and I feel sure had he made enquiries from him he would have had, no cause for complaint.

LEICESTER (Hand-in-Hand).

Meeting and table show held White Swan, Market Place, Mr. Gibbins presiding; over thirty members being present. A discussion took place over the proposed testimonial to be presented to our late worthy Sec., Mr. Freestone, for earnest and zealous services during the past five years. Decided to appoint a committee of Messrs. Hulse, Allen, Herbert, and Wholton to deal with the matter. The quantity and quality of the birds (40) staged was excellent. Mr. C. H. Walton judged Canaries, and Mr. J. H. Chick British. Cl. or Tkd. Unfig.: 1, Herbert; 2, vhc, c, Roberts; 3, ic, Pole. Nov.: 1, Layton; 2, c, Pearson; 3, Cobley; vhc, Cavies; hc, Knight. Greenf.: 1, Kilsby; 2, vhc, Deakin; hc, c, Brooks. Brit. F.M.: 1, Deakin; 2, vhc, Brooks; hc, Deakin; c, Kilsby. Mr. Deakin won silver medal presented by Mr. Chick for best F.M. British. Mr. Chick introduced an interesting discussion on the British, dealing with the feeding, moulting, steadying for the show bench, and other points, as far as time permitted, which the members greatly appreciated. The British members did not fail to put forward numerous queries and questions, which Mr. Chick was ever ready to answer. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Chick and to Mr. Walton for judging the Canaries.—C. B. Day and Roberts, Joint Secs.

PLYMOUTH W.C.O.S.

Meeting, Jan. 18, Oddfellows' Hall, Morley-st. Mr. W. French presided over a fine muster. Decided to hold a series of Table Shows; next meeting night will be for Canaries only, specialist judges appointed for each section, also a good special for each. We hope members will make a bumping entry so as to give new Sec. Dyer a good send-off. Officers elected: Committee, Messrs. Pope, Gill, Garland, Sinala, Mitch, Large, Rowe, Pridham, Deakin, Spillman, Brown, Moffitt, Ryder. I am pleased to say our late Sec. Mr. Pope is making good progress towards recovery from his serious illness.—J. E. Rowe, Press Correspondent.

MIDDLESBRO AND TEES-SIDE.

Annual general meeting, Crown Hotel, Jan. 8. Balance-sheet was read and passed as very satisfactory. After paying for four medals and running four table shows, the society has a balance of £10, along with three cups, which are being competed for most points during the season. Arrangements were made and stewards elected for Feb. show, Jan. 29, and pair show, Feb. 5. Officers elected: Chairman, J. Carr; Vice, C. W. Watson; Auditors, Dods, Worth and Watson; Assist. Sec., T. H. Bibby; Hon. Sec., T. C. Deans; Councilor, T. Thompson was invited to stand for president, and Mr. W. Nicholson, Stockton, vice-pres. New members cordially invited.—T. C. Deans, Sec.

Balance sheet showed £11 10s. 10d. in hand after handing over £10 from our annual show for the Mayor's fund for widows and orphans. I wish to thank all Societies for their kind assistance. Election of officers: G. Large, Pres.; S. Smith, Vice-Pres.; D. McFarlane, Sec.; W. Willison, Treas.; S. Woodward and R. Shackley, Trustees; J. Wagstaff, Auditor. Norwich Pairs Show result: 1, 4, 6, J. Neal; 2, 3, 5, Hudson and McFarlane; 1, 2, Hale judged and gave every satisfaction. Discussion as to the holding of Open Show adjourned till next meeting, Jan. 26, when also Table Show of Yorkshire pairs. Judge, Mr. J. Wagstaff.—D. McFarlane, Hon. Sec.

WINDHILL C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, Jan. 1, Blue Bell Hotel, Mr. R. Garnett chair. Officers for 1916 appointed: President, C. Partington, Esq., M.P.; Vice-Pres., Messrs. G. Hardy and A. Parker; Sec. and Treas., J. A. Taylor; Assist. Sec., J. Halliday; Auditors, R. Garnett and J. Harney; Chairman, W. B. Atkinson; Vice-Chair, R. Garnett and M. Broadley; Delegates, Messrs. M. Broadley, R. Garnett, and P. Mason. Balance-sheet shows £2 2s. in hand, Dec. 31, and £5 subs. to come in for 1915. Annual concert, Jan. 15. The Y.C.C. presented one of our members, R. W. Alderson, with a gold-mounted walking stick in acknowledgment of his 21 years' service as an auditor. Mr. H. H. Towers, president of the Y.C.C., made the presentation. Songs were sung by J. Bower, E. Bloomfield, G. Farnish, G. Sneed. Mr. W. B. Atkinson was chairman and kept the ball rolling.—Taylor and Halliday, Secs.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Meeting, Jan. 13, Mr. Havenhand chair. The principal feature was a table show for matched pairs, which was most successful; 14 pairs of Yorkshires and 11 pairs of Norwich being put down. The fixed prize money arranged for was increased by the addition of extra prizes in each class, and as we have a British table show down for February (Judge, Mr. P. Walsh, if possible), I trust this will be an inducement to our British members to make a good show. The judge invited to officiate, Mr. W. Bingham, was unable to come owing to the illness of his son, which I am sorry to say terminated fatally. I take this opportunity of tendering to Mr. Bingham and his family the deepest sympathy from the members. Mr. Havenhand was elected to judge Yorks., and Mr. Grainger Nor. Yorks.: 1, 3, and extra vhc. Merills; 2, ex 3, Hutchby; 4, he, Blunt; vhc. c. Exton. Nor.: 1, vhc. ex vhc. Stokes; 2, 3, c. Wadding; 4, he, Proctor. The balance-sheet, showing a substantial margin, was unanimously approved, and we started the year in promising fashion by making three new members.—E. Johnson, Sec., Bk. 111, Workson Road, Sheffield.

WEST OF SCOTLAND.

Annual general meeting, Jan. 22, Nelson Temperance Hotel, Mr. W. Wood chair, and a good attendance. Secretary submitted financial statement, with a balance on the right side, and same was adopted. Office-bearers for 1916: Pres., Mr. W. Wood; vice-pres., Messrs. Gunion and Munro; sec. and treas., Wm. Hutchinson; committee, Messrs. C. Martin, Jno. Pierce, O. Begg, Jas. Watson, Jno. Fulton, A. K. Hunter, Jno. Black, R. Watson, H. Jardine, K. McDonald, T. Cook, W. Briggs, R. Davidson, Mr. Gilbert; auditors, Messrs. Heggie and Barron. The question of new conditions for Yorkshire cup was brought, and it was decided same to be awarded to best young bird in section. Decided that hour of pair show be altered to 4.30, Feb. 5th. Classification: Crest, 1 class; Plainheads, yellow cock and buff hen, buff cock and yellow hen; Green or Cinn. cock and hen; Yorks., yellow cock and buff hen, buff cock and yellow hen; Bord. ditto; Green and Cinn. buff cock or hen; A.V. Hyb. pairs and Muling pairs. Special by W. Hutchinson, best matched pair Canaries, 5s., shown by a novice; special 4s., by Mr. R. Davidson, best Muling or Hyb., also numerous other specials. The question of hall for annual show was left over for further particulars. Vote of thanks to chair closed the meeting.—W. Hutchinson.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Annual general meeting, headquarters, Jan. 17. Balance sheet for 1915 carried unanimously. A vote of thanks having been accorded to retiring officials, the election of officers and committee for ensuing year was proceeded with. S. C. Rhodes, Esq., in the chair. Results: Pres., Mr. S. C. Rhodes; Vice-Pres., Messrs. W. A. Hurry, J.P., J. S. Clarke, J. Robson, H. M. Beary, J. B. Slade, J.P., P. Smith, G. A. Parker, H. Oyden, Dr. J. Laird Simpson, and Canon Thornton-Duesbury; Chair, Mr. J. A. Bartlett; Vice, Mr. E. Wallace; Hon. Treas., Mr. H. Oyden; Hon. Sec., Mr. Drury Freeman; Hon. Auditors, Messrs. Whittier and Wilkins; Committee, Messrs. Steward, Purday, Colby, Wilkins, G. East, W. East, Marshall and Dalton; Assist. Hon. Sec., Mr. A. W. Harmer; Hon. Sec., Mr. T. Collinge. Decided that members serving the country remain on the books during the war as fully paid up. The Society has held three successful shows during the past year, for which we have the unreserved use of a magnificent hall, also a suite of rooms for monthly and committee meetings. A new British bird cup has been purchased, and the Society starts a new year with no liabilities, and a cash balance in hand. We have also gained a number of new members recently, and extend a hearty welcome to any fancier who would like to join us: the subscription is only 2 6 per annum.—A. W. Farmer, Assist. Hon. Sec. 13 Thornhill-rd., Leyton N.E.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Show, King's Hall, Stoke, Dec. 2, in aid of the local wounded soldiers' fund. Entries were open to a radius of 10 miles, and although there were not so numerous as was expected, most of the best birds in the district were on view. There was an excellent attendance, over £2 being taken at the door. Messrs. Ousman, Hartley, Bagshaw and Critchlow generously presented birds to be sold for the benefit of the fund. These were put up to auction and realised £3, and as the members and friends sold over 100 tickets of admission to the function, the fund will benefit to the amount of about £8. The Stoke Club defrayed all expenses incurred. Judges, Messrs. W. Bowyer and F. Bate. Nor. Yell.: 1, Leese; 2, Bagshaw; 3, Glover; vhc. Buff: 1, Leese; 2, Bagshaw; 3, Glover; vhc. BANGOR C.B.S.

Sixth Annual Show, Dec. 3, 4, Good Templars Hall, a very fine building, well lighted, free from draughts and with plenty of room for visitors, and a much bigger entry. Birds were tastefully staged on decorated staging. The entry was rather disappointing considering the grand classification, but another fixture was being held near at hand, and entries suffered. The management were a very capable lot of fanciers who did their utmost for the success of the Show. The secretary, Mr. Sam Shannon, is a "brave bloke" and had all arrangements in good order, he was strongly supported by Pres. H. Brennan, Treas. D. E. Alexander; Committee, D. Carleton, F. Clawson, G. Absalom, D. Beattie, J. McConaghie, and Wm. Teasey, who all worked hard. Norwich were a capital lot, many of the Belfast winners appearing, and adding to their laurels. Mules, Hybrids, and British came up well, and contained some very nice exhibits; entry totalled about 200; gold medal best cock bird went to J. Lavery, with his Light Greenfinch Mule; special best hen, G. Foreman, with a grand unflig. yell. hen. Mr. W. Connelly, Glasgow, judged and appeared to give general satisfaction.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

GLASGOW & WESTERN COUNTIES O.S.

Annual Show, Good Templars' Hall, Ingram-st., Jan. 22. Pres., Mr. P. Pettigrew; Vice-Pres., Mr. G. Bannerman; Treas., Mr. W. Munro; Hon. Sec., Mr. J. H. Adam; and Committee, Messrs. Liddell, Dick, Findlay, Cross and Cassells, make up a hard-working body of fanciers, who, with J. H. A. as steering master had all things well in hand. The hall is good for light and comfort. Entries came up very well, about 470 (200 more than last year). Quality was of a high order; one member alone, a novice, turned out no fewer than 85 birds, many of them a real credit. The judges—Messrs. G. Arnott, Sinclairtown, Nor.; Hislop, Stirling, Bord.; Fyfe, Forfar, the remainder—gave general satisfaction. The show was well patronised.

INVERNESS O.A.

A New Venture.

Thirty-fourth annual show, Music Hall, Dec. 29, with a fine display. The Inverness fanciers have launched a new venture, and confined themselves to cage birds only, and the show proved a great success. Again Mr. T. W. Grant, Maryhill, had forward his two beautiful aviaries for exhibition, and these proved a great attraction. The fine display of Scotch Fancies brought back the old days to a few of the veterans. The yellow cock belonging to Mr. Robert Gibb (the Father of the fancy in Inverness), won the cup presented by Mr. Todd, and this now becomes his own property, this being his second win. The cup confined to members in northern counties was won by J. Hutchison with a yellow cock of good type. Cup, best Border (members), also medal, J. Connochie, with a sweet yellow, staged to perfection. The Crest and C.B. classes contained some birds of the first water, which, in themselves proved an attraction. The Norwich, as in former years were well up. Some nice wee gems were put forward; this variety has now taken a strong hold in Inverness. Mr. Bruce, a novice, had two sweet exhibits which will take a bit of stopping. British classes were very poorly patronised for the capital of the Highlands. Yorks were also back, the war showing effect in this class. Mr. Junor, a big supporter of this variety, has joined the colours. Great credit is due to Mr. Connochie, secretary, for his able handling of the work. He was ably assisted by Mr. Gibb, hon. vice-pres., and Mr. McNaughton, Chief Constable and the committee, composed of Messrs. Chisholm, Falconer, Todd, Fraser (Anderson Brothers), Dorward, Harcombe, Smith, McGillivray, Mr. W. Simpson judged, and his awards were well received.

SCOTCH FANCY CK. (7): 1, cup, 5, Gibb, yell., grand size, and subs., nice shoulders and pos., free mover; 2, 4, Smith, nice head and neck, good length and qual., pressed hard; 3, Todd, fine length-of side, well filled in back, a bit nervous; 6, Clyne, HEN (6): 1, Smith, grand drive, splendid action, snaky head, greatly admired; 2, 5, Clyne, bl. varg., well up in size, fine body and action, would do with better droop; 3, 6, Gibb, bl., rare size and qual., presses hard; 4, Todd. YORKS (3): 1, 3, Wilkinson, grand heads and wing carr., full of qual., pos. A1; 2, Clyne, soft, with long journey, but all there for qual. YORKS. 1915 (4): 1, 2, Wilkinson, leader saddle back, col. fed, rich col., very typical and steady, shows to perfection; 2nd non-fed, level col., beaten in col. only; 3, Clyne; 4, McGregor. BORD. CL. OR TKD. YELL. CK. (10): 1, cup and medal, Connochie, neat and typical, fine qual. of feather, good head and neck, a popular win; 2, Gentleman, tight boxy feather, nice body, a good second; 3, Smith, another good Border, presses hard; 4, Harcombe; 5, Blackie; 6, Chisholm. HEN (7): 1, Smith, sweet shape, nice feather, jaunty carr., neat head and wings; 2, 5, 6, Gentleman, lovely feather, nice shape and qual., faultless cond., presses hard; 4, Harcombe, fine col., splendid wing carr., piped tail; 4, Connochie. CL. OR TKD. BUFF CK. (7): 1, Chisholm, wing mld., lovely feather and col., grand shape and cond., neat close fitting wings; 2, 5, Connochie, nice head, carr., and feather, grand wings and tail, presses hard; 3, Harcombe, another nice exhibit, lovely carr. and pos., well shown; 4, Smith; 6, Falconer. HEN (8): 1, 2, Connochie, fine rounded head and body, capital qual., nice type, wings; 2, Smith, sweet shape, excellent cond., well put down; 3rd presses hard, our choice for second; 4, Blackie; 5, Chisholm; 6, Harcombe. VAR. (8): 1, Bruce, wing mld., real wee gem, clean as gold, sweet shape, feathered to perfection; 2, Blackie, cinn. mld., height a wee, good col., rare trim, well staged; 3, 4, Gentleman, wing and eye mld., neat head, close fitting wings, nice carr., presses hard; 4, 5, Connochie; 6, Smith. GREEN OR CINN. (5): 1, Bruce, typical bird, lovely head and wing carr., very shapely; 2, 4, Gentleman, another Gold Bird, not much between them, a toss up here; 3, 5, Gentleman, fine shape and feather, loses to-day; 4, Chisholm; 5, Mather. J. Fraser. BRED 1915 (7): 1, Blackie, yell., very typical, clean cut, well drawn, faultless order; 2, 5, Connochie, even mld., buff, very taking, lovely wing carr., nice neck, fine cond.; 3, P. Gentleman, green, nice col. and build, fine feather, presses; 4, Falconer; 6, Harcombe. CREST (10): 1, Craigen, varg., fine size and subs., A1 cond., nicely groomed top piece, staged to perfection; 2, 4, 6, Todd, green, well laid top piece, fine shiny feather, in lovely order; 3, Smith, grand body, great wealth of feather and subs.; 5, McGregor, a nice bird, might have gone up, but was wading during judging. C.B. (8): 1, Todd, monster, massive body and subs., plenty feather, nice skull, well lashed; 2, Smith, yell., lovely head proportion, fine length of feather; 3, Craigen, green, looking soft when taking notes; 4, lovely buff varg., great size and subs.; plenty feather and skull; 5, 6, McNaughton. NOV. CL. OR TKD. YELL. (8): 1, 3, 4, Craigen, leader yell., col. fed, grand head and chest, rich level col., chubby, very taking; 3rd, non-fed, another good one, but lacks the size and subs. of winners; 2, Hutchison, grand size and shape, bonny head, A1 wing carr., and showing well; 5, Bain; 6, Mr. Donald, might have taken a step up. BUFF (7): 1, Hutchison, cup winner, topper for size and type and qual., perfect wing, lovely carr., popular win; 2, 4, Craigen, good type and qual., splendid finish; 3, Hutchison, good size and shape, fine style, presses hard; 5, McGregor; 6, McDonald. A.O. COL. (7): 1, 3, Craigen, green, col. fed, good feather, shapely, nice head, grand wing carr., in splendid trim; 3, Cinn., splendid Nor. type and A1 qual.; 2, Bain Bros., green, short and cobby, fine round head, nice full chest, lacks subs. of winner; 4, Fraser; 5, Bain Bros.; 6, Do. BRED 1915 (5): 1, 3, Craigen, leader varg., good head, fine neck and breast, nice tail carr.; 3rd, nice bold head, fine type and qual., lacks finish to winners; 2, Hutchison, capital size and shape, bonny, typical head and wing carr.; 4, McDonald; 5, Todd. MULE OR HYBID (7): 1, Duncan, Linnet Mule, Highland Leader in the pink, needs no comment; 2, Smith, Goldie Mule, perfect feather and cond.; 3, Young, varg. Goldie, in A1 order, would improve with a little col. feed; 4, 6, McNaughton. Redpoll-Cin. might have taken a big jump up; hard lines. SELL. 10s.: 1, Duncan; 2, Smith; 3, Smith; 4, Smith; 5, Clyne; 6, McGregor. GOLDF. (8): 1, McNaughton, rich face and cond., beautifully buttoned, nice blaze; 2, 4, Harcombe, close up for col. and cond., presses hard; 3, Todd, well up in col., nice full face, nicely tanned; 5, Gentleman, one of the best in class. BULF. (6): 1, Harcombe, fine, bold-headed bird, splendid cond. and col., easy win; 2, Craigen, splendid cap and wings, A1 order; 3, Dunbar, nice size, col. and subs., presses hard; 4, Kells; 5, Gentleman, full size for a Britisher; 6, Fraser. SISKIN (4): 1, Harcombe, nice cap and flank markings, full of life, wins; 2, Connochie, nice bib and cap, our choice; 3, McNaughton; 4, Fraser. LINNET OR TWITE (1): 1, Duncan, beautiful Twite, lovely markings and cond. REDPOL. (3): 1, P. REDRUTH F.A.

Seventh Annual Show, Market Hall, Nov. 27. Entries came up well, especially in Nor., where competition was very keen. The silver cup for best old bird fell to a lovely buff hen, Martin, very typical from head to tail, a real model. The cup for best nonflight was won by Mr. Keen's yell., the Hayle and Camborne winner, a gem all over. The A.O.V. cup went to a Goldy with grand blaze and bars, in lovely bloom, and the novice special went to the winning nonflight yell. The Society has a good Sec. and working committee of fanciers. Mr. F. Collins (Camborne) judged. Yell. Hen (9): 1, spl. Keen; 2, r. v. c. Sherman; 3, r. Kemp; 4, Hocken. Buff (13): 1, cup, 2, Martin; 3, r. Kemp; v. c. Ware; 4, Sherman; 5, Hocken. Nor. Nat. Col. (8): 1, 3, Trevorrow; 2, 3, Kemp; r. v. c. Sherman; v. c. Martin. A.O.V.: 1, 2, r. c. Sherman; 3, Woolcock; v. c. Sherman. Goldf. or Bullf. (6): 1, 2, c. Sherman; 3, r. Queries Answered

- (1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.
- (2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.
- (3)—Queries intended for different specialists must be written on separate sheets of paper.
- (4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.
- (5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.
- (6)—Queries received during any week, up to the first post on Saturday morning, will be answered in the issue bearing date of Saturday in the following week.
- (7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).
- (8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referees' Poor Children's Fund (London).
- (9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

EFFECT OF WASHING (M.E.N.S.).—(1) I think there was probably nothing wrong with the bird when you hand-washed it, beyond, perhaps, a little exhaustion, which may have resulted from the operation being rather a slow one. All birds do not take to washing alike, and whilst some are scarcely affected at all, others appear very much so for a short time. But when it passes off in a while, and the bird seems none the worse, there is nothing to worry about. Judging from the appearance and odour of the sample you enclosed, it appears to me to contain a certain amount of potash, and possibly this may have affected the bird, but I cannot say definitely that it would. Anyway, if you use a good quality of toilet soap, or white Windsor, there should be not the least risk of harming the bird by hand-washing. Still, you can avoid it now by offering the bird a daily bath for a week or two in each pint of which you have stirred a small teaspoonful of sulphuretted potash. It will not be quite a necessity, but it will prove effective, and save handling the bird. (2) Only time can tell whether the feathers will be reproduced on the neck. You may try the liquid advised in first part of reply to "Crest" in our last issue.

W. G. T.—Replied to by post.

WHEEZY ROLLER (J. C. X.).—If the bird is kept in a position where it is exposed to the heat and fumes of burning gas when the jet is lit, that is quite sufficient to account for the symptoms, and also for the fact that it seems worse when the gas is lit. See that it is kept in a bright and healthy place, but not where it will be exposed to such influences as these, nor to cold direct draughts, or sudden and extreme changes of heat and cold. Every second day for a fortnight, in addition to its usual diet of seeds, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed; and on the alternate days give a morsel of banana, and add to the drinking water four drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia and sweet spirit of nitre. Unless all the symptoms quickly disappear in response to this treatment and the bird quite recovers, you should not attempt to breed with her this season, and I rather doubt the wisdom of using her again at all as a stock bird.

PECULIAR FITS (Belmiro).—(1) The peculiar behaviour of the bird is merely due to excessive nervousness—a kind of "stage fright"—which needs gentle treatment and judicious management, rather than medicinal treatment. Try and gain its confidence by regular attention and consistently gentle and methodical treatment, in order to wean it of its nervousness by the knowledge that no harm is meant it. Offer a scrap of some tempting green food each time you attend to its cage, or put on the bath and carefully avoid any alarming movements near it, and do not place any uncommon objects in its sight which may alarm it. Now that the weather is getting more mild, hang on the bath for half-an-hour or so every day, and each time drop into it a few grains of hemp or a tiny scrap of greenstuff, and it will soon get over its nervousness at the sight of the bath. (2) These fits were doubtless the victims of some of the recent violent weather changes, or were exposed to draught or some similar exciting cause. The best thing you can do now is to see that all such causes are guarded against as far as possible, and treat the birds the same as advised to "J.C.X." in this issue for a fortnight or so. Keep them in a fairly comfortable temperature, but you need not overheat them.

GAPING AND PANTING (Reta).—Your description is rather suggestive of the birds being victims of gapeworm, but it does not go far enough to enable one to say that this is so. It would be interesting to know whether there are any poultry about affected with this trouble. If there is, you should be careful not to use any water for drinking or bathing until it has been boiled and stood until cold again. Also avoid giving the birds any green food or tit-bit gathered from any place to which the poultry have access. You may adopt these precautions in any case. Then try the following treatment for two or three weeks and report result, repeating full particulars. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, linseed, and broken groats. A small cube of hard common salt stuck in the wires for the birds to peck at occasionally will also be beneficial. In the water add ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and after this give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for another week. Then report result. If the Bullfinch is kept separately you should write a query about this bird on a separate sheet for our Mr. Norman.

SMALL INSECTS (F.W.B.).—Although you say the insects are a light colour, I think they will be the red mite, the "small fry" of this pest having a light appearance at this season. Only drastic measures will be likely to eradicate them now they have so good a footing as they seem to have in this case. Place the birds in a temporary cage or cages, and whilst there you may offer a bath daily, in which you have added a little essence of guaiac. Then dissolve an ounce of camphor in half-a-pint of methylated spirit. Thoroughly clean out the infested cages, place on a sheet of paper and rake out all dust from any joint or crevice, with a pin if necessary, going all over the cage thoroughly, and at once burn paper, on which you will doubtless find plenty of "game." Now get a small paint brush and saturate cage all over, inside and out, with the camphor liquid, working it well into the joints and crevices. Place aside to dry, and treat seed box in the same way. Seed boxes may then be well baked and the water glasses well scalded to finish them off. Give the nail or hook on which the cages have hung a good dressing with the liquid. Next day repeat the dressing of the cages, and the wall with the liquid, and again repeat it the day following. Then you may re-paint or dis-temper the insides, and re-stain and varnish the outsides, and when quite dry the birds may be returned to them. Keep a sharp eye on them for a few weeks afterwards, and touch the ends of perches, joints of doors, etc., twice each week with the fluid, whether any mites are seen or not. Give the birds a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar daily for a week, and add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water to help them to throw off the effect of the worrying attack.

BALD ON ABDOMEN (Novice, H.R.W.).—You ought to have said in what way the bald patch was noticeable, or whether it has always been noticeable. The fact is, every Canary has a bald patch in that position, as feathers never grow on the centre of breast and abdomen, those on the sides and flanks spreading over and covering these parts. If the bareness has always been pronounced it is probable that it is due to the bird being rather deficient in feather, possibly from being the progeny of birds too much double-yellow bred. In that case there is no reason why you should not breed with the bird, but you should be careful to select as mate for it a bird that is rather too densely feathered, and with nice broad and long plumage of fine quality.

AN AVIARY (A. B. C.).—(1) You say you have nine Canaries and an aviary about six inches square, which I interpret as meaning six feet square. If this surmise is correct the number of birds to stock it will be about correct. (2) The best kind of nest-box depends upon the style of the aviary, which you give no particulars about. But the ordinary type of nest-box is quite applicable, to practically every kind of aviary, and with the exercise of a little judgment may be quite securely fixed in any suitable position. After these the old-fashioned type wooden nest box would be about the best thing. As you give no height of your aviary, I cannot say what would be the best height to fix them nearer than that somewhere about two-thirds of the distance between the floor and top of aviary would be near the mark. One or two boxes should not be placed conspicuously higher than the rest, or they will lead to frequent quarrels for possession. At least ten or twelve boxes should be fixed up for seven hens. (3) No, you should certainly not fix them in a dark corner, nor yet the most bright and fully exposed. Choose a position just a little secluded, and sheltered from full exposure to all that is going on outside the aviary, but by no means a dismal, dark corner. (4) I am afraid I cannot add to what I have already said about distinguishing sex. It is experience you want, then the ability to see the subtle differences will come. If you catch the birds now that they are coming into fresh condition and blow up the feathers on the abdomen, you will find the vent of the cock is more prominent and pointed than that of the hen, which is flatter and more in line with the abdomen. This may help you to distinguish them just at this season. Temper is not a requisite of either sex. A bird that is quarrelsome at the seed box is just as likely to be a cock as a hen, or vice versa.

CONCERNING ROLLERS (Confederate).—(1) It is getting full late now to buy new stock for the coming season, and you cannot get it over too soon now. (2) The name you mention is that of a very well-known breeder and trainer of Rollers for singing contests. To the best of our knowledge and belief he is good English. (3) When other places are available it is not advisable to keep the birds in the same room as the young cocks undergoing training. Still, many breeders have to do so for want of other accommodation. (4) No, all Rollers that emanate from Leeds do not necessarily have the same variety of song tours, which I take it is what you mean by this question. (5) The presence of an Amazon and Grey parrots will not affect the training of the young Roller cocks. (6) You would find a special chapter on the Roller in House's "Manual," 1s. 2d. post free; and there is a little handbook by Rettich which you may find in the list of one of our large dealers.

MANNER OF BREEDING (L. Scott).—(1) It will be quite correct to mate the Canaries and keep them in one part of the room separated from the Budgetrigs by a wire partition. It will not affect the breeding of either the Canaries or the Budgetrigs in the least. (2) One cock will be quite sufficient to run with the three hens, but I cannot advise you to mate the young cock with his mother and sisters. The former would be just tolerable at a pinch, but the latter is the closest possible in-breeding, which should never be resorted to merely for the sake of making up a pair of birds. The best way out of the difficulty would be for you to dispose of the young cock you have and get an unrelated bird in his place. There would be no danger whatever of the hens quarrelling with him because he was a stranger.

A SEED MIXTURE (Gwilym).—No, your seed mixture is not an ideal one. It contains far too much niger, and too little rape, in addition to other defects. As staple diet you should use a simple mixture of canary and rape only at most; three parts by measure of the former to one part of the latter. Then make a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, and broken groats, and give a little of this separately two or three times a week, according to circumstances. This will quite suffice for a seed diet in all ordinary circumstances.

FEEDING ROLLERS (Beginner).—(1) As a staple seed diet give a mixture of two parts canary, by measure, to one part mild, nutty summer rape.

and for the rest feed and treat as you would a Yorkshire. You will find all details as to suitable tit-bits and variants in the Nutshell which has been sent you. (2) It will not do your Roller any injury to hear the singing of the Yorkshires through the wall in an adjoining room. The worst that could happen would be that, provided the song reached him very distinctly, he might pick up some of the undesirable notes from it. But, coming through a wall, it is not at all likely that this would happen. The muffled sound of the Yorkshires singing, instead of stopping the Roller singing, would more likely incite him to greater effort.

ABOUT A SWELLING (W. G. T.).—Your second letter clears up the doubtful point. The part indicated is what is termed the vent. Finish the course of treatment already sent you and then report result, repeating particulars, and also the course of treatment given, and, if anything further is necessary, I shall be pleased to advise you again.

NOT BATHING, ETC. (B. T. Cardiff).—(1) The only way to try to induce him to bathe properly is to watch for him starting to bathe his head in the drinker, then remove it and hang on the bath for an hour or so. After a time he will probably begin again to use it properly. There is no remedy for the grimy "tide-water-mark" save hand-washing the bird. (2) He should moult again in the ordinary course about next July. (3) It is obvious that the best remedy for this is to just throw something on the slippery table when the bird is let out—a sheet of paper, a towel (smooth, not Turkish), or even a handkerchief, or anything of the kind which may occur to you and be handy on which the bird could hop about comfortably without slipping. You need not worry about the lost tail. It will commence to grow at once, and will be well forward in a month from the time it was lost. (4) The mixed seed sold in packets is useful for occasional changes of diet, and as a tit-bit, but a plainer mixture of canary and rape only is on the whole best for general use. "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, and House's "Manual," 1s. 2d. post free, both from our manager, will suit you very well. The former treats the subject generally, the latter deals with the separate varieties of Canaries. (5) The terms Mule and Hybrid are synonymous. No earthly reason why one is called Mule and another Hybrid, except that the custom of the fancy is to term the bird which has a Canary for one of its parents a Mule, and the rest Hybrids.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

KEEPING MEALWORMS (Novice, E.H.).—All you need do with the few mealworms you have is to put them in a tin with a handful of meal, making a few small holes in the lid for ventilation purposes. (2) It is not a custom to give many mealworms to Finches, but if they will eat them they are considered to be beneficial. One daily would do, and I would advise you to kill the worm and squeeze out the body, as the skin is somewhat indigestible. Full particulars on the breeding and keeping of mealworms are given in our Nutshell No. 26, which our Manager would send you for 2d., post free.

MIXED BREEDING (L. Hight).—You could allow all your birds to fly loose in the room, providing you put up plenty of nest boxes for breeding purposes, but I would advise you to take out one of the hen Bullfinches, as two of these birds seldom agree during the spring and summer months. All the cocks you mention would do nicely, unless you would like to try the spare Bullie in a breeding cage with one of them. Even if you did this it would still leave enough cock birds in the room. Whatever you do, I would advise you to leave in the cock Goldie. With your collection you would stand a reasonable chance of breeding both Canaries and Mules, and possibly a Hybrid or two. The pair of Yorkshires in the cage would not interfere with the others, providing you have them in position some time before breeding commences.

BREEDING GOLDFINCH AND CANARY MULES (Dolly).—It is much too early for your hen Canary to think of nesting. I fear you are feeding her too highly, and possibly keeping her in a warm room. I would advise you to feed her as plainly as you possibly can, and do not let her have anything in the way of nesting materials to play with, as it only encourages forwardness. As a rule, hen Canaries are ready for nesting some time before the Finch is, and breeders who keep many usually take a brood of young Canaries from the hen before they run in the Goldfinch. The Goldfinch is ready for pairing when he sings stoutly, sways himself from side to side, and when his beak is quite clear or nearly so. When they are both ready you can put them together, giving a nest box and nesting materials. When the hen has built a good nest, remove the Finch at roosting time, or he will possibly damage the egg if the hen lays early in the morning. After removing the egg let him remain with her again during the day. When she has laid three you can take him away entirely, and give her back the eggs, when she will doubtless add to the number and commence to incubate.

TRYING FOR HYBRIDS (Canary-Goldfinch).—You do not give me the dimensions of your cage, but, anyway, you would not be safe in leaving them together. I would advise you to use the 3-compartment cage for the Goldie and the Sib. hens. Let them fly together for another month, then place a hen in each compartment and the Goldie in the centre, running him with each hen as she comes into condition. (2) Your chance of the pair of Bullfinches nesting is not very rosy. I should feel more inclined to try the Bullie hen with either one of your other Goldfinches or with a cock Canary. This, of course, in another cage. (3) If your Goldies are cocks they should be singing or twittering now a little. As regards their treatment, why not procure our Nutshell booklet No. 1? It gives all directions about proper feeding, which is all they require just now. Later on they should have dandelion leaves and the seedling heads.

TREATMENT OF THRUSH (Bad Appetite).—It is too early yet for you to put your Thrush outside permanently, for although the weather is very mild just now, we are almost certain to get a return of wintry weather next month. If it becomes fairly settled in March you could put him outside then, choosing a mild day for his first venture. (2) The month of March is quite early enough for breeding with a hen Canary, and, as a rule, the Goldfinch is not ready before then. If the Goldie is in song do not force him on too much. Let him come on gradually.

SAMPLE OF SEED (H. Deakin).—The large seeds sent are not hardheads, but the seeds of burdock. The other is not a particularly choice sample at though it contains a few seeds that are useful; but I would advise you to buy some wild seed mixture put up in packet form by some well-known firm. It may cost you a few pence more, but will be the cheaper in the end, as all of it will be eaten.

SISKIN-CANARY CROSS (H. R. Carron).—It is best, if you can, to use a double breeding cage for Mule breeding, as it is so convenient to shut the Finch off and yet leave him near the hen. This is particularly useful when she is expected to lay, as the Finch frequently damages the egg before the fancier is able to remove it. If you can train the Siskin to run into a small cage from the single breeders you could manage with one then, hanging him close to it. (2) It is early yet to try to get your bird into condition. If you give him a little hemp occasionally and green food, such as dandelion, he should come along in time for pairing up. (3) When he is in full song he will be quite ready. (4) March is quite early enough for Mule breeding, and then both should be quite fit; if not, put it off until they are. You will save time in the long run.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

AMAZON PARROTS ("Confederate").—(1) It is a Blue-fronted Amazon. (2) Also a Blue-front, probably a younger bird than No. 1. (3) As a rule the rough horny character of the leg scaling is the best indication of age. In many aged birds the outer surface of the mandibles becomes rough and worn. (4) I will not go so far as to state that a Blue-front is as good a talker as a Grey. However, there are Blue-fronts which equal Greys, but as a rule their talent is not so easily or quickly acquired. With every species, Greys included. (5) The presence of Roller Canaries is not likely to interfere to any serious extent, but the Amazons are quite likely to mimic any sounds they hear. (6) I think so, but I must confess that I have not read "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit." Our Manager would send you a copy, post free for 7d. (7) Of course, one has to purchase when consignments arrive, and in these times arrivals are by no means frequent, but undoubtedly there is a better chance for them between mid-spring and early autumn. (8) All have the power of mimicking, but many of them show but little inclination to use it. So far as my experience goes the Blue-front is the most teachable of all the Amazons.

FOOD FOR RED-CRESTED CARDINAL (Belmiro).—A mixture of canary and white millet seed in equal parts, and only a little sunflower and hemp mixed with it. Any kind of ripe fruit it will eat. I am inclined to mistrust watercress on account of the impure (foul) water it is often grown in, and prefer to give all kinds of garden weeds to pick over when such are in season, falling back upon frame lettuce during the winter months. But from the lettuce leaves the fleshy centre stem should be cut out before supplying to the birds. They should be given an occasional insect, mealworm, spider, smooth caterpillar, beetle, etc., with a roomy cage and supplies of grit, and water for drinking and bathing, it should thrive with you.

SULPHUR-CREST WITH LOOSENESS (E.A.B.N.).—Continue the cornflour, milk and laudanum mixture till the looseness ceases. I am afraid our food supplies are not so good as they were in pre-war times. Whatever the price, give only the best. I saw not long ago one lot of Parrot mixture containing sunflower seed which was quite mouldy. Such would upset the internals of any bird. So in these times examine your mixture, and if it is not what it should be, though the best you can get, clean it well yourself before supplying to the bird. Such things as arrowroot biscuits will be excellent for it, and it can have them freely. Offer it water as well as the milk mixture. Well colour the water with chemical food. Cuttlebone will help it if it will eat this freely. The cage-tray should be frequently cleansed, and you must use something absorbent thereon—sawdust or peat moss litter, the latter for preference—and as soon as it becomes at all sodden the tray should be cleansed at once. It will be well to add a pinch of Parrot grit to the daily supply of seed mixture while you cannot put it in cage tray. I would advise adding half a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion to the daily supply of milk mixture. Of course, the use of the latter will only be continued during the bird's indisposition. Nevertheless, it should not be suddenly stopped. Gradually decrease the quantity and lengthen interval between supplies before finally cutting it off altogether.

LEG WEAKNESS IN GREY PARROT (A. McNeil).—If it has been having bread and milk as a regular part of its dieting, that is all wrong and most probably is the cause of its present unsatisfactory state, at the same time it will not do to stop it at present; give the usual quantity, but stir half a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion into the daily supply, and continue this till its strength is normal again, when it should be gradually weaned therefrom. Give it fluid magnesia and water in equal parts for one day as drinking water, and then follow on with the chemical food. If it will take it, arrowroot biscuit will be good for it. While the watery looseness remains mix one teaspoonful of cornflour into the daily supply of milk-son. The condition of the bowels is rather important, they should move quite freely, but without watery-looseness, and proper regulation should be secured, at all times, by a mild laxative (fluid magnesia) when necessary. It will be well to keep this bird as warm as possible till it is fit again, but the temperature must be fairly even. Keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging within its reach. If any of the symptoms become more acute you must write again at once, otherwise report progress in about three weeks. You would be well advised to get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2d., post free, from our manager, and as your bird is fairly fit again, gradually get it on to the "hill of fare" and general treatment advised therein.

THE BRITISH BIRD MANUAL.

By H. NORMAN.

The Most Thorough and Practical Work on British Birds ever Produced. Published in two parts and complete bound in cloth. Part I. Hardbills. Deals in the fullest manner with Linnetts, Goldfinches, Bullfinches, and all other varieties of Finches. Part II. Softbills. With Blackbirds, Thrushes, Jackdaws, Larks, and most of the more commonly kept species of insectivorous birds.

This work, lucidly written by a noted specialist, contains fullest directions for Hand-rearing, Keeping, and Exhibiting the most popular of our British Birds. Each bird is dealt with separately, its nesting habits, etc., are fully explained, and these, together with a description of its general characteristics, will enable the novice to easily identify the various species. Each part contains a coloured plate and numerous black and white illustrations by the author.

Price complete, bound in cloth 2s., post free 2s. 3d., in parts 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Wisely fed birds are healthy birds, and healthy birds do you service. Avoid all errors of diet in feeding them, therefore will help you to feed them properly. It is especially valuable at this season when wild foods are to be had in such abundance, merely for the gathering. There are many sketches and illustrations of all the best known wild plants. 1/2 post free.

"Seeds, Foods, Wild Plants for Cage Birds,"

A HANDY BOOK.

MULE and HYBRID BREEDERS make your 1916 breeding season a record in every way by purchasing a copy of

CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS.

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading Exhibitor, and a leading Expert and Judge. Edited by G. E. Weston and C. A. House.

Complete Bound in Cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist, MR. H. NORMAN.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. The perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial, are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which breed light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates in this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a prize-winning Hybrid.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each 1/-, or fraction of 1/-, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing his receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

MEDICINES.

EVERY BIRDKEEPER has need of practical hints upon the prevention of diseases and their eradication from cage, aviary, and hutch. There are to be found in "Nutsell No. 5" post free 2d., from CAGE BIRDS, 151, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

"AILING Cage Birds and How to Cure Them," "Nutsell No. 6," an account of the troubles which beset captive birds, with the treatment and list of medicines to restore our pets to health. This will save you much discouragement and money, and cost only 2d. post free. From "Cage Birds," 151, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from agents (list frequently published).

"A VEAU"

This preparation of Krokodyne added to drinking water cures affections of the breathing and digestive organs, and is an excellent tonic, 1/- Address: W. Vale, F.Z.S., Q.M.C. Dispensary Bird Hospital, South Norwood, London.

Post-mortem examination and advice, by return post, 1/1. 50 years' experience.

NOT SINGING

AND IN THE SOFT MOULT. WANTED A TRIAL.

If you have any birds you are relying upon for the coming breeding season that are not singing or have just gone into soft moult, we guarantee you a perfect cure. DITCHFIELD'S TONIC DROPS and DITCHFIELD'S FAMOUS REVIVO given on alternate days will bring any bird into breeding condition. For bronchitis, wheezing, and hoarseness, get DITCHFIELD'S SPECIAL LUNG TONIC, the grandest medicines ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. For constitutional weakness and debility and for birds that are run down, or in slack feather, get DITCHFIELD'S FAMOUS REVIVO. This medicine is absolutely unequalled for giving new life and vigour to the birds, and for producing that smart tight appearance of the plumage so much desired by all fanciers. All the above remedies are sold in 8d., 1/2, and 2/- bottles; two 2d. bottles for 1/2, three for 1/3, four for 2/2; two 1/2 bottles for 1/1, three for 2/8, four for 3/6; two 2/- bottles for 3/6, three for 5/-, four for 6/3, and are sent away per return of post free.

Read what Buyers Say:

Mr. Cane, Exeter, writes:

The book is a fine work and I am pleased with it.

Mr. Hewdon, Hull:

I have followed the book's teaching during this breeding season and have done fairly well, having 43 young birds out of 60 eggs. Thanking you for your kind consideration during the time I had dealings with you.

Mr. Wilson, Fulham, London, S.W., writes:

This book contains all the information which the breeder and exhibitor requires, as it is based on sound scientific lines and practical experiences.

Mr. Padgett, Menstone-in-Wharfedale:

I shall keep this book, as I consider it a very fine work and well worth the money

LARGEST STOCK IN THE NORTH

If you are wanting good birds just send your cash to Editor and your order to me. I am bound to please you. I send all birds out on seven days' approval for cash or deposit. I have hundreds to select from; I have a grand lot of British leaving Liverpool this week on S.S. "Mesonabie". It makes no matter how far away you are, my birds are quite fit to stand any journey. Cook Siskins, good yellows, grand bibs and caps, win anywhere, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each, and a grand lot to moult out winners, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6 each; giant hens, 2/-, 2/6. I have to arrive next week 500 cocks and 150 hen Siskins from Holland. They are the largest obtainable. Reduction in prices for quantities. Dealers write. I have the finest and largest stock of Goldies ever seen, not smoky little rubbish; every bird a giant and good colour. Gems, with extra deep square-cut blaze, broad heads, nicely buttoned, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each, and a grand lot right for Members' Shows, all on full song, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6 each. Giant Norwich type cock Linnets, well pencilled, steady as rocks, 2/6, 3/6 each. One of the largest and best yellow cock Greenfinches in a cage, only 3/6; Redpoll, gem, 2/6; Corn Bunting, 3/6; monster cock Bullfinch, with double rich colour, real gems, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, 10/6. Giant hens, like Russians for size, 3/6, 5/6, 7/6 each; cock Brambling, good colour, nicely spangled, 1/-, 1/6, 2/-, 2/6 each. I have the following, all specially picked for muling:

Cock Goldfinch, 5/6; cock Linnet, 2/6; cock Greenfinch, 2/-; cock Siskin, 5/6. I hold the world's record for mulers and could fill this paper with records of birds bought from me. I have a grand lot already paired for the coming season, moreover, they are all first-class specimens and will do me credit wherever they go. Cock Linnet and Canary, 5/6; cock Siskin and Canary, 7/6; cock Goldfinch and Canary, 7/6; cock Goldfinch and Bullfinch, 8/6; cock Greenfinch and Goldfinch, 5/6; cock Siskin and Goldfinch, 6/6; cock Greenfinch and Linnet, 4/6; cock Siskin and Chaffinch, 7/6; cock Goldfinch and Chaffinch, 7/6; also cock Bullfinch and hen Goldfinch, feeding, gems, 10/6; all on approval; also Goldfinch-Greenfinch hybrid, full song, win anywhere, 25/-; Siskin-Chaffinch, 7/6; Redpoll-Goldfinch, 7/6; Light Goldie Mule, 15/6; Dark Greenie Mule, 8/6. I have a grand lot of call birds; Linnet, 2/-; Goldfinch, 2/-; cock Bullfinch, 3/-; Greenfinch, 1/-; Chaffinch, 1/6; Redpoll, 1/6. I have the finest and largest stock of singing Linnets in the world; moreover, I will give £100 if I fail to make them sing at any hour of the day or night. Cock Linnets, on full quality song, 2/6, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6 each. Singing cages, 9d., 1/-, 1/6. A grand lot of youngsters, full song, 1/-, 1/6. Call and hear my champions, see them sing with their wings down, dancing round their cage and singing as hard as they can. I have won all before me with these birds, and all are for sale, 10/6, 12/6, 15/6, 20/- each. The Secretary of Hull C.B.S. came to see me late one night and heard a bird singing in my training room. "What's that, a nightingale?" he asked; but no, it is a Linnet as good as any Nightingale, I opened the door, and one whistle from me set them all going. Everybody welcome, and all on approval. If you have a good bird and it won't sing try a bag of my secret mixture, 1/3, and they will nearly stand on their tails to sing. Try one of my Linnet whistles, 6d. post free. All the fanciers in Hull have one. Cock Lark, good songster, and beautiful cage, 4/6 lot. Beautiful pair of Doves, 2/-; Rock Mynah, 4/6 lot. Songster, minnie, etc., 15/6; Talking Parrots, 30/-, 35/-, 40/-; large stock of seeds, cages, dog collars, etc., Travelling boxes 2d. each. Bankers, London City and Midland. No waiting. SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 2," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2d. from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents, call on the nearest and get it for 2d. (244)

TOPICAL TIPS FOR TYROS.

Double breeding-cages are much better than single breeders.

The dividing partition should be entirely removable, so that the cage may be converted into a flight after the breeding season.

Earthenware nest pans are better than wooden nest boxes. They are more sanitary, and do not harbour red-mite.

Do not forget cuttlefish bone for your hens when they are about to lay.

Do not hurry to pair up your birds; they will tell you when they are ready. "More haste, less speed."

In pairing, remember that as a general rule, yellows produce quality of feather and buffs produce size.

Do not, however, pair two yellows or two buffs, excepting for special purposes. The knowledge when to do either will come only by experience.

A pinch of inga seed once or twice a week will go far toward preventing egg-binding.

Well dust the nest with pyrethrum powder before the hen commences to sit.

Encourage the hen to bathe during the last two days of sitting, but see that she does not take cold.

It is often the better plan to leave the cock with the hen while she is sitting, but if he is troublesome, take him right away out of her sight or hearing.

OBITUARY.

MR. ANDREW PERCIVAL (Hon. Sec., Provincial Roller C.C.).

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. J. T. Smith, Sec., that I have to acquaint members of the above club of the very sudden death of our esteemed late secretary, Mr. A. Percival. I know all will join me in offering our sympathy to his wife and family in their great loss.

CORPL. J. YEOMANS (Haltwhistle).

The sad news reached Haltwhistle last week, writes Mr. J. Nicholson, that Corporal J. Yeomans, 4th Battalion, Northumberland Fusiliers, had been killed by a sniper in France. Up till about two years ago Joe was an enthusiastic member of the Haltwhistle C.B.S., and he will be remembered as an exhibitor of Mules and British, showing in partnership with our chairman as Bowerbank and Yeomans. The news came as a sad blow to his many friends, and our deepest sympathy goes out to his wife who is left with five children.

MR. E. E. PASS (Hucknall).

We regret to hear of the death, on Jan. 28, of the well known cage maker, Mr. E. E. Pass. The deceased, who was only 44 years of age, leaves a widow and five children to mourn his loss. We understand that the business will be carried on as usual.

I regret to inform you, writes Mr. G. Greenwell, sec., Walsend C.B.S., that Mr. H. Fleck, the well-known local fancier, has suffered a great loss in the death of his wife after a long illness. Fanciers and friends will extend their deep sympathy with the family in their sad bereavement.

Profitable Canary Breeding.

By F. T. USHER
(St. Albans).

HIGH-CLASS Canaries are most successfully bred in cages by breeders of experience, with a fair amount of leisure time at disposal. Common Canaries may be bred by the merest tyro, and with very little expenditure of time or money if a few simple rules are followed.

Wire off a section of a small room. Let the wire run from floor to ceiling, the wire being not less than four feet from the wall, and the length not less than eight feet. Hang on the wires, about breast high, half a dozen of the ordinary penny nest baskets (not wood or earthenware). In the breeding season the owner will thus be able to look into each nest when the bird is off without entering the aviary. Separate the nests as far as possible.

Two months before breeding time (say the beginning of February) put four hens into the aviary, having, of course, supplied perches and food, plain canary and summer rape, and water. The water should be supplied daily, about half an inch deep, in a large flat dish, such as a flower-pot saucer. This will enable the birds to bathe at all times, and it should never be taken away from them. Keep also a supply of gritty sand on the floor and a supply of cuttlefish bone.

A little green food twice a week may be given—just a sprig per bird.

In the same room hang a cage containing a sprightly singing cock canary, not a large bird, but one of good colour. In addition to the ordinary food, give him a sprig of green food twice per week, and a teaspoonful of egg-food twice a week.

In the middle of March, if he is singing loudly, hang his cage on a nail inside the aviary. He will call the hens to him, and you will see him feed them through the wires.

When you have seen every one of the hens fed in this way, about the beginning of April, let the cock loose amongst the hens, and supply plenty of nesting material. Continue the egg-food as before. The nests will soon be full. Just see that all is well in the nests and disturb as little as possible.

On the first signs of a hatch, fill a pint jug or jar with water, and pack into it as much green food as it will tightly hold. Chickweed in flower, one day, dandelion the next, lettuce the next, and so on, ringing the changes. Never on any account let the green-food supply run short; this is very important for any shortage may upset the season's success.

Don't trouble about eggs for feeding hens, but keep for these a good supply of egg-bread made into a paste. Make it up fresh in the morning, and fresh at night. The birds will do the rest. The writer by this method has reared 62 young birds in one season from one cock and four hens.

CANARY BREEDING MADE SIMPLE.

By J. B. MOORE (Whitehaven).

ON New Year's Day, taking advantage of the holidays, and the weather outside being wretched, my partner and I went through our stock. Into a large flight that has a floor space of about 18 square feet, and is 5ft. high, we ran all the hens. These will remain there till about the latter end of March, when, should the weather be favourable, they will be each given a partner, and with careful attention we shall expect good results.

During the time the hens are in the flight, we feed on canary seed as the staple feed, and twice a week they will get, in addition, a feed of hemp and summer rape, a piece of apple now and again, also fresh dandelion leaves as they appear.

The floor is kept well covered with sea sand, with egg-shells well crushed and mixed along with it. Plenty of fresh water, both for drinking and bathing purposes is also supplied every day.

The cock birds are caged off separately, each in a roomy cage, to keep them in order, and fed on similar lines to the hens, with from about the end of February an addition of a sprinkling of dandelion seed twice a week. This we gather during the summer previous. Egg and biscuit are only given after pairing together.

Between now and putting together, all the cages are thoroughly cleaned, the insides get a coat of Duresco, and the outside are varnished; the room in which they are kept, which is a cold one, also undergoing spring cleaning.

Birds that have done well in former years are, if available, put together again, others are paired as considered most suitable, and without any preliminary introductions are put together, and though it may occasionally happen that they don't agree right off, in 19 cases out of 20 they settle down in a day or two, and get to business.

Nests have also been made ready by now; ours are mostly of the usual stamp, earthenware with a wire hanger hung on a nail between the two perches, opposite to cage door, and the linings are glued in. Each pair are given a supply of moss to use as they think best; some line up the pan to fit themselves beautifully, others simply play with it. When convenient to us the eggs are taken out as laid, and replaced in the evening of the day on which the third egg is laid. A sheet of paper or cardboard is hung in front of the sitting hen to keep her quiet. The cock bird remains with the hen, as a rule, but if he gets troublesome he is taken out and reintroduced when the young are about three or four days old.

While feeding young, ours are supplied with hard-boiled eggs mixed with Royal biscuits, put through a mill, three times a day—6 a.m., noon, and again at 6.30 p.m. They also get the young leaves of the dandelion, and when the young ones are four days old the pair are given a teaspoonful of soaked summer rape.

If all goes well, at from three weeks old, the young will be feathering nicely; a few more days and they will be leaving the nest. This is often a troublesome time, the hen is thinking of building again, and sometimes takes the notion to pluck the feathers out of the young ones, usually commencing with the growing tail. As a set-off to this we keep the nest-pan, intended for the second round, out as long as possible, and fasten pieces of coarse string inside the fronts of cages, this keeps the old ones going sometimes. Should these fail, we remove the young, along with the father, into a separate cage, running him in occasionally till the hen has laid again.

At five weeks old, some a little earlier, perhaps, the young should do for themselves. We allow ours plenty of room for exercise, and gradually, by using crushed hemp and canary in addition to the egg-food, get them on to hard seed.

How I Bred the Champion Cinnamons of 25 Years Ago

By J. BASTOCK (Moseley.)

BEING at the time an exhibitor of Canaries, and a keen observer of other fanciers' birds, I noticed at a show some grand Cinnamons from a fancier named Mr. Greenwood. Good shape, colour and good heads; if they had a fault it was that they were hardly large enough. At another show I saw some from a fancier named Mr. Kenersley; extra large, rather coarse, and failing in colour. Thinks I, if I could get some from each of these exhibitors, and cross them, I should most likely beat both of them, so I purchased a cock and two hens from Greenwood, and two cocks and one hen from Kenersley.

One of the cocks I disposed of as being too light for my fancy, and from the others I bred one of the best yellows out that year, and two buffs. The next season I paired two buffs together from them, and bred two buff cocks, probably the best that ever faced the show-bench—this was in 1891.

A Mr. Maylor had been champion for several years, and it was a surprise to the Fancy when he got beaten. Then came the affair of the Northampton people, which caused me to sell out. Mr. G. Scott, of Liverpool, purchased a few of the Cinnamons, and they put him at the top of the tree as a Cinnamon fancier at once.

At the present time I think there is a fine opening for a young fancier to improve the present-day Cinnamon. They are one of the few varieties that have deteriorated, especially during the last ten years.

Here is the method I should adopt if I were younger. I should purchase the largest and best Norwich-shaped specimen I could find, and pair him to a first-class clear yellow Norwich hen excelling in head properties. In all probability I should get a Cinnamon-marked hen or two, and these I should pair to the Cinnamon cock, their father. No doubt I should get some good Cinnamon hens, and very likely a Cinnamon cock; these I should pair to the best Cinnamons I had, or could find. If any young reader will follow this advice, I feel sure he will be successful.

HOW TO PAIR YORKSHIRES.

By SERGT. A. THOMAS (Wokingham).

NOW that the breeding season is drawing nigh a few remarks on pairing up Yorkshires will not be out of place. There is no doubt we cannot have too many lessons on this—the most important part of the breeder's operations. Before a novice can hope to pair up his birds correctly it is imperative that he should know the faults of the birds concerned. But how to know this? Well there are many ways.

A course that I found beneficial to myself, and the method I would recommend to all beginners, is the following: From time to time on the front page of CAGE BIRDS appears a drawing of a Yorkshire Canary, usually that of a noted winner. Study those drawings well. Don't paste them in a book, but paste them on the wall of your bird room instead, and in such a position that the eye is continually falling upon them as you go about your work. In a very short space of time the correct type of a Yorkie will become engraved on your mind.

Visit all the shows you possibly can, find out where the champion exhibitors are, and if you see them together discussing the birds, listen to their remarks, and in this way obtain as many tips as you can. Also keep an eye on the judge. When you see him disengaged, ask him in a respectful manner if he would mind telling you why this bird beats that one. These remarks, of course, must only be taken for what they are worth, they simply demonstrate the methods of my own education.

The Principal Points of a Yorkshire.

When I look at a Yorkshire, the first thing I think of is its position. This should be erect, fearless, head, neck, and back in a straight line. As the club allows 20 points for this, the importance is obvious.

The next matter of importance to deal with, and for which an equal number of points are allotted, is feather. This should be short and tight fitting, with close carriage of wings and tail. I am a firm believer in size, and for this reason I advocate the use of large stock birds. How often do we hear the phrase, Ah, if that bird only had another half-inch?

It is much better to pair two birds together that are a little over standard length than to use the big cock and little hen, or vice versa. Big, bulky birds are no use; the standard says, "with corresponding symmetrical proportions," and as a bulky bird is never well proportioned, we must discard them if we wish to breed to standard.

Now I come to a point that has been very much discussed lately. I refer to the question of colour, and although colour is not so important in the Yorkshire as in the Norwich, yet we cannot afford to ignore it, and we should bear this in mind when pairing up. It is no use pairing up a pale, washed-out buff with a pale yellow (lemon yellow). Follow the rule as far as possible of mating a marked bird with a clear.

In my opinion the best kind of green blood to introduce into your stock to improve the colour is the "Liverpool Green." I like to introduce the colour from the cock, and the quality from the hen, therefore it is obvious that the hen should contain a certain percentage of cinnamon blood. She should have the appearance of being chiselled from marble. Birds of good quality are also of good colour, the buff birds should be of that lovely salmon tinted colour we all so much like to see. All the colour food in the world will not put the right colour into a bird unless the colour has been bred into it.

The Persistence of Cinnamon Blood.

On the principle that like produces like, your birds will throw youngsters which are a medium between the breeding of the parent cock and that of the hen. Here are a few notes taken from my pedigree book, a volume I always study well when pairing up. Face value will often lead to disappointment when not backed by pedigree. There are very few Yorkshires to-day that do not contain a certain amount of cinnamon blood: If the breeder desires to breed cinnamon-marked birds, he should mate a cinnamon-marked cock to a dark-eyed hen, the latter generally are better in type. You cannot get cinnamon-marked birds from two dark-eyed birds if they have no cinnamon blood.

My father once told me that once you put cinnamon blood into a bird you can never breed it out, and I quite believe it. All cinnamon-marked birds are pink eyed, this is an easy matter to detect whilst the young birds are in the nest, their eyes then being almost red. It is hard to detect this when they have grown up, but if you run the bird into a show cage, hold it up to the window when the sun is shining, turn the cage to an angle so that the eye can be clearly seen, a faint pinkish tinge will be observed if the bird is really pink-eyed.

If you are going to try to breed an "Even Marked Cinnamon Yorkshire," you are tackling a difficult job, unless you know your stock for several generations. That is the reason why in a mixed colour Yorkshire class the even-marked bird gets the red ticket, as in addition to the other points markings have to be studied.

THE BREEDING OF Norwich Plainheads Crests and Crestbreds

By A. E. JEFFRIES (Richmond, Yorks.).

AS I am a breeder and exhibitor of all the above varieties, and have done a bit of winning at most of the leading shows of the North, I hope the following may be of some interest to readers. For breeding cages I like double breeders of good size, with sand trays and sliding partitions, as they can be converted into flights if necessary. These I wash out before and after the breeding season, using plenty of hot water with Jeyes' Fluid and turpentine mixed in it; this will settle all red mite or other insects. I do inside with washable distemper, and the outside with a coat of enamel if necessary, or a coat of varnish.

A young starter will find it best to purchase his stock from a well-known breeder, who is known to have birds which are winning on the show bench. Tell him what you really want, and also how far your pocket will go, and he will be sure to do his best for you. This is better than going to more than one source, for it is seldom that two different fanciers' stock will hit together.

When pairing up you must use your own judgment, unless the seller has already mated them up for you. I generally pair buff to yellow, and clear with ticked or marked. I run them into show cages, and where one fails in points I try to remedy these faults in the other, not overlooking quality, as this plays an important part at the present day on the show bench. I have several times seen a moderately sized bird well up in the eards, and have heard a lot of comment about it, but when its quality has been noticed its position could easily be understood.

I find I get more yellows by using yellow hens. If my birds lack size, or are a bit weak in heads and necks, I double buff, keeping the best from them for the next season. I have in-bred a little, and have had good results from father and daughter, but I pair according to which side the quality lies. The next season I find it best to pair right away from relatives, altogether.

As regards Crests and Crestbreds, I select, as near as I can, birds with good round crests, thickly feathered, and with good frontals. In Crestbreds I like good size, plenty of bone, with broad and round skulls, and long broad head feathers, as I can always increase length of feather.

I use two-variegated birds of medium size, a flat crest I mate to a dome-shaped Crestbred, with dense head feathers, but one has to use one's own judgment in pairing, and must do the best to keep the length of head feather.

I have done some double-cresting, but I find one must select birds about perfect in every respect, with good back crests, not bare necks, or failure will follow. In double-cresting you will get more Crests than Crestbreds, and these will do well for stock another year, mated to Crestbreds. My advice to a fresh starter, however, is to pair Crest with Crestbred.

About the end of March I pair up, not forgetting to let the hens have plenty of exercise by being turned into large flights or a good sized aviary. For feeding I give plain canary seed in the hoppers, nothing but the best I can get, as it is the cheapest in the end. I also give one egg a week all through the show season, mixed with Spratts' Cage Bird Food, and a little crushed hemp added.

Catching Mice in a Birdroom.

A New Method.

SIR,—I quite agree with your correspondent, M. R. T. in regard to the board against the wall. I have tried it with a box in the same fashion. But the most successful method I ever tried was a little coal tar in the mouth of their holes and round the outside with a little water in a hollow plate two feet off. I have killed both rats and mice by this method. It is worth a trial by anyone who is bothered with either, for it is inexpensive—a pennyworth in an old can will do.

WM. M. HASTINGS.

A Lady Reader Says—Keep Them Out.

SIR,—In a recent issue of CAGE BIRDS a fancier wanted to know how to get mice into traps in a birdroom. Why allow mice into the room at all? Now we all know those horrible little brutes cannot eat through tin, so could not J. Wadsworth nail strips of tin all round the room by the skirting boards, shaping each piece like an L? One part should be nailed to the floor, and the upper part to the skirting board. I think someone gave that advice before, and it is excellent. Catching mice, once they make their way in, is not much of a remedy; no matter how many you catch, there are more to come. Try some other remedy. Setting traps every morning is not a pleasant work for anyone; placing poison in a room is even worse. The best way and the cleanest way is to use the tin strips. "Prevention is better than cure."

S. G. RUBY.

The Steadying of Yellowhammers.

The Procedure of a Noted Exhibitor.

SIR,—If "Britisher" has an old bird he will probably never steady him. Presuming it is a young one, the best plan, I find, is to tie the wings together and put him in a flight with an old, steady cock or hen. He will soon get to feed well, and look out for mealworms. Don't have the perches too high. I keep him in this for a week or two, and then cage him off, first untying the wings, and putting him in a low cage, keeping this well down in the room, so that he gets used to one's passing in front of him. A daily bath greatly helps to steady him. These birds vary very much in disposition. I have won prizes with F.M. birds, and also have kept good specimens for two years, finally liberating them as absolutely hopeless.

W. F. LLOYD JAMES.

SIR,—Complying with "Britisher's" request, I am pleased to say that from my own experience, the Yellowhammer is about the easiest of our British birds to steady if handled properly. I treat fresh-caught birds as follows:

Give him a cage with a wire partition in front to hang bath on. Afterwards, hold a mealworm to the cage until he takes it. This might mean five or ten minutes, but once taken from your finger you have "got him."

If he refuses to bathe, as very seldom happens—place him on the floor of the birdroom opposite another British bird that does, and he will not be long following suit. I do not advise you to remain in the room whilst this is going on during the first week or so; after that time I think you will find the Yellowhammer "at home."

Of course, you might get a bird that does not steady, even though you do this for a while, and I can advise no better method than to visit the birdroom frequently, handle the restless one as much as possible, not forgetting the mealworm. If you have not the time, let one of the fair sex do it for you, and the result I feel sure will be far better than you anticipated. In conclusion, let me remind you to hang the bath on every morning, summer and winter, when the bird can please itself as to whether it wants it or not.

(MRS.) LILIAN E. T. DALTON.

SIR,—I have found from experience that Yellowhammers are better as show birds when hand-reared from the nest, as such birds become very docile. Of course it takes some time for them to come into full show plumage. If, however, you do catch a good coloured wild one, it can be tamed by using great discretion in its food supply, but this should not be done unless you are handy to give attention, as if you make one slip the bird is dead. Keep the bird on short rations and tempt him with a mealworm or two, as Yellowhammers rear their young on insect life and will greedily devour such in winter when short of that particular diet, and are forced to live on any wild seeds that happen to come across their path.

A good long cage, not more than a foot high, and with a canvas top, I find the best for a fresh-caught bird.

Identity of Thrush-Blackbird Hybrids Challenged.

SIR,—Under the above heading you published a letter in your last issue from Mr. Anderson, the owner of the supposed Song Thrush-Blackbird Hybrids, wherein he asks me a question.

Since some of your correspondents have tried to construe my previous letters as imputing fraud to Mr. Anderson, whereas I simply pointed out how it was possible for him to be labouring under a delusion, and that I imputed no fraud to him, I had fully made up my mind to have nothing further to do with the correspondence, but out of courtesy I reply to Mr. Anderson's question as to what I should expect in a genuine Song Thrush-Blackbird Hybrid.

I should expect a blending of colour or other characteristics of both parents. I have never in all my experience seen a genuine Hybrid of any cross that did not display in some form or other a distinct blending of both parents.

The birds in dispute, which I have had the unpleasant duty of leaving out of competition twice, show no characteristics whatever either in colour, shape, or action, other than those of the Song Thrush. I fail to trace any Blackbird characteristics in any shape or form, and my contentions were supported by everyone who spoke to me about the birds at the Holborn Hall show, where there was a very large attendance and much interest was centred in these birds.

Much has been made of the little duskiness of the flights, but feed has much to do with causing shades of colour, and hundreds of Thrushes flying wild can be found in different districts quite as dense in dusky shading as these birds. I thank Mr. Anderson for letting me have a second look at these birds, and for this time sending three, which gave me an opportunity of seeing whether there were any or diverse differences in any of them. My decision at Carlisle, however, has been more than ever confirmed, that these birds are simply Song Thrushes, not Hybrids.

I have given my reason for leaving these birds out of competition in an honourable, straightforward way, and decline to be hustled into accepting them as Hybrids at shows where I am judging. Moreover, I decline to take any further part in this controversy.

JOHN ROBSON.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to congratulate Mr. Anderson for so courageously sending his bird twice to London, and thus inviting an open discussion on its genuineness or otherwise. Mr. Anderson's action has done much to prove that he himself is genuine, whatever his bird may be. Up till now, I think only one has voted against it being a hybrid, but that one vote is a powerful one in the fancy, at least it has proved powerful in the past, as some who officiate as judges simply follow the lead of others. The judge, Mr. Robson, who has twice put this bird out is to be congratulated for doing so, if it is really a Song Thrush, as he so very emphatically declares it to be. But, opposed to Mr. Robson's opinion we have the opinion of other judges, and British bird experts who appear to be satisfied that the bird shows clear indications of its Blackbird parentage.

A prominent judge holds a very responsible and unenviable position, and it behoves him to be very cautious. It is a notorious fact that some men when they find they have made a mistake will keep repeating that mistake, rather than admit that they can do wrong. To err is human, but to knowingly repeat the error is scarcely divine. If Mr. Robson's contention is correct, then Mr. Anderson has apparently been shamefully hoodwinked by some of his neighbours, who have substituted Thrush eggs for his Blackbirds. And he must have been more than a bit slow not to observe the Thrush egg shells lying about his aviary after the young were hatched. The position appears to be either that Mr. Robson is capable of making a mistake, or Mr. Anderson is a humbug or a dullard.

How Does a Roller Organ Work?

SIR,—I think it would be of great good to the Fancy if some of your readers who have Roller organs would explain the construction of them. Such a thing is being asked for just now, and if a diagram explaining the working and principles was given in CAGE BIRDS, I feel quite sure that some of our "brainy" fanciers would be able to improve on the German machines, and put the result on the market for the general good of the Fancy.

A. WILSON.

New Society for South Shields.

SIR,—At the first meeting of the South Shields "Always Ready" C.B.S. held Jan. 26, we made 14 members and have got the names of others who are intending to join. We have decided that the yearly sub. shall be 2s. 6d., and there will be no entrance fee until April 12. We expect the fanciers of the North will come along and help make our Club a great success. Any fancier desirous of becoming a member should communicate with me, when full particulars will be forwarded.

How to Make Dull Black Paint.

A Recipe from a Practical Sign Writer.

SIR,—In reply to H. Cross's enquiry in this week's CAGE BIRDS for a recipe for dull black colouring, I suppose he wants a fast colour, which would not be affected by wet, and yet is to be dead black and dull. I will give him the best known recipe used by sign-writers; this is to make a quart, the quantities may of course be altered according to requirements.

Bring to a boil 1 quart of water in which you put 1oz. at least of powdered borax. While it is still boiling, add from 4 to 6 ozs. of shell lac and stir with a stick until quite melted, which it should do quickly; the borax causes the shellac to dissolve. You have then a liquid waterproof which may be made into any colour you may wish.

For dull black get 2 or 3 ozs. of vegetable black at the oil and colour stores; it is very light, and unless careful you will be unable to mix it. I use a very small quantity of boiled starch or flour paste, and with the flat of a dinner-knife work the powder into this on a smooth surface together until I get a very thick mixture; then I thin it down with the waterproof mixture to the consistency of paint, and apply with a brush in the ordinary way. The second coat will generally give every satisfaction. This paint is quite waterproof, and will not rub off when dry.

P. VIRGO, Signwriter.

SIR,—I notice in CAGE BIRDS that H. Cross wants to know how to make a good, dull black colouring for cages. If he will gather the Black from the top of bicycle lamps, mix it with oil, and add a fair quantity of turps., he will get an excellent dull black for cages. I trust this hint will be useful to him.

J. J.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Cross for a dull black colouring for cages, perhaps the following will suit his requirements, as I have always used it with success: Take 1 pint methylated spirit, 1 oz. spirit black (not lamp black), and 1 oz. shellac. Dissolve the black in half of the spirits, and the shellac in the other half. Mix all together, and it is ready for use. The shellac will take a few hours to dissolve, so it requires shaking occasionally. This I have found to dry almost as soon as applied. It should cost ninepence, but no doubt the spirits will cost more at present.

W. E. ARWOOD.

Proposed Federation of Roller Societies.

SIR,—Mr. H. S. Hill is mistaken in thinking that the P.R.C.C. are the prime movers in this scheme. The first move came from the Leeds Club, and it is about two months since they sent letters out to Roller clubs asking their opinion on the subject. The Provincial only took the matter up when they thought the matter was going to drag on till it was too late to bother about rings, and so at their last meeting but one they passed a resolution to ask for delegates from each society to be sent to Manchester to thresh the matter out.

The date has been altered from Feb. 5 to Feb. 12 so as not to clash with the B.R.C.C. show, so that another objection of Mr. Hill's is removed. He also says that the P.R.C.C. and Bolton will have all the say. The Provincial and Bolton will only have the same number of delegates as any other society, but why he picks at Bolton, unless it is because I am a member, I am unable to say, as they have had nothing whatever to do with it, and there are only two Bolton members who are members of the P.R.C.C. I think the real cause of the split in the fancy is the B.R.C.C. trying to over-rule all other societies, which I contend they have no right to do. In all matters appertaining to the B.R.C.C. I am quite willing as a member to conform to their rules, and to whatever is passed at their meetings, but I think they have no right to tell another society the majority of whose members are not members of the B.R.C.C. how they must conduct their shows.

As I am writing this a letter has just come from Mr. Norris to say the B.R.C.C. are sending no delegates. I am very sorry to hear this, for if they are not in favour of the scheme they could have come and given their views. To attend would not commit them to anything, and a meeting which included delegates from every society might tend to smooth a lot of matters over.

It is rather unfortunate that the scheme was not given more prominence in the press when first Mr. Best brought it forward, and I only wrote my last letter with the intention to bring it into the minds of Roller fanciers before the meeting took place. What I said in that letter was my own personal view, and was not intended to implicate Bolton Society or the P.R.C.C., of which societies I am only one member. I only have one vote. I trust that something will come of the meeting that will be of lasting benefit to the fancy.

J. KILSHAW.

SIR,—At the meeting of the British Roller C.C., held at the show on Saturday, Feb. 5, the following resolution was carried unanimously: "That the meeting having heard the letters which had been sent to the secretary from all parts of the country, and the correspondence in CAGE BIRDS, was unanimous in the decision to send no delegates to the meeting convened at Manchester."

J. W. NORRIS, Hon. Sec.

SIR,—What is wrong with the various offspring of the B.R.C.C.? Surely some of them have not grown so quickly that they have outgrown their parent, and so big and proud that they wish to leave the parent, who was the means of bringing them into being. It is a fact, I know, and well understood, that clubs such as Leeds and other Roller clubs are now able to look after themselves. It is ten years, perhaps more, since the Leeds R.C. was ushered into the world. It was very weak when born. Its only support was Mr. Walton and myself, but it soon grew up into a healthy body through support from good and generous fanciers like Messrs. Barnett, Ward, Atkinson, and others. In those days whenever we asked for support from the B.R.C.C. we got it, with good advice, and best wishes, from the secretary, Mr. Norris. We got everything we asked for, and at the open shows we got the best of entries from B.R.C.C. members. Then closed rings came up, to make the Roller fancy cleaner, and no man fought more than Mr. Norris for closed rings; they have proved a success. Then came the uniform show cage. There is no saying now that the judge can tell who the birds belong to by the cages. At that time there were several different kinds of cages at shows, now that is all finished with. When Leeds R.C. sent for rings no member was disappointed in not getting them, for Mr. Norris was always ready with them, and all the time I was a member of Leeds club we were well cared for by the parent club. I have not been a member of the club for some time now in Leeds, not having the time to attend and take an active part, but I read CAGE BIRDS regularly, and I gather there is something the matter with the offspring of the parent club, B.R.C.C. Has the parent neglected its offspring without really knowing it? Leeds and the rest of the clubs, if they have a grievance, must speak out, and not be too proud to tell their parent club where and when they have been neglected, so that matters can be put right again. If it is a question of fanciers not getting rings quickly enough, surely the B.R.C.C., through the secretary, Mr. Norris, will be prepared to remove this obstacle, so that every club shall be in harmony and smooth working with the parent club again. Whenever a grievance crops up, go to the proper place with it. Where a helping hand was given in infant days, surely it will be given at all times? I don't for a moment suppose that the old members of the Leeds R.C. will do anything to interfere with the smooth working of the B.R.C.C. My humble opinion is that rings issued from one centre will be far better than a separate issue for each club. If the trouble that has arisen is one of rings alone, I hope it will soon be got over. I speak with experience when I say that we always got the hand of fellowship and brotherhood extended to Leeds R.C. from Mr. Norris during my time with the club, and I should imagine that they would receive it again if the club requires it. If the parent club will not do what you want it to do, providing it lies in its power, then is the time to try other means, but not until then.

COALTOWN OF WEMYSS C.B.S.

General meeting, Victoria Hall, Jan. 27. Office bearers elected: Pres., Stewart Allan; vice-pres., T. Nicol; sec. and treas., A. Storrar; assist. sec., G. Whitbrook; auditors, Messrs. S. Allan and Wm. Smart; delegates for Fife League, G. Whitbrook, J. Duncan, and W. Smart. The profits from the show, £3 10s., were handed over to the Wemyss Soldiers' Comforts Fund.—A. Storrar, Sec.

EDINBURGH NORWICH & M.B.S.

Meeting, 142, High Street, Feb. 3. Mr. Charlton presiding over a good attendance. New members elected, Mr. D. Ballantyne and Mr. Jas. Selater. A discussion arose as regards the annual sub., and it was moved that 2s. extra be charged for special prize fund, this making the total 8s. per year. Decided to hold pair show next meeting, March 2, and we hope members will do their best to make same a success.—A. Bell, Sec.

W. STANLEY (Patriotic) F.F. & C.

Meeting Feb. 6. Mr. R. Peart was elected chairman for show; R. Hutchinson, hon. sec.; W. Cresswell, hon. assist. sec. Agreed to accept the offer of the Elite Hall for show; Mr. Reay kindly promised it free of charge. T. Dixon, Bedlington, and E. Atkinson, West Stanley, were elected judges. We made up a schedule of 77 classes, so let me have plenty of entries, which close Feb. 20. I have a lot of tickets left for admission. Please apply for some as we would like to have a good sum to hand over. Next meeting Feb. 13, Oxhill Central Club, at 11. Schedules will be ready next Saturday.—R. Hutchinson, Hon. Sec.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

Table show will be held in Cairn's Memorial Church Hall, Gorgie Road, Feb. 19, at 3. Classes: Nor. ck., hen; Bord. ck., hen; Scotch Fancy, A.O.V. Can., Goldf., Linnet, Bunting, Softbill, Siskin, Redpoll or Twite, A.O. Finch, hen, for hyb. breeding; pair for Mule breeding, ditto Hyb.; old Mule, Feb. 2d. per bird up to first three, above three free, which entitles exhibitors to free entry to judging competition. Non-exhibitors taking part in judging competition must pay sixpence. Several specials are forward. Monthly meeting during judging. Election of judges; classification for annual show; new members invited. Subs. 6s., entrance 6d.—J. C. Charlton.

BOLTON C.B.S.

Special meeting Jan. 20, Church Inn, Folds Road, a large number attended to discuss and fix dates for monthly meetings. Owing to some members being on munitions and working late, it was unanimously decided for the duration of the war to have our meetings the first Sunday in each month, at the above, at 7 p.m. We enrolled ten new members, and there is room for more. We cordially invite any fanciers or intending members to come to our meetings. If those wishing to become members will send name and address, I will give them any information they require. Entrance fee 1s.; annual subs. 4s.—J. Brooks, Sec. 320, Ainsworth Lane, Bolton.

RICHMOND (Surrey) C.B.S.

Meeting, Jan. 31, St. John's Hall; W. Phipps, chair, and a good attendance. Arrangements made for pair show, at St. John's Hall, Feb. 28. Mr. J. Robson, judge, birds staged at 6.30. Schedules will be sent as soon as ready. Mr. Birch handed over the books of the society to Mr. Collin Brown, remarking how sorry he was to take such a step. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the late secretary for the fine work he had done in connection with the society. New members are cordially invited to send me their names, and if a fair number will promise to attend meetings regularly no expense will be spared in making the same attractive; our membership will, I hope, double in 1916. Special prizes are given in each class where there are more than three exhibitors.—Colin Brown, Inglenook, King's Road, Hon. Sec.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A.

General meeting Feb. 1, headquarters, Mr. H. Boothman presiding over a fair attendance. After the confirmation of new officers and the revision of rules five new members were elected and seven nominated. We have plenty of room for more, and they will be sure of a hearty welcome. We endeavour to make the meetings interesting with table shows, lectures, washing demonstrations, etc. Decided to hold annual show Mar. 1, when we hope to see the usual number of members and friends. All previous ones have been voted huge successes, and we will endeavour to surpass them if possible. Arrangements made for table shows:—Feb. 15, Norwich, champ., ck., hen and pairs; amat. ditto, nov. ditto, March 7, Yorks., A.O.V., as above. Open and amat. Goldf. or Bullf., Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll, or Twite, A.O. Hardbill, Mule or Hyb., and Muling or Hyb. pairs, novices same. Specials for most points in Nor., Yorks., A.O.V., and British, etc., and for best team of four British. Judges will be announced later. It is hoped members will bring as many birds as possible. Next meeting Feb. 15. Entries for table show taken at meeting.—H. Boothman.

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Results of competitions held during the past season. Competition on the whole has been fairly keen, but entries in one or two instances have been very short, notably at Redhill and Chester. This is a great pity, as societies who cater for specialist clubs deserve, and should receive, support. Lack of support does not encourage committees to apply for patronage. It is also regrettable to see the apathy of the London members, who, with the exception of Messrs. Last, Hutchinson, and Humphries, have not staged a bird. It is to be hoped they have been too busy on war work, and that they will make up for lost time when brighter days come. Winners of the cups and specials:—S.B.F.C. cup, G. H. Madagan, 110; Newley cup, E. C. Last, 120; Most Points, Champ., G. H. Pratt, 71; Most Points, Novice, P. Hutchinson, 68; Champ. Crest, G. H. Pratt, 22; Novice Crest, F. Hutchinson, 22; Most Points in Green, A. W. Bacon, 34 points. Specials at Plymouth: Diploma, E. C. Last; Best 4th Prize, G. H. Pratt; Most Points Novice, E. C. Last; Cheltenham: Diploma, J. H. Madagan; Best 4th Prize, H. Elston; Most Points Novice, T. Beard; Chester: Diploma, E. R. Roberts; Best 4th, M. Thomas; Most Points, M. Thomas; Redhill: Diploma, A. W. Bacon; Best 4th, E. C. Chairman mentioned that one of our esteemed members, Mr. Voutt, had undergone a serious operation, but he was glad to say that he was on the road to recovery. Decided that Sec. write expressing sympathy and hoping he would be soon amongst us again. Vote of thanks to the Sec. for judging brought a pleasant evening to a close.—W. Curry, Sec.

LONDON AND P.O.S.

Meeting headquarters, Jan. 20. Mr. Crabbs presided over a good attendance. Decided that, owing to the earlier closing of licensed premises, it would not be possible to hold our pair and young bird shows at headquarters, so it was agreed to hold the pair show on Feb. 17 at St. Bride's Institute, Bride Lane, New Bridge Street, opposite Ladgate Hill Station. A lecture on Pairing was given by Mr. J. Robson, but unfortunately he was obliged to be out of the Raglan by 9.30. Mr. Robson said that there are 13 varieties of domesticated Canaries, viz., Norwich, Yorkshire, Crest, Cinnamon, Borders, Green, Dutch Frill, Rollers, Lancashire, Lizard, Belgians, Scotch Fancy, and London Fancy. In all cases it is a recognised thing to pair a two-year-old cock with a young hen, but it had advantages and disadvantages, and the tale that the more mature specimen would teach the youngster was no argument at all, as it is proved that nature gives intelligence for requirements, as is seen in the fact that a young hen can build a nest equal to a hen of five years, and a young cock can feed offspring just as well as one older. Passing over these facts, Mr. Robson briefly touched on condition. Lack of condition, he said, is the cause of non-fertile eggs, and also egg binding, and during his 45 years of experience he had never had an egg-bound hen that was in condition. He advised us to be very careful not to introduce deterioration into our stock, always to aim at producing the highest class birds, and said if breeders would only give these points more care there would be less failures. He then described the various good points and faults of each variety, and at the close of his remarks many questions were asked and suitably and clearly answered. A vote of thanks to Mr. Robson brought a pleasant meeting to a close.—H. L. Huggins, Hon. Sec.

LEICESTER (Hand-in-Hand) C.B.S.

Meeting and table show, January 25, White Swan, Market Place, Mr. Gibbins presiding. Balance sheet read for 1915, showing a balance of £13 1s. 5d. in hand, which should be sufficient guarantee of the management of this society, and probably exhibitors will bear this in mind for our next All England show on our usual dates, November 4 and 6. Vote of thanks was passed to auditors.

Table show, 96 birds, matched pairs. Mr. C. H. Walton judged, with the help of Messrs. Freestone and Gilbert:—Class 1: 1, 3, vhe, Day and Sturgess; 2, he, Gilbert; c. Moores. Class 2: 1, 3, vhe, Day and Sturgess; 2, Roberts; he, Gilbert; c. Hulse. Class 3: 1, Pearson; 2, Cobley; 3, Knight; vhe, Cayless; he, Layton; c. A. Bent. Class 4: 1, c. Layton; 2, Brookes; 3, Pearson; vhe, Knight; he, Cayless. A discussion ensued, members not failing to take advantage of the knowledge of Mr. Walton, who is always ready to give advice to beginners. Vote of thanks to judges closed a very interesting meeting.—O. B. Day and Roberts, Joint Secs.

Meeting and table show Feb. 1, White Swan, Market Place, Mr. Gibbins presiding over a good attendance. Decided that the usual guarantee be given to CAGE BIRDS for advertisement re open show. Mr. Gibbins was elected to judge next table show, Feb. 15. The table show was again the feature of the night, there being some excellent birds present among the 63 staged. Mr. Stevens judged. Cl. or Tkd. Yell. Ck.: 1, Day and Sturgess; 2 and vhe, Hulse; 3, Gilbert. Mkd. or Var.: 1, Day and Sturgess; 2, Roberts. Pairs Double Buff: 1, 3, and c. Day and Sturgess; 2, Gilbert; vhe, Robert; he, Hulse. Nov. Cl. or Tkd. Yell.: 1, Pearson; 2, Layton; 3, Hughes. Mkd. or Var.: 1, Hulse; Pairs Double Buff: 1, Knight; 2, vhe and c. Hulse; 3, Hughes; he, Layton. Siskin, etc.: 1, 2, and c. Brooks; vhe and he, Deakin. The class for Double Buff pairs was an entirely new addition to the programme, and proved to be exceedingly interesting, upon which a very good discussion took place. Vote of thanks to the judge closed a very enjoyable meeting.—O. B. Day and Roberts, Joint Secs.

GREAT COMBINED SHOW AT HOLBORN HALL

A SUCCESS BEYOND EXPECTATION.

The combined show of the London C.B.A., National British Bird and M.C., and the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League was held in the Holborn Town Hall Feb. 2 and 3. The entry was good—in fact, rather more than the committee expected, consequently the hall was scarcely large enough to contain the birds sent in, and to leave sufficient space for visitors. The attendance was exceptionally good, so that at times it was almost impossible to move about with any freedom, but in spite of this fairs and visitors appeared to thoroughly enjoy the show.

Are Amateur Classes Really Desired?

There was plenty to see, for every section was splendidly represented, and one could see choice examples of whatever variety one fancied. In the Canary section classes were arranged for champion, amateur and novice, but it is doubtful if the amateur classes are really required; three exhibitors had the amateur Yorks. classes to themselves, two the Borders, while there were only two entries in the Crests; the Norwich did somewhat better, 18 birds being staged, sent in by half a dozen exhibitors. The champions came up splendidly, every class having a fair number of entries, Crested birds heading the poll with twenty beauties.

As usual the members of the London C.B.A. put up a grand display of Yorks., the section containing birds of very high merit. Mr. L. Dykes' well-known exhibits, "Old Warrior," "Dreadnought," and "Queenie" each headed the poll in their respective classes. Mr. Robert Heggie staged a lovely buff hen, and also won in unlighted buff.

A Grand Array of Crests.

One scarcely knows how to express sufficient admiration of the magnificent collection of Crests and Crested birds sent in. It is a long time since London fanciers had such a treat. The competition was so keen that many famous birds that had won at outside shows were lucky to get in the cards. Mrs. Montagu Scott put down a grand team, winning in Crested cocks, Crested hens, and Crested birds, she also secured three seconds and a third. The coveted special (the Crest bowl for best young bird) was taken by Mr. A. J. Smith with the Cheltenham winner, the bird claimed at £25 from Messrs. Evans Bros., the breeders. Mr. Bal's young C.B. attracted a good deal of attention, and we have reason to think it would have changed hands if the catalogue price of £50 had been slightly reduced.

Norwich birds had many admirers, and although the levelness of type was not quite what we have seen at London displays, some really excellent birds were on view. Mr. Howe, of Wellingborough, secured the bowl with a lovely typical young buff. Mr. F. J. Martin, of Battersea, staging the runner-up.

Rare and Beautiful Hybrids.

On both days of the show it was at all times difficult to get a good view of the Hybrids; the crowd appreciated the good things provided, and were loth to leave the neighbourhood of those fascinating gems. The collection was quite exceptional, every class well filled with birds of high merit; one scarcely knew which to admire most—the chaste clears, the richly-coloured darks, or the interesting Hybrids between two British. Mr. Robert Heggie staged the winners in the clears, the variegateds, and the dark Canary Mules, but Mr. J. Crone secured the diploma for best Hybrid with his Red-poll-Bullie.

Mr. T. H. Anderson's three "Song Thrush-Blackbirds" were on view, and attracted a lot of attention; they had many supporters, though many failed to recognise their double parentage. It was the general opinion that another moult should more clearly define their parentage, especially if either of them prove to be cock birds.

Where the Crowd Gathered.

British as a whole—and especially the hardbills—may be reckoned top-notch. The winners one and all were a sheer delight to the eye of the fancier, while the general visiting public gravitated naturally to the end of the hall where they were staged, and remained there. Particularly hot were the Goldfinches, Hawfinches, Linnets, and Bramblingfinches, and the tussle to secure the decisions in these classes resulted in a series of very close contests. We noticed that sterling fancier and well-known exhibitor, Mr. Francis scoring a meritorious win in Linnets with a new recruit for which we predict many future successes. Mr. Burr's fine winning Goldie was quickly claimed at the catalogue price of £5 5s. Mr. P. McQuiston annexed several important honours for Scotland, one of them being the Parker Robinson medal for the best team of four. Mr. Lloyd-James worthily upheld the honourable traditions of Wales, whilst the Northern and Midland colours were carried to many victories by Dr. Wilson and Messrs. Chick, Camm, and others.

Softbills were less numerous than seedeaters, but hardly less attractive. Mr. John Frostick had again on view his charming Dartford Warbler, a delicate softbill who by now must have outlived many a hardy, robust Greenbird. He also secured the diploma for best British with a perfectly feathered Long-tailed Tit. Other striking exhibits in this section were the extremely docile Fieldfare staged by Mr. E. Stephens, and the three toppling Choughs and one Crow which composed the class for these interesting subjects. Mr. C. Prior judged the seedeaters, and Mr. J. Dewhurst the insectivorous, and their decisions were well received.

A Fine Lot of Foreigners.

For a members' show the Foreign section was certainly a great success, the only cause for regret being that the only available quarters obtainable were so inadequate for the large entry obtained; but the officials coped with their many difficulties so admirably that the visiting public were but little inconvenienced, and all three promoting societies deserve that the show should prove a financial success. Thirty-three classes were provided for this section, two only of which had to be cancelled, and the total entries were 196, a very satisfactory result. Mr. Chas. Cooper judged the Parrot classes, and Mr. R. J. Watts the remainder, their awards being well received. A noticeable feature of the section was the all-round excellence of the exhibits, all being staged in excellent condition.

The People Who Did the Work.

The management of the show was in the capable hands of Mr. Allen Silver, who had a trying time, the limited space available making his task all the more difficult, but he came through with flying colours. Mr. Thynne, "the ever willing," assisted in the clerical work, putting in two full days of real "gratuit." The Softbills and Foreign Birds were specially catered for by the Hon. Mrs. Bourke and Mrs. Thynne, and other willing helpers were Messrs. Johnston, Robson, Burt, Trower, Watcham, Runciman, Goymer, Wright, Francis, Frostick, Manning, and Dewhurst. The judges were Messrs. Chas. Cooper, R. L. Crisp, J. Dewhurst, C. Prior, John Robson, R. J. Watts. The sales totalled about £60, the highest price being £10 paid for Mr. Jeffrey's unnoted light Canary Hybrid, Mr. John Frostick's Double-fronted Amazon changed hands at £5 15s., but the majority of sales were of Canaries claimed at about £2 each. The attendance was capital, and among the visitors we noticed Mrs. McLaren Morrison, of Berkhamstead; Mrs. W. H. Askham, of Torquay; Mr. Chick, of Nottingham; Mr. Smith, sec. of Reading Society; Messrs. J. Howard and Smith, Norwich; Mr. Shirley, Birmingham; Mr. Steel, Sheffield; Mr. W. H. Howe, Wellingborough; Mr. Davis, Llandilly; and Messrs. J. Goodall, Sears, and others from Watford. The Duchess of Wellington visited the show on the second day and purchased a pair of Foreign Birds.

THE HYBRID SECTION.

Judge: Mr. J. Robson.

CAN.-HYB. CL. ETC. (8): 1, Heggie, splendid Greenf.-Can., grand bird for size, shape and feather, splendid col.; 2, he, Martin and Archer, well-known cl. Linnet "Perfection," still a beauty, but scarcely so sound in condition as we have seen him; 3, Lamb, lovely eye-mld. Goldie-Can., beauty for size and type, just a nice touch of blaze, tight as wax; vhe, Dr. Wilson, many thought to be simply a clear Canary; c, Crone. VAREG. (18): 1, Heggie, splendid, lightly mld. Greenf.-Can., grand size and shape, sound rich col., in rare fettle; 2, Martin and Archer eye and wing mld. Goldie beautiful bird, rare qual. and cond., grand shape; 3, Lamb, lightly mld. Goldie, beauty for size and type, grand qual., faultless cond.; vhe, McQuiston; he, c, Jeffreys. DK. GOLDF. OR LINNET (12): 1, vhe, Crone, magnificent Goldf., wonderful size, grand shapely bird, nice full rich blaze, in the pink; 2, Jeffreys, very fine Linnet, rare size, splendid shape, sound col., full of qual.; 3, Lamb, very fine Goldie, beauty for shape and col., lovely qual. feather, rare cond.; he, c, McQuiston. A.O.V. (13): 1, Heggie, bonny Greenie, magnificent size, shapely, sound rich col., in the pink of cond.; 2, vhe, Crow, very fine Siskin, capital size, nicely proportioned, rich even col., dense marking, full of qual.; 3, Goodall, well-known yell. Redpoll-Can., still the leading example of the cross, grand cond.; he, Dr. Wilson; c, Arnott. BULLF. ETC. (9): 1, Crone, magnificent Redpoll-Bullie, wonderful size, good shape, deep rich col., markings nicely defined, in the pink; 2, 3, vhe, c, Dr. Wilson, Greenfinch-Chaffinch, splendid example of the cross, grand size, beautifully mld., in very fine order; 3rd, lovely Canary-Bullie, not the biggest in the class, but a good one, grand col., full of qual.; he, Martin and Archer. A.O.V. (15): 1, vhe, Dr. Wilson, very fine Goldf.-Linnet, good size, rich col. for the cross, in fine fettle, but we rather preferred 2nd, McQuiston, magnificent Goldie-Siskin of wonderful size for this hybrid, shows parentage plainly, well mld., and in grand cond.; 3, Crone, Goldf.-Greenf., exceptional size, rich col. and well mld., although fat spoilt the contour; he, Thurley; c, Lamb. PAIRS (6): 1, Shipton, very fine cock Goldie and hen Bullie; 2, Offord; 3, c, Silver; vhe, Wren; he, Sadler.

THE BRITISH BIRDS.

Mr. C. Prior's Classes.

GREENF. (10): 1, 2, Francis, slashers, buff and yell. respectively, the buff leading, fine solid feathered birds; 3, 4, W. H. Howe, a similarly assorted couple as to colour, in fine trim, but rather more cloudy; vhe, Goodall; he, Camm; c, Offord. HAWK. (9): 1, Camm, giant buff, one of the best of birds, and excellent all-round merit, scores by sheer immaculate condition over 2, Andrews, a giant Jonque, of equal technical make up; 3, Oliver, a lovely Jonque, but not a giant, grand in all points and presses 2nd very hard by gaining in condition what he loses in size; 4, Chick, really first-rate hen; vhe, Burr; he, c, Francis; all grand ones, a very strong class. GOLDF. (20): 1, he, Burr, the winner a grand shower, blaze of correct square pattern, extra good on top, clear, bright, silky, and polished to perfection, best of tanning and buttons, a clear win; 2, Collins, trifle narrower in cut of blaze and a mere shade less silky in texture of feather, other wise a real topper; 3, Stephens, very bold and richly coloured, expansive blaze, though not square, highly polished throughout, three outstanding Goldies these; 4, Oliver, has a blaze that will carry him far, but just lacks body properties for such company; vhe, Chick; c, Camm. LESSER REDPOLLS (4): 1, McQuiston, overshadows the others, particularly good in size, col. and head points; 2, Chick, nice type and col., good lacing; 3, 4, Francis, 3rd close up to 2nd and similar, 4th a good F.M. SISKIN. ETC. (11): 1, he, Francis, Siskin, capital nat. col., extra large and well cut bib, grand cap and lacing; 2, Richards, grand bodied Twite, rich col., excellent marking, nice natural bloom; 3, Stephens, bold headed and well mld. Mealy Redpoll; 4, McQuiston, Siskin, smaller bib than winner, grand dense markings, over "fed"; vhe, Lloyd James, an extraordinary Twite, but too wild as yet; c, Oliver, Siskin. LINNET (16): 1, 3, Francis, winner a gem, lovely head, absolutely sound rich nutty col. throughout, beautifully mld., back front and flank, well displayed flights, a trifle active, but a good one indeed, 3rd well-known London winner, looking and wearing well; 2, McQuiston, again an extraordinary bird, thick clubby type, lovely col. and making, fine polish, hard to peg back, a trifle in skull and wing flights all there was in it, two lists required; 4, Hobden, best of type, col. and lacing, bit open in front; vhe, Dr. Wilson; he, McQuiston; c, Gidham. BULLF. CK. (16): 1, McQuiston, fine big silky feathered Bullie, broad, well polished cap, deep rich breast, smooth as a bottle, good win; 2, Arnott, similar, but beaten in finish; 3, Francis, best of type, narrower cap, not so level in breast col.; 4, he, Dr. Wilson, a bit slack at judging time or might have been 2nd, all-round a good one; vhe, Andrews; c, Wilmot. BULLF. HEN (5): 1, McQuiston, excels in size, type and col., splendid cap, fine cond.; 2, Wilmot, almost as large, beafen cap and col.; 3, Shipton, beaten size and cond.; 4, Major; vhe, Soper. CHAFFINCH (9): 1, Francis, not over large, but bright and rich in col., nice blue head, shapely and steady; 2, Dr. Wilson, larger, nicely contrasted colours, but rather pale yet, lacking also the blue head and neck; 3, 4, Stephens, stylish couple, but too much inclined to "chocolate" breast colouring; vhe, Silver, excellent F.M.; he, Camm; c, Wren. BRAMBLE (5): 1, Dr. Wilson, a champion, the best we recall for some time, bold size and type, extraordinary mantle and back spangling, good flanks, beautifully rich and clear in colouring, grand polish; 2, Brade, another topper, quite close to winner, even better in flanks, just beaten across breast and hardly the high cond.; 3, Chick, fine, stylish Jonque, any amount of colour, but inclined to be cloudy, beaten also in spangling, still a good one, A1 feather; 4, he, Stephens; c, Francis, very hot class, though small. YELLOW BUNTING (6): 1, Chick, real good Hammer, best of head and eye markings, clear and bright col., well polished and well shown; 2, Lloyd James, close up, similar head properties, but hardly so clear in crown, even better body; 3, Offord, best body in class, good head markings, but lacking in density and clearness; 4, Crone; vhe, Wilmot. OTHER BUNTINGS AND CROSSBILLS (8): 1, Taylor, perfectly feathered and well behaved Snow Bunting; 2, Francis, excellent Corn Bunting, good cond.; 3, Dr. Wilson, charming, perfectly conditioned Crossbill; 4, Chick, Reed Bunting, a good one which might have taken 2nd; vhe, Stephens, Corn Bunting; he, Shipton; c, Stephens; both nice Reels. FINCH AND BUNTING HENS (15): 1, Lloyd James, wonderfully fine Yellowhammer, extraordinary size and col., most perfect markings and grand polish; 2, 3, Chick, 2nd extremely good and well shown Corn Bunting, taken on faith as to sex, hens being indistinguishable from cocks, 3rd Yellowhammer, so close to the winner that it could not but score; 4, Reed, excellently feathered and well shown Greenf.; vhe, he, c, Richards.

Mr. J. Dewhurst's Classes.

THRUSHES, ETC. (9): 1, Stephens, really exceptional Fieldfare, in perfect order, tame as a kitten, splendidly staged, good win; 2, Andrews, richly col. Song Thrush, good size, excellent arrowing; 3, Shipton, uncommonly good Blackbird, dense flights, good crocus bill and cere; 4, Hathaway, sleek, well-spotted Starling; vhe, he, Stephens; c, Frostick. NIGHTINGALE, ETC. (6): 1, Tont; 2, Maxwell; 3, Hon. Mrs. Bourke, all Nightingales, leader has most size and best type, 2nd slimmer build, richer col., exquisite trim, as was the 3rd, a sweet exhibit; 4, Tont, a charming Blackcap; vhe, Hose, a nice Blackcap hen. CHIFFCHAFF, ETC. (3): 1, 2, Frostick, the veteran but still youthful looking Dartford Warbler winning, 2nd a pretty happy looking Jenny Wren, most attractively staged. LARKS, ETC. (7): 1, Tont, most elegant and taking Blue-headed Wagtail; 2, 3, vhe, Lott, the now noted team of Skylarks and Shorelark in the usual line order; 4, Hon. Mrs. Bourke, bonny Tree Pipit; he, Tont, good Yellow Wagtail, tail slightly damaged unfortunately. CROWS, CHOUGHs, ETC. (1): 1, Taylor; 3, Miss Smyth; 4, Shipton; three handsome Choughs, with little to choose between them; 2, Shipton, a jolly Black Crow, very creditable exhibits these and high testimony to the enthusiasm of their owners. But where are all the Magpies and Jackdaws? A.O.S. INSECTIV. (3): 1, Robinson, Waxwing, the usual combination of beauty and indolence that characterises these birds; 2, Miss Smyth, very nicely feathered hen Red-backed Shrike, a species rarely hatched now; 3, Richards, Waxwing, loses in size to the winner. ABNORMALLY COLOURED (4): 1, Martin and Archer, the remarkable clear Yellowhammer, still looking well; 2, Wade, almost white Goldf., yet still showing a vestige of scarlet blaze; 3, Frostick, Greyish-white Blackbird; 4, Lloyd James, rare-feathered Chaffinch, we missed. SELL. (6): 1, Goodchild, smart Goldf.; 2, Shipton, nice Yellowhammer; 3, Offord, Hawfinch; 4, he, Francis.

THE FOREIGN BIRDS.

Mr. C. Cooper's Classes.

GREY AND AMAZON PARROTS (4): 1, Frostick, double-fronted Amazon, very tight, a gem; 2, Silver, good Salvin's Amazon; 3, vhe, Wade, nice blue-fronted and Cuban Amazons. LOVEBIRDS (6): 1, c, Silver, Peach-faced and Blue-winged, the former a grand pair; 2, vhe, he, Maxwell, perfect pair of Black-checked, like paint, Madagascar, and Peach-faced; 3, Hawkins, nice pair Red-faced Coues. COCKATELS, ETC. (5): 1, Miss A. B. Smyth, White-winged Parakeets; 2, Silver, very fine pair of Cockateles; 3, Frostick, also good Cockateles; vhe, Hawkins; he, Hon. Mrs. McLaren Morrison, Pandava Coues, a blaze of colour, how we bit rough. A.O.S. PARROTS (3): a good class of interesting and varied species, among which the Senegal and Eclectus easily took the palm for col. The Rev. Raynor's well known pair of Meyer's Parrots failed on this occasion, failing to catch the judge's eye, being thrown, we think, a little "off colour" by the journey to the show; 1, he, Frostick, Eclectus Parrots, hen and cock respectively, a nice couple, gorgeous coloration; 2, Miss A. B. Smyth, Meyer's Parrots, a fine pair; 3, Silver, Mueller's Parrot, excellent form; vhc. Rev. G. H. Raynor, Seagull Parrot, very rich col., tight and silky. GREEN BUDGERIGARS (12): A really fine array of these popular favourites, not a poor pair among them, yet those in the money were well placed by the judge: 1, 2, Shipton; 3, Frostick; vhc. Maxwell; he, Hubbard; c. Hay. RINGNECKS (2): Disappointing that a class for such freely kept species should have been so poorly filled: 1, Silver, a nice specimen of the uncommon Malacca Long-tailed Parakeet; 2, Shore Baily, Blossom-headed Parakeet, exquisite col., very tight, a gem. LORIES, ETC. (5): 1, 2, Maxwell, Red-fronted Lories, and Ornate Lorikeet, rare and beautiful; 3, Frostick, well-known Crimson Lory, tip-top form; vhc. Reed, beautiful pair of Blue Mountain Lories, like paint; he, Wade, Ceram Lory, exquisite col. BROADTAILS (10): No less than seven species of this interesting family were staged, and a fine sight they would have made if they could only have staged side by side, representing as they do every hue of the rainbow: 1, Frostick, exquisite King Parakeet, a good first; 2, Wade, gorgeous Crimson-wing, very tight and silky; 3, he, Silver; Yellow-Vented Blue Bonnet, perfect form, and good pair Red Rosellas; vhc. Hawkins, Feunants; vhc. c. Hon. Mrs. McLaren Morrison, Mealy Rosellas. A.O.S. PARRAKEETS (3): Miss Clare's Queen Alexandras were an absentee; 1, Maxwell, exquisite Hooded Parakeet, without a blemish; 2, Frostick, good Bloodwings, exquisite, but nevertheless should have been wrong classed, their proper place being in the preceding class.

HOLBORN HALL SHOW.

Mr. R. J. Watts's Classes.

YELLOW BUDGERIGARS, ETC. (7): All good exhibits: 1, 3, he, Silver, Yellow Budgerigars, a fine pair, but purity of col. not much to boast about; 2, good White Javay; 3, Goodall, White Java, large and pure; vhc. Shipton; c. Wade. MANNIKINS, ETC. (7): 1, 2, c. Silver, Magpie Mannikin, Grey Javay, and White-headed, a very nice trio; 3, Buckingham, White-headed Mannikins, very tight; vhc. F. Howe; he, Wade. WEAVERS, ETC. (4): 1, 3, Silver, Ultramarine Combasou, like silk, perfect, but we think might have given place to the 2nd; 3, an uncommon Yellowish Weaver; 2, Maxwell, Jackson's Whydah, a grand exhibit, our choice for first; vhc. Hubbard, Jackson's Whydah. RIBBON FINCHES, ETC. (12): A very fine class of the so called common species, all in such excellent form that it would be invidious to do more than remark that the prize-winners just about merited their position: 1, 3, Silver, Saffron Finches and Common Combasous; 2, Buckingham, Indian Silverbills; vhc. he, F. Howe, Combasous and Ribbon Finch; c. Goodchild, Zebra Finches. GOULDIAN FINCHES (6): A decidedly good lot, yet with the winners well ahead. Unfortunately the Rev. G. H. Raynor's Red-headed escaped from its cage and it was not re-captured till judging was over—this was very hard luck as but for this mishap it would probably have been placed 3rd; 1, Row, exquisite pair of Red-heads, the hen one of the finest we have ever seen; 2, Mrs. Montague Scott, pair Black-heads, hen not so good as the cock; 3, Silver, Red-head, cock, good col.; vhc. Maxwell; he, Mrs. Raynor. PARROT FINCHES, ETC. (4): Every exhibit a gem: 1, C. H. Row, pair Fire-tailed Finches, perfect, easy first; 2, Hon. Mrs. McL. Morrison, Rainbow Bunting, charming specimen of an exquisite species; vhc. Goodchild, Rufous-tailed Grassfinch, quite one of the best of its kind we have seen. A.O.S. GRASSFINCHES (7): Again all round excellence, and separation must have been very difficult: 1, 2, Silver, pairs of Chestnut and Yellow-rumped Mannikins, both pairs immaculate, either could have been first; 3, Maxwell, perfect pair of Long-tails, like silk; vhc. Silver, nice pair of Rufous-backed Mannikins, a welcome re-appearance; he, Goodchild; c. Frostick, good Diamond Finches. CERTAIN WAXBILLS, ETC. (10): Common! Yet a "feast of beauty and a joy for ever": 1, 3, Hon. Mrs. McL. Morrison, Gold-breasted Waxbills and Lavender Finches, "gems of the first water"; 2, Silver, Firefinches, very tight and silky; vhc. he, F. Howe, Gold-breasted and Cordon Bleus, the latter very smart; c. Maxwell, Firefinches. AVADAVATS, ETC. (5): For delicate beauty this quintette were not surpassed by any of the birds staged: 1, 2, F. Howe, two pairs 8t. Helena Waxbills, the leaders easy winners, better there could not be; 3, he, Silver, Orange-cheeked and Grey Waxbills, very tight and silky; vhc. Hubbard, Orange-cheeked Waxbills. A.O.S. WAXBILLS (7): Such gems of the feathered world are beyond praise: 1, Maxwell, Violet-ears, an exquisite pair, good leaders; 2, c. Arnott, Black-cheeked Waxbills, good leader, very close, and Melba, a beautiful pair, but not quite tight; 3, Mrs. Montague Scott, another good pair of Violet-ears; vhc. Hawkins, Violet-ears, he, exquisite Melba finch, in fine form. CARDINALS (9): One or two had damaged their plumage during transit: 1, 2, 3, he, c. Silver, Virginian, Green, Red-crested, Green, and Pope, a perfect quintette, but all colour; vhc. F. Howe, Virginian. A.O.S. SEED-EATERS (7): 1, Hathaway, well-known Seedy Finch, perfect, but in the yellow plumage, assumed in captivity, instead of the wild scarlet; 2, 3, Wade, Mexican Rosefinch and St. Helena Finch, very tight and silky; vhc. Silver, Green Singing Finch; he, c. Hubbard, fine Sulphury Seed-eater, we thought might have been higher, and African Sparrow. Doves, ETC. (4): 1, Silver, Emerald Dove; 2, vhc. Manning, pair of Diamond and Masked Doves; 3, Frostick, Peacocks Dove. SUNBIRDS, ETC. (4): These flashing jewels of the bird-world imply defy description, their iridescent plumage changing with every shifting position: 1, 2, Hon. Mrs. Bourke, Malachite and Black-breasted Sunbirds, the former perfect, the latter in exquisite form, but not quite through the moult, or would have been higher; 2, Miss Clare, Purple Sunbird, a flashing jewel, perfect; vhc. Silver, Purple Sunbird, out of col., interesting. SUARIBIRDS, ETC. (1): A treat to watch and simply beggar description. An interesting feature was the coming together of the Indian and African Sunbirds, both were beautiful, but the dainty diminutiveness of the former was very noticeable: 1, 2, Silver, pairs of Yellow-winged Sugarbirds and Indian White-eyes, beyond praise, better never seen; 3, vhc. Arnott, Yellow-winged Sugarbird and African White-eye, both very nice, but the long journey from the North had evidently robbed them of some of their sprightliness. TANAGERS (4): This class did not sustain its reputation, as the usual variety was lacking, and while all were beautiful, one indeed the gorgeous rainbow hues of past shows: 1, 2, 3, Mrs. McLaren Morrison, Black, Blue, and Scarlet, a very fine trio; vhc. Silver, Archibishop, a well-known and patriarchal winner. BILLBILLS, ETC. (6): 1, Hon. Mrs. Bourke, very fine 8t. Shama; 2, vhc. Miss A. B. Smyth, Dyal bird and Shama; 3, A. Silver, Peckin Robin, very smart, but bit over coloured. CROWS, STARLINGS, ETC. (14): A most interesting class, which repaid close examination, but Mr. Shepherd's team of well-known Mynahs was absent: 1, Frostick, Yucatan (Blue and Black) Jay, well-known winner, perfect; 2, vhc. Silver, Purple-headed Glossy Starlings, beyond praise, and rare Wagler's Mangest, a beautiful species with a shining garment of black above and ruddy orange beneath; 3, Stewart, Wandering Tree-Pie, without blemish, better never seen; he, c. Miss A. B. Smyth, Plumed Jay and Tronpial, Malabar and Mandarin Mynahs, and Green Glossy Starlings, also staged. A.O.S. LARGER (3): We cannot quite agree with the placings here, as the bird catalogued as a Trinidad Thrush appears to be a Mynah and if so, was in its wrong class. Probably the rarest bird in the show was Mr. Stewart's Bare-eyed Thrush, and this was our choice for first in any case: 1, Miss Barlow-Massick, "Trinidad Thrush," in fine order; 2, Stewart, Bare-eyed Thrush, perfect and rare, clad in plain array, but has certainly a chaste beauty of high order, our choice for first; 3, Miss A. B. Smyth, Himalayan Whistling Thrush, a beautiful bird, but in rough plumage. FOREIGN HYB. (9): Interesting class, of which we think two—Squamata x Californian Quail, and Necklace x Senegal Dove—were exhibited for the first time. Some of them were very attractive, and in most of them both parents were about equally indicated: 1, vhc. Wade, Magpie Mannikin x Bengalese, one of these hybrids is dark, the other is mostly white, and, but for contour and beak, might be taken for a Bengalese; 2, Shipton, St. Helena Seed-eater x Grey Singingfinch, very smart; 3, Shore Baily, Squamata x Californian Quail, striking and interesting; he, Silver, Red-headed x Ribbon Finch. SELL (3): 1, Reed, Red-faced Lovebird; 2, 3, Hawkins, Rosellas and Black-necked Lovebirds.

CITY AND COUNTY OF PERTH

Annual pairs show, Jan. 29, Laidlaw Hall, Leonard Street, with a good entry of 43 pairs. Mr. James Dougal judged and gave satisfaction. WALTON, EVERTON C.B.S.

Members' show, headquarters, Jan. 19. Judge, Mr. J. Thornton. Over 300 birds were staged in perfect condition, which made it necessary to procure the services of Mr. Wm. Young to judge the British, Borders, and Norwich. Quality was exceptionally good all round, especially in novices. Brit. classes, which were open to the district, filled well and made an attractive feature, some very fine Softbills being present. A generous list of suitable specials was provided, which caused keen competition. Cup for most points was won by Mr. F. Rothwell, with 102 points; 2nd, Hutton, 78; 3rd, Rowlands, 67. The Chairman and Sec. were enabled to pay out all prize money on day of show, and wish to express their appreciation of the help rendered by other officials and members. Champ. Yorks. Cl. or Invis. WANSTEAD F. AND F.S.

Third annual show, Cambridge Park Hall, Jan. 20. The 5 cups were in competition for the first time, the cage bird cup going to Mr. W. L. Taylor, who secured the win with a very nice Norwich Canary. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, Mr. W. L. Taylor had the Norwich section to himself; in addition to cup he also secured special for best Canary. In Amat. Nor. Mr. Dalton scored 4 firsts. Nov. WEST BROMWICH C.B.S.

Inter-club show, Nov. 20, at Dartmouth Hotel, between City of Birmingham, South Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and their own society. Entries were extremely poor, only 111 entries in 34 classes, and 29 exhibitors out of an approximate 144 members of the four societies. The following won specials: Best Norwich, Messrs. Gibbons and Weeks; best Yorkshire, Mr. W. C. Wells; most points Novice section, Mr. Hawkesford; most points British section, Mr. J. A. Tonks, who also won members' silver challenge cup, which now becomes his own property. Mr. J. H. Roe judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction. Nor. Yell. CLUB REPORTS.

LEITH O.S.

At last meeting the following new office-bearers were elected: Pres., Mr. J. Allan; Committee, Messrs. B. Buglass, A. Anderson, W. R. Dunn and P. Galloway; Auditors, Messrs. A. W. Watson and D. Purves; Sec., John A. Muir, 234, Leith Rd., Leith.

DARVEL C.B.C.

Annual general meeting, Town Hall, Jan. 16. Mr. N. Hopkins presided over a poor attendance. Sec. read balance-sheet for year, which showed the club to be on a good financial basis. Auditors reported they had examined the books and found them to be correct. Owing to the small turnout it was agreed to delay election of office-bearers till further meeting.—J. Taylor, Sec.

GUISELEY, YEADON C.B.S.

Members held a supper at headquarters, Regent Hotel, Guiseley, Jan. 23; a party of about 28 sat down to a splendid repast provided by Mr. and Mrs. E. Waddington. After the supper the following entertained the company with some good singing: J. Shaw, S. Freeman, and Rhodes; Mr. P. Lee at the piano. The following friends and members offered specials to be competed for during the year: W. Long, F. Myers, C. Thornton, A. Brown, F. Pawcett, A. Wheatley, and Mr. Philip Mason. Votes of thanks were given to the host and hostess and the singers.—W. Rose, Hon. Sec.

SACRISTON P.P.R. AND C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, Old National Schools, Front Street, Jan. 22. Balance-sheet was presented and showed a balance in hand of £10 8s. 4d. Officers elected for coming year: Pres., A. S. Gairbairn, J.P., M.P.; Vice-Pres., as last year, on receiving their annual donations; Treas., W. Wright, jun.; Sec., W. Dodd; Assist. Sec., R. Forster; Chair, R. J. Scofer; Vice-Chair, R. Wilford; Committee, Messrs. A. Sutherland, H. Forster, M. Archer, J. Ord R. Forster, R. Dunston, R. Dover, W. Miller; Hon. Auditors, A. Sutherland, J. W. Thunkettle. Annual open show will be held Sept. 9. Secs. please note date.—Wm. Dodd, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW C.B.A.

Annual general meeting, Jan. 21, Nelson Temp. Hotel, Mr. J. F. Park, chair. Financial statement for 1915 adopted, showing a small balance on right side for 1915 show. Election of office-bearers: Pres., Mr. A. Maxwell; vice-pres., Messrs. A. Sloan and P. Houston; sec. and treas., W. Hutchinson; assist. sec., Mr. J. F. Park; auditors, Messrs. A. Crawford and Mr. R. E. Gibb. Messrs. Jeffrey, McClymont, A. Muir, R. T. Anderson, and A. K. Hunter were added to last year's committee. Show for 1916 fixed for Nov. 10-11, and half-yearly meeting for election of judges, etc., for Mar. 24, at 6.30, Nelson Temp. Hotel. Vote of thanks to retiring office-bearers and chairman terminated the meeting.—W. Hutchinson, Sec.

CLYDEBANK C.B.C.

Meeting, Jan. 20, Mr. McGowan presiding. Balance sheet for 1915 read and adopted. Office-bearers: Pres., Mr. G. McGowan; Vice-Pres., Mr. J. Morton and Mr. T. Sheridan; Treas., Mr. D. Chambers; Sec., Mr. W. Kane, 52, Second-avenue, Clydebank; Committee, Messrs. McLean, Mallon, Laing, McCordie, Tawse, Robb and Clinne; Auditors, Messrs. McCordie, Blyth and Simpson. Agreed to hold pair show Feb. 26. Classes: Nor., Yell. Cl. and Buff. hen, and vice-versa; same in Borders; Crests: 1, Yorks.; 1, A.O.V.; 1, Muling Pairs, Linnet-Can. and A.V. except Linnet; Hybrid Pairs, except Bullfinch hen, and one for Bullfinch hen only. Agreed to discontinue post-carding members for monthly meetings. Mr. P. Mason was elected a member.

OPENSHAW, GORTON C.B.S.

Annual meeting, headquarters, Jan. 26, with a poor attendance. Balance sheet was adopted, and the year closed with a nice balance of £6 4s. 9d. Officers nominated: Mr. A. S. Evanson, Pres.; Messrs. Gairbairn, Foxall, Giles, Daley, vice-pres.; Messrs. Beidall, James Dixon, Etchells, Phillips, committee; Messrs. Langfield and Richards, trustees; Messrs. Dixon and Giles, auditors; and Mr. Gilbert, treas. Decided to have two nest shows and annual show, same prizes as last year; trophy to be competed for by both amateur and novice with four starred birds. Novice and amateur prizes to be counted for with four highest birds; if no competition, only half points to count; 5 new members elected; still open to receive more; nom. fee 1s., subs. 3s. per annum.—A. W. Newton, Hon. Sec.

MIDLAND ROLLER C.C.

Annual meeting, headquarters, "Seven Stars," St. John Street, Wolverhampton, Jan. 27. Mr. Willows presiding over a good attendance. Officers elected: Mr. Willows, Pres.; Messrs. Bird and Harrison, Vice-pres.; Mr. Cadman, Hon. Treas.; J. W. Thomson, Hon. Sec.; Messrs. Brooks, Grainger, Harper, Humphries, Jacquemin, Twigg, Plant, Lawson, Thompson, Jones, and Robinson, Committee. Letter was read from the Leeds Roller Club, suggesting a Central Board of Control for the Roller Fancy, and the matter was decided to be held in abeyance pending the result of the B.R.C.C. decision. New members elected: J. Dimmock, A. Hovard, L. A. Hitchenman, A. W. Armstrong, R. Totney, J. Drakeley, H. Hall, J. Routledge, J. Jones, A. H. Squire. Roller fanciers wishing to join apply—J. W. Thomson, Hon. Sec., 9, Gorsebrook Road, Wolverhampton.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A.

Annual general meeting, Jan. 18; only moderately attended owing to many members being either with army or on furlough. We must give all credit to those who came on to the meeting straight from a hard day's work. Rev. J. W. Wragg, chair. Several alterations were made in the rules, and of these members will be notified. All members will regret the decision of Mr. Spencer, our worthy sec. (who has held that office since the formation of the society in 1909), that he is compelled to give up the duties. A hearty vote of thanks was given him for the valuable services rendered to the society. Our future sec., Mr. A. E. Hope, we feel sure will do his utmost to keep the society up to the highest standard it has attained. We were sorry he was unable to be present owing to sickness, but hope to be able to welcome him at the next meeting. Officers for 1916 elected: Pres., Rev. C. E. Gaul; Chair, Rev. J. W. Wragg; Treas., Mr. J. Spencer; Vice-Pres., Messrs. H. Robinson, W. Downing, A. E. Long, F. Lane, T. Peters, J. H. Parish, Wm. Robinson, J. Spencer, J. A. Vint, T. Warburton. Committee: Messrs. A. Blinston, A. H. Hill, J. Holland, W. Land, P. Moss, W. Robinson, F. Walshaw; Auditors, Messrs. A. E. Long, T. Lane, and J. H. Parish; Reporter, H. Boothman; Hon. Sec., Mr. A. E. Hope, 20, Park Grove, Levenshulme, Manchester.—H. Boothman.

Queries Answered

- (1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and enclosed with either the correct name or a pseudonym.
- (2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.
- (3)—Queries intended for different specialists must be written on separate sheets of paper.
- (4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.
- (5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.
- (6)—Queries received during any week, up to the first post on Saturday morning, will be answered in the issue bearing date of Saturday in the following week.
- (7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).
- (8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London).
- (9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 151, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

A FRAGILE YORKSHIRE (Springburn).—I fear the bird is in too advanced condition of physical wreckage to be of much use for anything further—either breeding or song. Still, you may try what the following treatment will do for it. Thoroughly examine the cage and its appurtenances to see if it is infested with red mites, and if so, take the necessary steps to eradicate them, as given in detail to "P.W.B." in our last issue. Then see that the bird is kept in a bright and healthful place, free from direct cold draughts, and do not hang it high up near the ceiling, near or over burning lights in the evenings, nor very near a window. Every second day for a fortnight give in addition to the staple seed diet half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of cherry and two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give just a pinch of the seed mixture, and a morsel of some kind of fruit or green salad twice a week. Every second day in the first week add to the drinking water six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and in the following week give instead four drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine and sweet spirit of nitre every second day. If bird is not considerably better at the end of the fortnight continue the above dietary and go on with the squills mixture every second day for two or three weeks, and report progress at the end of the first month.

CONFLICTING OPINIONS (Miss Lomas, Barry).—(1) You seem to be caught between quite a number of stools instead of the proverbial two, and as it would be quite impossible to go into all details on all points of breeding in these replies, I cannot do better than advise you to get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," post free for 7d. from our Manager, and if you also equipped yourself with a copy of the forthcoming "Cage Birds Annual," you would find all your questions very fully answered, and should have no trouble in meeting any little exceptional trouble that may crop up during the course of the season. Unless you had a very large aviary cage it would probably be courting disaster to keep a cock and two hens together for breeding in the same cage. The risk of the hens interfering with each other's nesting arrangements and thus spoiling the results of both is very great. Keeping a cock and hen together permanently during the season would be much more likely to succeed, and this is done in a very great number of cases. But there are hens which will hatch and rear their young much better by themselves than when the cock is left with them. There is no objection whatever to this plan so long as the hens attend to their duties satisfactorily in bringing up the young whilst the cock remains with them. If they do not, the best plan is to take the cock away when the hen begins to sit, and leave the hen to do the hatching and rearing herself. (2) A staple diet of two parts canary to one part summer rape is preferable to one of plain canary seed only for Rollers. (3) There are quite a number of substitutes for the usual egg food for rearing the young, most of which you would find in the little book advised above; space will not allow us to repeat them here. (4) Certainly young Roller cocks can be trained for contest singing under good singing trained Rollers, without the aid of organs.

SEX IN DOUBT (F. Gilce).—The external differences in the sex of Canaries are very slight, often subtle, and all of quite a comparative nature, so that it is by no means easy for the tyro to differentiate between them. It is only experience and close observation that gives the insight which enables one to name the sex of a given bird definitely, and even the most expert are not infallible. You will find all the chief distinctions given in the handbook on "Canary Breeding for Beginners" which has been sent you. At this season, when the birds are coming into fresh condition the shape of the vent is also something of a guide. If you catch the birds you will find the vent of the cock is more prominent and pointed than that of the hen, which is flatter and more in line with the abdomen. The song is the best guide, as although some hens sing a good deal, the song in their case is more in the nature of a sustained twitter compared with the vigorous and incisive efforts of the cock, and in the hen there is little, if any, of the inflation and throbbing of the throat which is such a feature of the song of the cock.

CRACKING SOUND (J. H. M.).—The symptoms, especially the restlessness at night, are very suggestive of red mite attacks, so you would be well advised to thoroughly examine the cage first of all to see if this is likely to be the cause, either wholly or in part. If this is not the cause, then the bird is probably suffering from a slight catarrhal cold, which may be due to coming from a cold room to one in which a fire is lit only in the evenings, and this would be especially the case if the bird was so placed as to feel the heat of the fire to any appreciable degree. See that it is not exposed to any direct draught, is not near or over burning lights, nor near windows, and keep it a good distance from the fireplace, so that it will not feel the variations of heat when the fire is lit to any extent. Then the following treatment should soon set matters right. In addition to the usual seed diet, give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water five drops each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together in the water. Continue this for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

WHAT BIRD? (Anxious).—(1) Your first question has given me something of a shock, for your description of the bird you bought from the bird dealer for a shilling answers to that of the Rustie Bunting, an exceedingly rare visitor to Great Britain. If you do not want it, no doubt someone who is making a collection of Buntings would be glad to have it from you at a fair price. (2) If you read the report of the Holborn Hall Show you will see that an example of the Linnet-Goldfinch cross won first prize in very hot competition; a really good specimen is a valuable exhibition bird. (3) The Chaffinch-Canary cross has never yet been put on the show bench. If you look up back numbers of CAGE BIRDS you will find several answers to this same query.

SEX OF MULES (Greenfinch Mule).—I have no doubt from your description that both your Mules are hens; cock birds of the cross should be singing by now. You are very unfortunate, as the hens are of scarcely any value; better luck next time.

BREEDING WITH LINNET (W. W. Handsworth).—You can breed with your Linnet this following season; it does not matter about the legs being dark, but when you put him with the Canary he should be in full song, with a dark beak. The best Canary for the purpose is a Norwiche hen, these throw the best Mules, best in shape and colour.

BREEDING LINNET MULES (A. Adams).—You can use your bird for Mule breeding without its interfering much with his song, because as soon as the Canary went to nest he would be taken right away out of sight and hearing, when she would hatch and rear the young ones herself. If you have a suitable hen let them fly together in a breeding cage occasionally; it need not be for long at a time, a few hours would do, just to let them get used to each other. Later on, about the middle or end of March, when the hen begins to call, flying about the cage, flapping her wings and carrying anything about in her beak, she will be ready to go to nest. You must then put in the cock if he is in full song, and give them a nest pan and plenty of nesting materials. When she has laid three eggs he can be removed, she will probably add to the number and commence to sit. Take notice of the date, and thirteen days after supply her with a little egg food; she will rear the young on this, a little hemp seed, and fresh green food.

FINCH NOT SINGING (Constant Reader).—Your Finch should be singing a little now if he is a cock bird. If you can manage to get a few young dandelion leaves they will assist him, and you could also soak a little seed and keep it damp until it commences to germinate, and then give him a little daily. Have you our Nutshell Booklet on the Goldfinch? It will help you in your treatment. I think you had better have sent me a sample of your Finch mixture, it may not be suitable, although so called.

PET BIRD (Mr. Bird).—You did not send your name and address; perhaps you will send it on a postcard. I think you will find a Siskin as good as any for your purpose, but I fear any small bird will get away if he has the opportunity, although sometimes they return, and cannot be driven away. It is seldom safe to give them the chance during the breeding season; they nearly always find a wild partner. Our Nutshell, "The Siskin, Redpoll and Twite," would help you.

LINNET ILL (E. M. H.).—Wild caught Finches when settled down to cage life eat rather heavily of the good things provided for them, consequently they occasionally require an aperient; this you should have given your bird directly he was queer. You are fortunate in getting him to eat the bread and milk; you had better continue with this, dusting over it a little powdered bismuth (you can buy sixpennyworth at the chemist). Give him maw seed at the bottom of his cage, and a spoonful of soaked seeds daily; he will take of these in time, and then get him on to hard seeds gradually. Do not worry if he will not eat freely of seeds, the soft food is quite as good for him just now. Give half a teaspoonful of tincture of rhubarb and tincture of gentian in two tablespoonfuls of water fresh daily in the drinking water for three days, then miss a couple of days and repeat. If you can find a young dandelion leaf free from frost, he could have some every other day.

HYBRID WITH DAMAGED WINGS (Joseph Webb).—Unfortunately you do not tell me in what way your bird has damaged its wings. If it has simply knocked them about, breaking or fraying the feathers, you can do nothing to them, but wait until the next moult, although anyone used to birds would be able to abstract the damaged feathers, when new ones would grow in their place. I would advise you not to attempt this yourself, as you may break the wing. Perhaps you are keeping him in a cage that is too small for him. If your bird has actually broken his wing your best plan is to keep him as quiet as possible, and leave him alone, when the fracture should unite of itself.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

PARROT WITH FITS (G. Smith).—I am sure this bird would be the better for a more varied seed mixture. In the circumstances give it a mixture of canary, white millet, oats, hemp and sunflower seeds in equal parts, the whole to be well mixed together, then add half a pint of shelled pea-nuts to each quart of the mixture, and again well mix; in all other respects the diet to be as in previous reply. Continue to use the honey and borax, and Dinneford's Magnesia as per previous instructions. Get some three grain powders of bromide of potassium from your chemist, dissolve one of these in a little syrup, and stir it into the drinking water (not more than one fluid ounce) daily for a week, and then cease giving the powders for a few days, but at the first sign of any attack renew same. The attacks will not cease all at once, but they should occur at less frequent intervals, and finally cease—you must persist in the bromide treatment on the lines given above. While the respective items of the dietary remain the same, the supply of fruit should be a very liberal one, and the more fruit you can induce it to eat the better for it; all the following may be offered: grapes, apple, banana, orange, and any English fruits in season it will take. I should be pleased to hear how it progresses in, say, about three weeks' time.

BUDGERIGARS IN SMALL AVIARY (Esperance).—Owing to lack of space reply was not printed, but a copy was sent you by post. If you do not get what you want from the dealers named, write to other advertisers in CAGE BIRDS. Re hawks, it is better to fasten these fairly steady with a little binding wire; all are wired very similarly. As regards time, let what are in remain there; do not add others till the end of next month. A pair of Cockatiels can be put in your aviary, but then I consider two pairs of Budgerigars only should be left in. You will require to hang up a small barrel for the Cockatiels. I think you'll be able to get in and out without difficulty by hanging a large dust cloth over the end of aviary and letting it be round you while you get in, or surely it should be possible to get some fairly intelligent schoolboy in two or three times a year to do what is required under your supervision; his smaller size would not scare the birds so much, and with greater freedom of movement in a small space than you would have, he would quickly get through what had to be done, consequently the period of disturbance would be less for the birds. In so small a place they could easily be caught by the aid of a small butterfly net, and a pair of garden gloves would protect the hands from their mandibles. They have, I expect, already moulted, but as a rule this is only gradual, and wind soon removes small feathers from an outdoor aviary. The Budgies should certainly breed with you this season.

FOOD FOR AMAZON PARROT (Young Beginner).—The food for an Amazon Parrot is: seed mixture, ripe fruit, biscuits, stale crusts and nuts; cuttlebone should be continually hanging in the cage, also a chunk of wood for it to exercise its mandibles upon. A pinch of Parrot grit should be sprinkled either over cage tray, or added to the daily supply of seed mixture. A good seed mixture consists of giant canary, white millet, hemp, sunflower, oats, dani, and maize, well mix; to each quart of this mixture add half a pint of shelled pea-nuts, again mix, and keep a constant supply in the cage. To help it through the moult keep the bird where it will get light, sun and air, also be fairly warm and out of draught. Spray it once a week with a weak tepid quassia solution; when the warm weather comes it can have a daily bath. Give the drinking water lukewarm, every fourth day put one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia into it, and on the other days lightly colour it (drinking water) with chemical food. If it has been used to boiled maize, continue to supply it, but as it soon turns sour it must be prepared fresh daily. Do not give tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

HOW MANY, ETC. (A. M. C.).—Yes, you could add another pair of small Foreigners, and I suggest Zebra Finches, as these are very likely breeders. You could also add odd cocks; Alario Finch, Grey Singing Finch, Napoleon Weavers, and, say, three pairs of small Waxbills, Gold-breasted, Grey and Orange-cheeked, without overcrowding if you plenty of twiggy branches round the room. Of course, you must not change the branches in the vicinity of nests; it is easy to keep these looking tidy by cutting off the soiled twigs, and as regards keeping up a supply, you can easily lay in a stock of, say, three hundred of pea sticks; most nursery men and florists will have these in stock very shortly. This quantity would carry you over twelvemonth for renewals. You can continue to treat the floor as you are doing, but you must disturb them as little as possible during the breeding season. A pair of pruning snips will enable you to cut away soiled twigs without any disturbance, you move about quietly.

POST-MORTEM.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for repli direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 2/6. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a post-mortem examination letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Mrs. James Smith.—Canary succumbed to catarrhal affection of the upper air passages, the result of a cold.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

W. Watson.—Thanks for sketches, which we regret are not quite suitable for publication. You did not send your address, or we would have returned them.

Brass Top Parrot Cage (H. Cottle).—No danger is likely to arise to your bird so long as the wires are kept dry to prevent the accumulation of verdigris. You may, if you choose, enamel them with any good ready made enamel, but this is rather a long job, as the wires would require several coats, each laid on as thinly as possible, and each allowed to set firmly before the next coat is applied.

To Darken Wire-netting (Best Wishes).—The recipe kindly given by P. Virgo in our correspondence columns this week will answer your purpose admirably, if you are possessed of a considerable amount of patience and a certain degree of skill. Nothing is more troublesome to paint than small-mesh wire-netting. (2) Our manager would send you "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages," for 1/8 post free. We cannot trace any order from the newsgroup you name.

Skylark Cage (W. Gaynes).—It is against our rule to recommend individual advertisers. Anyone of the cage makers advertising in our columns could supply you the cage illustrated in the Nutshell on the Skylark.

THE BRITISH BIRD MANUAL.

By H. NORMAN.

The Most Thorough and Practical Work on British Birds ever Produced. Published in two parts and complete bound in cloth. Part I. Hardbills. Deals in the fullest manner with Linnets, Goldfinches, Bullfinches, and all other varieties of Finches. Part II. Softbills. With Blackbirds, Thrushes, Jackdaws, Larks, and most of the more commonly kept species of insectivorous birds.

This work, lucidly written by a noted specialist, contains fullest directions for Hand-rearing, Keeping, and Exhibiting the most popular of our British Birds. Each bird is dealt with separately, its nesting habits, etc., are fully explained, and these, together with a description of its general characteristics, will enable the novice to easily identify the various species. Each part contains a coloured plate and numerous black and white illustrations by the author.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL

The author, that well-known expert and judge, gives much useful instruction on AVIARIES, CAGES, BREEDING, MOULTING, EXHIBITING, DISEASES & THEIR CURS, SEEDS, Etc., and devotes a separate chapter to each individual variety.
Get a copy now, it will help you this coming breeding season.
Price 1/2 post free, cloth bound, 2/2.

Wisely fed birds are healthy birds, and healthy birds do you service. Avoid all errors of diet in feeding them, therefore will help you to feed them properly. It is especially valuable at this season when wild foods are to be had in such abundance, merely for the gathering.

"Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants for Cage Birds,"

There are many sketches and illustrations of all the best known wild plants.

"BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATIELS." By C. P. ARTHUR. 6d. post free.

Is a splendid guide-book to perhaps the most interesting and profitable side of foreign bird-keeping. It tells you all you need know.

CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS.

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading Exhibitor, and a leading Expert and Judge. Edited by G. E. Weston and C. A. House.

Complete Bound in Cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist MR. H. NORMAN.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. The perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial, are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which breed light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates in this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a prize-winning Hybrid.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

NOT SINGING

AND IN THE SOFT MOULT. WANTED A TRIAL.

If you have any birds you are relying upon for the coming breeding season that are not singing, or have just gone into soft moult, we guarantee you a perfect cure. DITCHFIELD'S TONIC DROPS and DITCHFIELD'S FAMOUS REVIVO given on alternate days will bring any bird into breeding condition. For bronchitis, wheezing, and hoarseness, get DITCHFIELD'S SPECIAL LUNG TONIC, the grandest medicines ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. For constitutional weakness and debility and for birds that are run down, or in slack feather, get DITCHFIELD'S FAMOUS REVIVO. This medicine is absolutely unequalled for giving new life and vigour to the birds, and for producing that smart tight appearance of the plumage so much desired by all fanciers.

All the above remedies are sold in 1/2 and 2/- bottles; two 1/2 bottles for 1/11, three for 2/8, four for 3/6; two 2/- bottles for 3/6, three for 5/-, four for 6/3, and are sent away per return of post from—

FRANK DITCHFIELD, BIRD SPECIALIST, OLDHAM.

LARGEST STOCK IN THE NORTH

Patronised by all the leading fanciers in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. I have another large order of British for New York, and these sail on March 3rd. There is no doubt about it I am at the top for British. Read what others say. Mr. Lackey, 40, Hope-st., Wombwell.—Sir.—Received Blackbird safe; he is a gem; started singing already. Mr. Raffles, Emerald-st., Southport.—Received bird safe, and he is good value. Mr. Warburton, Arthur-st., Runcorn.—Birds arrived safe; very pleased with them. Mr. Fraser, 37, Arthur-st., Glasgow.—Birds arrived in splendid condition. M. Davidson, Greenvale-st., Ballymena.—Birds arrived safe and are doing well. Mr. Johnson, Sec., Derwent C.B.S.—Siskin arrived safe and will make a winner; will recommend you to everyone. (I hope, Mr. Johnson, that this bird will prove another Scottish National winner for you.) Mr. Dixon, George-st., Craghead.—Birds quite satisfactory. Mrs. Caley, Fairmont, Upper Hackney.—I am quite satisfied with Bullfinch. Mr. Outbrett, Ye Priory Restaurant, Bristol.—Very pleased with Goldfinches. I enclose P.O. for another, but, please, not so large as last two. Mr. Jefferson, North Parade, York.—Siskin is quite safe and very satisfactory. Mr. Unwin, Roslin, Llandudno.—Birds arrived safe; very pleased; Linnetts are doing well. Your secret mixture has made my young Linnet sing all day now. Mr. Bowes, 3, Tooley-st., Gainsborough.—Bird arrived safe and in splendid condition. Canadian Express Co.—Birds arrived in splendid condition. Mr. Spur, Abbot-st., Lincoln.—Bird arrived safe; thanks for your straight deal. I have thousands of testimonials. Where is the man I cannot please? Just send your cash to the Editor and your order to me. All my birds are on 7 days' approval for cash or deposit. I have the finest stock of cock Goldfinches ever seen; not smoky little rubbish, but real giants, with extra deep square-cut blaze, broad heads, richly tanned, truly gems, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; and a grand lot right for Members' Shows or muling, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6 each; all on full song. Monster cock Bullfinches, with double rich colour, win anywhere, 3/6, 5/6, 7/6; and one a real stunner, 10/6. Please note: I do not offer any British as Scandinavians. There is nothing like the bull-dog breed. I have not a single Siskin left, but 500 cocks and 150 hens will arrive any time now. I have sold already nearly 800, and not one single buff have I sent out. These are all specially picked for me and are all yellows; prices, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, 10/6 each. Giant Norwich type cock Linnetts, real gems, sure mulers and birds than can win on any bench, 2/6, 3/6 each. Monster yellow cock Greenfinches, the kind you want, 2/6, 3/6 each; and a grand lot, can win Members' Shows, 1/6, 1/6 each. Cock Chaffinch, a beauty, 2/6; cock Bramblingfinches, gems, 1/6, 1/6, 2/6 each. I hold the world's record for Mulers, and have a grand lot of first-class specimens, all nicely paired and ready for the season. Linnet and Canary, 5/6; cock Goldfinch and Canary, 7/6; cock Greenfinch and Canary, 5/6; cock Greenfinch and Chaffinch, 5/6; cock Goldfinch and Greenfinch, 6/6; cock Greenfinch and Goldfinch, 5/6; cock Linnet and Goldfinch, 5/6. Remember This, Please.—I invite you to come on any day but Sunday and inspect my stock, and make your own selection. If unable to come, I am prepared to send any number of birds to any address in the Kingdom on 10 days' approval at my sole risk. I guarantee absolute satisfaction to every customer, or cash returned in full. Send a P.C. for my Free Illustrated Catalogue.

JOE THOMAS,

Breeder, Exhibitor and Ambler Thorn, Halifax, Yorks.

OVER 35 YEARS AT SAME ADDRESS.

I HAVE a magnificent cock Skylark, almost as large as a Thrush, grand songster, fit to show and win, 2/6; also another cock Skylark, grand songster, much smaller, been in my possession since a nestling, practically hand-reared, 2/6, or 3/6 the two: approval willingly: Mrs. Harrington, Dalmeny Cottage, Dunstable.

SOFTBILLS: the smaller species; full information upon their proper feeding and management in captivity, is given by H. J. Fulljames in "Nutshell No. 25," which also deals with hand-rearing, and describes the collection of ants' eggs, 23d. post free, from: CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. (2d. from agents; see list on another page.)

THE Song Thrush and Blackbird.—Full directions how to keep these favourite songsters in the best possible condition; together with directions for hand-rearing the young and the selection of show birds, will be found in "Nutshell No. 4," 23d. post free from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 36," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 23d. from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

I HAVE JUST

purchased three more collections of grand birds from well-known Exhibitors of Plainheaded Norwich and Yorkshires. They comprise such exceptional stuff as is seldom put on the market. Certainly, were I a professional exhibitor I should not, nor could I afford to, sell some of them at any price but a prohibitive one. One of the purchases is from a well-known North Country Exhibitor, and includes his entire stock, also Show Cages, Hampers, Flight and Breeding Cages, and I have all for sale. That is all I have got to say. For the rest, state requirements, with stamped envelope, or send for list.

Read what others have to say. I prefer to give you their statements in preference to my own.

All February, 1916.

"Connahs Quay.—Received bird in best of condition; very pleased with it. I can't get any one to deal with like you.—Robert Jones."

"Treforest.—Received pair of birds safe, very pleased with them; cock was singing half-an-hour after taken out of cage. I was surprised at the quick execution of order.—Griff. Rees."

"Pembroke.—Buff Yorkshire hen received safe today, and gives every satisfaction. I failed to get as good a bird as this from district for £2. Again thanking you for good value and honest dealing.—W. G. Bateman."

A Novice's Experience.

"Woodstock.—The pair of Norwich I purchased from you last year proved most satisfactory. I got 20 eggs and had 19 birds—not so bad for a novice's first chance.—J. Hollister."

"Burton-on-Trent.—Birds arrived safely on Friday morning. I am delighted with them, and think they are a grand pair and well matched.—A. Cliff."

"From another part of the World."

"Tarentum, P.A., Jan. 24, 1916.—Received your shipment of birds, and they are as fine as they can be. I am delighted with them. Thank you so much for your kindness in the matter. Wishing you every success.—Yours faithfully, John Allen."

"Hanwell.—I just write to let you know how pleased I am with the Canary I had from you a few weeks ago. He sings from morning till night, sometimes at twelve o'clock at night, and we have to cover him up to get a little peace and quietness. I have had several people ask me where I got it from, and of course I have told them, and shall recommend you on any occasion.—R. Bedford."

"Anerley.—I thank you for your courteous letter. I am more than content to leave the matter in your hands. I shall always be glad to recommend you for your most straightforward and generous dealing with customers.—F. W. Foreman."

"Kewley, Cumb.—Bird and cage arrived quite safe and packed to perfection, and has given great satisfaction. I shall not fail to recommend you to others, besides patronising you myself when requiring anything in the bird line.—H. Towers."

A Scotsman's Opinion of Value.

"Dundee.—Birds arrived safe; also double breeding cage. Many thanks for your prompt despatch. Am thoroughly satisfied that I had the fullest value for cash.—Thos. Ferrie."

Send for my detailed 1916 List of ALL VARIETIES.

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutshell No. 14," from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2d. From agents (see list frequently published).

AVADAVATS! Avadavats are very charming little birds, they need care. The "Nutshell" booklet, "Avadavats," contains full information on the management of these birds. You cannot do better than have a copy by you, and we shall be pleased to forward same upon receipt of 2d. Write, The Publisher, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page F.Z.S. Get it at once. 2d. post free from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

Club Reports.

S.W. LONDON C.B.S.

Meeting, Feb. 10, Plough Hotel, two new members were enrolled; owing to so many being employed on Government work the attendance was small. Mr. Burgess, one of our members, wrote informing us he is at the front doing his bit, and has been slightly wounded. All members will wish him good luck and a safe return. His wife sends him CAGE BIRDS, and he enjoys it. Chairman Mr. Goymer opened a discussion whether showing improves the breed of Canaries, but there was not time to have varied opinion; this therefore will be renewed at another meeting. The cash balance in hand on Dec. 31 was £5 8/-. The committee make a special appeal to all fanciers in the district that are not being called up for war; we are open to receive champion members in Norwich, Yorks., Borders, Crests, and British. Wanted, a good real live hon. sec. and under sec.—W. Lilley.

NORTHERN LIZARD CLUB.

Meeting, Feb. 5, Mr. Proctors, 18, Olive-street. Sec. presented annual report and balance-sheet, which showed the club to be on a sound financial basis. New office-bearers elected: Pres., Mr. L. B. Smith; vice-pres., Messrs. J. Farrer, P. Hunter, W. F. Swan, T. C. Crawshaw; committee, Hyslop, Reid, Riseborough, Davidson, Proctor, Smith, Peacock, Walker, Johnstone. Decided to get new rule cards, Mr. Peacock offering to defray part of the cost. The most important new rule passed was: "That this club be open to the United Kingdom." So we will be glad to see intending members at any time. Given normal times again the prospects of the club are very good. As the members are very enthusiastic and have been blessed with a good breeding season, the club should progress; we give a cordial invitation to novices who are starting in the fancy to join us. Annual subs. 2s. 6d., no entrance fee. All information from G. C. Davidson, Sec., 6, Eden Vale, Sunderland.

NORTHERN C.C. COMPETITION.

The Northern Crest Club show was held in conjunction with the Blaydon-on-Tyne C.B.S., Nov. 12 and 13, with a capital entry which proved a success, there being some of the best Crests and Crest-breds in the country on view. There were three silver challenge cups and several medals for competition. Cup and gold medal best old bird was won by Geo. Dobson; three silver medals were given to old birds other than cup winner; best C.B. cock, Robt. Armstrong; Jim Taylor, silver medal best old Crested hen; Robt. Armstrong, silver medal, best old C.B. hen; cup and gold medal for best Crest, bred 1915, Jim Taylor; silver medals, next best Crests, R. S. Bewick, Thomas Bewick, A. Lawson; cup and gold medal for best C.B. bred 1915, R. S. Bewick, which he won outright; silver medal for next three birds, J. Riseborough, Robt. Armstrong, A. Lawson; silver medals for best yellow Crest or C.B., Geo. Simpson, Geo. Dobson; silver medal best novice Crest, Jas. Morgan; novice C.B., Geo. Simpson. A meeting will be held at Shield and Sons' Cafe, Bigg Market, Newcastle, Feb. 23, at 7.30. I have had to change our meeting room on account of the closing time; the meeting will have to close at 10. Business: Balance sheet; election of officers, etc. I would be very glad to hear from any fancier who would like to join the N.C.C. There is room for novices.—Geo. Dobson, Hon. Sec., 103, James-st., Blaydon-on-Tyne.

BURNHOPE C.B.S.

Meeting, Feb. 13, Mr. C. Mitchell in chair, and a very poor attendance. Decided to keep last year's date, Dec. 16, for Annual Show. Secretaries please note, and avoid clashing. Next meeting, nomination of judges, Young Stock Show, etc., so let's have a better turn up.—J. W. Robson, Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Meeting, Feb. 10, Mr. Havenhand in chair, and Table Show of British Birds. Judging and other business were speedily got through. N.F. Show date fixed for as near last year's date as possible. This is July 1. Annual Show date fixed for Nov. 15. Two new members elected. Result of Table Show, Mr. Milne judged: Linnet, etc.: 1, Bearder; 2, Darlow; 3, Kay; 4, Stokes; vhc, hc, Clough, A.O. Hardbill: 1, 2, 3, Bearder; 4, Stokes; vhc, Buckley. Softbill: 1, 2, 3, Darlow. A prominent Sheffield fancier was warmly thanked for an offer of a substantial addition to the prize money for British birds at our N.F. Show.—E. Johnson, Sec.

BOOTLE.

Annual general meeting, Feb. 1, Mr. T. Evans in chair, and a good attendance. Three new members were elected. Balance sheet for 1915 was considered satisfactory and passed. Officers elected for 1916: Pres., Mr. H. Berry; Vice-Pres., Mr. T. Plunkett; chair, Mr. T. Evans; vice, Mr. T. Critchley; treas., Mr. T. Plunkett; sec., Mr. A. E. Huyton; asst. sec., Mr. S. Worrall; committee, Messrs. R. Algie, J. Knight, J. F. Brown, T. Rowlands, T. Bracken, A. E. Powell, W. Huston, M. Allen, and J. W. Handley; auditors Messrs. Worrall and Critchley. Decided to hold two N.F. shows June 17 and July 22. A cup has been given for novices for most points throughout the year. Welcome is extended to any fancier wishing to join the Society. Subs. 3s. per annum.—A. E. Huyton.

NORTHERN BORDER F.C.C.

Meeting, Feb. 2, Pillar's Cafe, Pink Lane, Newcastle. Mr. W. Smith presiding. Mr. Couchman was elected a member. A lengthy discussion took place as to whether the point specials won over the late patronage show should take the form of medals or spoons. It was decided to leave it in the hands of secretary to ascertain the wishes of the winners. Mr. M. C. Potts generously offered to make up the difference in the price, and also offered a special to the 2nd most points over the patronage shows (Champion section). Nomination received for officers for 1916 and 17: Pres., Mr. M. C. Potts; vice, Messrs. Johnstone, Greenwell; chair, Messrs. A. Affleck, A. Montgomery, W. Smith, J. Johnston; vice, Messrs. T. Smith, W. Affleck; sec., Mr. C. Farrer.—C. Farrer, Hon. Sec.

HALIFAX O.S.

Annual social evening and whist drive, Feb. 12, West Ward Liberal Club. An excellent programme was provided by the following artistes, and was well received. Songs by Miss Bailey, Miss Thomas, and Mr. Shaw. Recitations, Miss G. Helliwell; selections on the banjo, Mr. A. Shaw. Mr. H. Clegg presented the prizes to the winners in whist drive. Ladies: 1, Miss L. Holmes, 110; 2, Mrs. W. Berry, 100; consolation, Mrs. Pearson, 77. Gent's: 1, Mr. A. Oram, 110; 2, Mr. W. Sprak, 104; consolation, 75; M.C., Mr. Lord. Messrs. Haigh and Gough provided the music for dancing, and all enjoyed a pleasant evening. The best thanks of the committee were given to the artistes, and all those who had helped to make the gathering a success. 122 members and friends were present.—J. J. Dunn, Sec.

EDMONTON F.A.

Annual general meeting, Charity School, Church Street, Jan. 27. President, Mr. S. H. Platten, presided over upwards of 60 members. Sec's report and balance sheet showed the Association to be in a very satisfactory position, with 100 fully paid-up members, and a balance in hand of nearly £3. Mrs. Platten presented to winners present cups, etc., won at the annual show. (The Association has 25 cups, etc.). Officers elected: Pres., Mr. S. H. Platten; Chair, C. Sorrell; Vice-chair, G. E. Messer; Hon. Treas., J. S. Jackson; Hon. Sec., S. N. Berriman, jun.; Hon. Asst. Sec., J. W. Tilley; Committee, Messrs. Atkinson, Barker, Berriman, senr., Blackstone, Calman, Cawthorne, Christmae, Creasey, de Fraime, Dorney, Evangelisti, Hannaford, Harrington, Hudson, Jackson, Jordan, Lawrance, Mardell, Peters, Rasmus, Reeves, Suker, Trevallion, and Worthington; Auditors, Messrs. Harding and Lawley. The President informed the meeting that Mr. H. J. Suker, one of the committeemen, had been discharged from the Army and was in a very precarious condition, both as regards health and financially, and he was sure the members would desire to express practical sympathy with Mr. Suker. Notwithstanding the short notice, £1 18s. was raised. At the end of the agenda the President stated it gave him pleasure on behalf of the members to present Mr. W. H. Jackson with a handsome case of plate as a token of their appreciation of his services to Hon. Sec. during the past three years. He remembered the first appointment of Mr. Jackson to the post, and had pleasure to note how exceedingly well the business of the Association had been transacted. The Chairman and Vice-chairman both spoke in support, and Mr. Jackson suitably responded. Votes of thanks to retiring officers terminated a highly successful meeting.

RADCLIFFE C.B.S.

Roller singing contest, headquarters, Wareing's Dining Rooms, Feb. 1, 14 birds were staged—a very good entry for a first venture, and all the birds belonged to members. Mr. Geo. Wareing, Tooting, judged, and gave every satisfaction. Winners: 1, Hickton and Ollier; 2, J. Britton.—Geo. Lord, Sec.

COWEN E.A.H. C.B.S.

General meeting, Carson's Hall, Feb. 12. Officers elected: Pres., J. Beattie; Vice-Pres., S. Menzies; Sec., A. Robertson; Asst. Sec. and Treas., D. Aitken; Auditors, Messrs. J. Simpson and D. Jeffrie; delegates for Fife League, J. Beattie, A. Robertson, D. Aitken. We handed over £2 10/- to the Soldiers' Fund. Agreed to have a Pair Show, Feb. 26, in the Roth Arms Inn, at 4.30.—A. Robertson, Sec.

CITY AND COUNTY OF PERTH.

Meeting, Laidlaw's Rooms, Leonard-st., Feb. 7. Mr. R. Crawford chair. Treas., Mr. D. Carstairs, gave a report of the Pairs Show, which had the approval of those present. Decided that next meeting be held first Monday of April instead of March. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the Chair.—J. L. Smith, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting Feb. 2, Mr. Jones chair. Dinner fixed for March 22, at the Arcade, Ecclesall-road, at 7.30; tickets, 2s. 3d. The menu offered is excellent, and the musical arrangements are in good hands, and it is expected the event will be a record for Sheffield. Fanciers and friends are cordially invited, and should let sec. know at next meeting if tickets required. The judging competition by 13 competitors caused some enthusiasm; 16 pairs of Norwich were staged. Mr. Cowley was final judge. Winners: 1, Curley; 2, Hartley; equal 3, Drabble, Jones and Sparkes. The birds receiving most number of points in the competition deciding the table show, 1, 2, 3, J. and L. Woolhouse; 4, Gears; vhc, c, Hemming; hc, Gifford. Mr. Hemming gave the reasons of his choice, and Mr. Cowley defended his. Messrs. Travis and Johnson elected members. Next meeting, egg-food competition; fixed prize-money.—E. Sisson, Asst. Sec.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

Annual supper and prize distribution, Jan. 13. After the business a substantial supper was prepared for a good number present, and was thoroughly appreciated, after which Mr. Suddards (president) presented the prizes to the winners of the various competitions as follows:—A. Farrar cup competition, winner, Mr. J. Taylor, 105 points; J. Farrar cup competition, Mr. C. E. Walker, 171. Members' special, champ. section: C. E. Walker, 93 pts.; J. Taylor, 96; W. Laycock, 70; S. Midgley, 67; J. Farrar, 64; W. Stables, 60; J. Northrop, 43. Novice: J. Wroe, 93; W. T. Wheelwright, 91; J. Hargreaves, 72; J. Spencer, 57; H. S. Naylor, jun., 28; G. S. Taylor, 21; J. Verity, 14. Prizes were to the value of £1, 15s., 12s. 6d., 10s., 7s. 6d., 5s., 2s. 6d. In each section. The rest of the evening was spent in recitals and songs, Mr. J. Taylor and Mr. Bousfield giving of their best, and their efforts were highly appreciated. Thanks were accorded to the president, committee, and artistes for so ably entertaining.—J. Spencer, Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

The new headquarters, Rotherham House Hotel, appeared to act as a magnet with the members on the occasion of the monthly meeting in February. They turned up in record numbers, which seems a good omen for the success of the S.O.S. under a new roof. The chief attraction of the evening was a table show of Yorks. and Nor., Novice and Champion, Crests and C.B., Amat. Foreign, and Amat. Brit. Between 70 and 80 birds were staged, a great entry for a table show. The Chairman announced that both the Norwich and Crested cups had been won outright, and that our new host had promised to replace the Norwich cup, and a member who did not wish his name made public would replace the Crest cup. These two gifts were, of course, accepted with thanks. Mr. Cliff, Dewsbury, judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction. The next meeting should act as a great draw, and we should again have a crowded house. Mr. H. J. Chittenden will lecture on the pairing and breeding of the Yorkshire Canary, and as this is just before birds will be paired up, no doubt novice and champion alike will derive benefit.

Table show awards:—Champ. Yorks.: 1, 3, vhc and c, Spencer; 2 and hc, Ridal. Nor.: 1, 3 and c, Giffard; 2, Hartley; vhc and hc, Bagnall. Nov. Yorks.: 1, 2 and 3, Humphreys; vhc, Forrester; hc and c, Cook. Nor.: 1, 2, 3 and vhc, White; hc and c, Keene. Crest or C.B.: 1, Moore; 2, Richardson; 3 and hc, Memmott; vhc, Bagnall; c, Hodgson. Amat. Brit.: 1, Humphreys; 2 and vhc, Lindley; 3, Forrester; hc, Keene; c, Blackwell.—J. A. T. Woodall.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.A.

Meeting Feb. 1, headquarters, Mr. W. G. Fellows in chair. Decided to increase entry fee at members' shows to 1s., except table shows. Decided to hold pair table show Mar. 8, Mr. Hayson to be asked to judge seven classes, birds staged 6.30. Judging competition in connection, prize kindly offered by Chairman. Special best pair, Mr. G. Gamble, who once more kindly travelled from Winchester to entertain and instruct the Society, gave a washing exhibition. His tools consisted of a soft badger shaving brush, tooth brush, some old linen sheeting, piece of flannel, cake of soap, and three basins of water, cool enough to be comfortably borne by the hand and hot enough to prevent the bird being chilled. Mr. Gamble first sprinkled a little borax in each basin to soften the water, then made a good lather in first basin, leaving the others without soap. The soap he prefers is white urd. He explained that hand should be dry in catching bird, or feathers might stick and pull out. Seizing bird in right hand, turning the cage from light, to prevent fluttering, he deftly transferred it to his left hand, and washed with shaving brush well soaped, stroking always downwards with the feathers, well brushing out tail and wings. Neck, he said, required particular attention, and the face was gently cleaned with toothbrush. The bird was then well rinsed in second basin with help of flannel, and last traces of soap removed in basin No. 3. Superfluous moisture being gently removed with piece of clean linen, the bird was wrapped up in piece of old sheeting (Mr. Gamble explaining that any clean, soft material would do), the head being left partly out, and placed before the fire to dry; when the bird began to recover from its ordeal it was placed in cage on clean rag to finish drying off, and in a surprisingly short time was preening its feathers, looking as well as ever and very considerably cleaner. Mr. Gamble washed half-a-dozen birds in very short time, his confident, deft handling being much admired. A hearty vote of thanks to lecturer closed an instructive and well-attended meeting.—G. J. Slade, Asst. Sec.

Starlings in London City.

This winter a most remarkable phenomenon, says Mr. Francis Stopford, in the London "Daily Express," has been the roosting of Starlings in the trees of the Temple. Night after night they have gathered in their hundreds of thousands, not only huddling together on the boughs, but massing, almost like swarming bees, round the chimney stacks.
They have invaded courts of the Temple where never a bird has roosted before.

OUR PAINTING COMPETITION.

We have rarely had so difficult a task in apportioning a prize as that involved in judging the best painting of the front page of our Christmas number. The all-round merit of the paintings sent in is of such a high degree that when we had made a final selection of half a dozen, and in doing so had thrown out score upon score of brilliant attempts, we were faced with a problem which seemed to defy solution, and when we had reduced these to two, selection could absolutely go no farther, so we have decided to divide the guinea prize between Dora Sulman, 18, Southwood Lane, Highgate, who sent in a charming water colour picture, and
F. Clarke, 5, Melbourne Terrace, Topcliffe Road, Thirsk, whose painting was done in oils.

The others of the top half dozen were the pictures sent in by J. Jones, Ferryhill; Dorcen M. Dillon, Catford; Miss M. Rodel, King's Langley; and J. Palmer, Edinburgh.
Efforts which were very little short of the best in artistic merit came from G. A. Laurence, a very nice painting in oils; Alice M.
Cook, water colours; and Aubrey Neave, crayons; while of the others special mention must be made of the pictures sent in by T.
Norton, Gertrude M. White, Bert Outram,

One effort came from the fighting line.
The sender, Private Hodgson, of the 5th Borders, says in a note accompanying the picture, which has evidently been done under difficulties, for it is torn, mud-marked, and grease-spotted: "Receiving from home a copy of CAGE BIRDS while up in the trenches, and to pass the weary hours away, under shot and shell, I asked first one and then another (presumably for the coloured pencils with which the work appears to have been done.
—Ed.) and at last got it partly done. What little I have done at the picture is the best I could do in the wet trenches, waist deep in water. Any odd CAGE BIRDS numbers would be very acceptable." (We need scarcely say we have sent a parcel of CAGE BIRDS to our soldier reader.—Editor.)

Robins in a Cow's Tail.

Mr. Oliver Pike, the well-known naturalist, who has delighted thousands by his delightful illustrated lectures on bird life, told an audience in Darlington on Jan. 12 that the most curious nesting place he had seen was in the end of a cow's tail—but the tail was not on the cow. It was hanging in a butcher's slaughter-house, and a pair of Robins had built a most wonderful nest in the hair with grasses, in which they successfully reared five young Robins.

The Holborn Hall Show.

Mr. Silver informs us that only two of his five Cardinals, referred to by our reporter as colour-fed, have ever tasted colour food.

We hear that directly after the show Mr.
Frostick's Blackbird, which obtained a "commended," was sold for a higher price than quoted in the catalogue.

We regret that the awards in the class for Tits, etc., were omitted from our report.
They were: 1, diploma, best British bird, vbc, Frostick, the winner the Long-tailed Tit mentioned elsewhere; 2, Mrs. Huggins, pair of Bearded Redlings; 3, Miss A. B.
Smyth, pair of Nuthatches; and 4, Maxwell, Bearded Redlings.

The following classes, included under the heading "Mr. Watts's classes," were judged by Mr. C. Cooper: Yellow Budgeri-gers, Weavers, Parrot Finches, "x-bills, Cardinals, A.O.S. Seed-eaters, Doves, and Foreign Hybrids.

Among those who rendered yeoman service at the show, for which we omitted to give credit in our report, were Messrs. Parker, Robinson, Prettre, and West.

HOW ADVERTISING PAYS.

"CAGE BIRDS is the best paper I have ever advertised in. I had 27 replies to my advertisement in the issue of January 8th, and could not answer them all."—H. R. CONRON (Douglas, Co. Cork).

"From my advt. of December 25th I have sold out everything. A 2s. 6d. advt. has brought me in £5 16s. 6d.; this speaks very well for CAGE BIRDS, and I wish it every success."—
H. KAY (Blackpool).

"Please thank all those who replied to my advertisement under the heading of Yorkshires;
it is impossible to answer them all."—H. A.
OLIVE (Sittingbourne).

"Please thank the numerous applicants for my Bullfinches, advertised in CAGE BIRDS last week. They are too many for me. The birds were sold on Saturday, and still the Postal Orders and offers come."—C. ROWSELL (Berwick-on-Tweed).

"Don't fail to stop my advertisement in Roller Column of CAGE BIRDS, and if any deposit reaches you please send it back, as I have sold out of cocks, and have only a few hens left."—H. COX (W. Bromwich).

"Please do not insert my advert. again.
What with telegrams, postcards, letters containing cheques, and offers, I have got a day's work answering them and returning cheques.
Needless to say, I have sold the birds."—W.
BAYLISS (Stratford).

"I have had so many enquiries in reply to my advert that I could not answer them all except through CAGE BIRDS. The bird was sold by Saturday morning at 11.30. I have returned all cheques."—S. GREENWOOD (Silsden).

HEARD AT HOLBORN HALL SHOW.

The country members were well to the fore in their support. Of the 116 exhibitors 53 were provincial members.

Mr. Allen Silver, whose untiring efforts tended so greatly to the success of the show, himself sent 54 exhibits; these took six hours in the staging and packing.

Sales were good, especially in foreign birds.
£10 was given for one of the mules.

The Duchess of Wellington visited the show, and bought Mr. Hawkins' Rosellas at catalogue price.

Among other notable visitors were the Hon. Mrs. Bourke, the Hon. Mrs. McLaren Morrison, Mrs. Croker (Leominster), Mrs. Dudley Hill (Marlow), Mrs. Askham (Torquay), the Rev. and Mrs. Raynor (Maldon), Mr. and Mrs. Montagu-Scott, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gros-smith (Bickley), Mr. and Mrs. Mason (Broad-stairs), Dr. Ansler (Eton), Dr. Channings Pearce (Ramsgate), Captain Reeve, Mrs. and Miss Reeve, Lieut. Morris, Mr. Teschemaker (Teignmouth), etc.

Mr. Frostick, who was responsible for the clerical work in the British and Hybrid sections had a field day. He won, amongst other things, diploma for the best British bird, and specials for best Amazon, best Parrot, and best Insectivorous Foreign.

Mr. Silver captured Ramsden's special with his Wagler's Hangnest, also the special for best Cockatids. Another of Mr. Ramsden's specials went to Mr. Crone's Goldfinch mule.

Mr. Crone took also the diploma for best hybrid with his Redpoll-Bullfinch, while the Rosslyn Manner special for the rarest British hybrid went to Dr. Wilson, for his Greenfinch-Chaffinch, and the Manner special for rarest Foreign hybrid was won by Mr. Wade's Magpie Mannikin-Bengalese.

Some of the experts would have given this latter special to Mr. Shore-Bailey's California-Squamata Quails.

Among other special winners were:
Parker Robinson medals; champion section,
M'Quiston, novice, Richards; Lott medal,
Stephens; best Waxbill, Maxwell; best Foreign Finch, Row; best nectar feeding,
Hon. Mrs. Bourke; L.C.B.A. Crest bowl,
A. J. Smith; L.C.B.A. unfledged Norwich bowl, W. H. Howe; Boxall cup, Johnston; Crisp cup, Knight.

The hall was entirely cleared by 10 p.m. on the closing day, and Mr. Trower, whose stall of specialties was one of the attractions of the show, kindly provided an express van to deal with the long-distance special despatches, which left the hall soon after seven in time for early night mails.

A curiosity in judging for the specials caused some comment. Mr. Frostick's Long-tailed Tit was awarded the special for the best British bird in the show, while the same judge, Mr. Dewhurst, awarded the special for the best small insectivorous British bird to Mr. Frostick's Dartford Warbler! Surely a Long-tailed Tit is a small insectivorous British bird, and if it was entitled to the special for the best British in the show it is difficult to see why it was not also best in its own section.

Miss Barlow Massick's Mynah (described as a Trinidad Thrush) was originally entered in the Mynah class, and was transferred to the A.O.S. class because of its description.

COLOUR IN THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD

By T. JOHNSON (Southport.)

Mr. Johnson, in this instructive article, gives the views of some of the top rank of Norwich Canary breeders on the vexed question of introducing the Lizard to improve colour and on the best methods of using Green blood for the same purpose.

MR. ALLSOPP, in his article on the improvement of colour, has referred to the birds of the Norwich Fanciers of the north as possessing a colour that he considers extraordinary, and, being in Manchester for the week-end, I visited a few of the more prominent breeders of Norwich in Cottonopolis with the intention of getting their views on the question of using the Lizard to improve colour.

Whenever Mr. Allsopp opens his mouth he generally says something, by which I mean he generally sets fanciers thinking. Incidentally, he sometimes raises a hornet's nest about his ears, because he raises some point which is controversial. Like most writers who think, his writings invite criticism; but why the criticism should have so much sodium chloride mixed with it, or why Mr. Allsopp should retort as if he bore an implacable resentment towards his critics, is beyond my comprehension. Who wants to know what Mr. Cole said to "Sunny Jim" three years ago, or what Mr. A. wrote in his article of twelve months ago? "To-night's the night," not yesterday.

However, if I go on like this, I shall leave myself open to a retort that this savours too much of Satan rebuking sin, so I will proceed with these notes and give Mr. Allsopp and readers of CAGE BIRDS the benefit of what the Manchester fanciers think of the Lizard cross.

They are great producers of Norwich, but they are also very modest. Nothing will induce them to set their hand to a pen to tackle Mr. Allsopp's Lizard conjectures—for conjectures they surely are. So I thought I would beard the lions in their dens, as it were, and pump them dry on this subject.

The first gentleman I questioned was Mr. A. G. Smith, the breeder of the wonderful variegated yellow hen, perhaps the best yellow hen ever benched. Mr. Smith is one of those fanciers with a retiring disposition. His personality is remarkable for its absence of swank; and particularly is this noticeable when one knows him to be possessed of a team of birds right in the front rank. It was really but a matter of form asking Mr. Smith how he gets colour in his birds, for they are teeming with green blood; but I put the question as a matter of course and asked him which sort of green he prefers.

He likes the green that is almost black, and likes using it from the hen side, preferably a variegated hen. Asked his reasons for using it on the hen side, he said he thought he got a larger percentage of yellow hens and fewer buffs. I also asked him what he thought of the Lizard cross. He said he shouldn't think of using the Lizard, because what he gained in colour—which is debatable—he lost in other properties.

Mr. Green, the secretary of the Manchester and N.C.O.S., was my next auditor. He is the producer of the wonderful clear buff hen that was the sensation of the Liverpool and Manchester show, and when asked how he gets colour, he was emphatically of the opinion that green blood was the best agent. He believes in using it on the cock side, because it infuses better, the cock being the stronger parent. He also prefers the dark green to the Liverpool green, and was of the opinion that the Lizard cross was of no use for present-day competition.

I next questioned Mr. J. Raynes. Every Norwich fancier knows that Mr. Raynes has been connected with the Norwich Canary for a great number of years, and any information he can be prevailed upon to give must be worth while. He believes also in green blood, and uses it from the hen side, because one is apt to get too much variegation if used from the cock side; in fact, he added that there are at the present time too many variegated birds. When I referred him to Mr. Allsopp's article and asked him his opinion, he smiled and said: "Are you sure Mr. Allsopp isn't pulling our legs?"

Mr. W. N. Turner is a big breeder. He breeds from a big stud, and has every opportunity of noticing these little points, and his information to me was very complete. To get colour, he says the best way is to pair two ticked yellows, birds that are ticked right down to the quill, by which he means not mere surface ticks. He said that possibly one would get a self green from this pairing, and this was sure to be a fountain of colour. He certainly has a great many marked birds in his room, so it is evident he practises what he preaches.

Mr. Chilton was the next fancier I troubled. He also has a large stock, and has lately emerged from his novitiate. He has a fine collection of Norwich, but he admits that colour is not his strong point, and is intending improving that point in the near future. When asked if he were going to use the Lizard cross, he also smiled, and said that anyone who knew anything of present-day requirements would hesitate to use the Lizard.

I next journeyed to Mr. Sam Cook's. That name needs no introduction, for it is known from Land's End to John O'Groat's. His birds have every property that a Norwich should have, and not the least is colour. They are a blaze of colour, and one of them, his unfledged buff, that has done so well this year is bred from two buffs, and I believe it was shown at the nest feather show as a yellow, so one can imagine what a colour it is.

Mr. Cook breeds from double buff or double yellow, just as the pairing suits him in other directions, but he gave me to understand that on no account would he pair two buffs that were pale in colour. His birds also are plentifully besprinkled with green blood. When asked if he thought that the Lizard would improve colour, he said that perhaps it would, but other points would degenerate to such an extent that it would be years before they could be got back to show perfection again.

To sum up, it would seem that the best colouring agent is the green, and the best green is the black green. Double yellowing seems to be a popular method of improving colour, but I would point out that one must be careful what sort of birds one pairs up. One must have stout birds, short bodied, with short thick necks, because of the tendency when breeding from two yellows for the young to run thin in neck.

Difference of opinion exists as to the side on which to use the green blood, but no doubt good results will accrue either way. Anyhow, it is manifest from the foregoing that green blood, and not the Lizard cross, is the best colouring agent, unless one thinks like the Yorkshire breeder, who is a bit of a wag, and when asked which he thought the best colouring agent, replied: "Ramsden's: R A M S D E N ' S."

On Sending Birds by Rail.

SIR,—A reader in CAGE BIRDS says he received three Norwich Canaries from Scotland in a box about 2in. deep, and no sign of food in. Well, that is cruelty, and the sender was liable to a fine of a sovereign for each bird. Some time ago a man sent six small birds in a shallow box, and he was fined £6. All travelling boxes should be high enough for the birds to stand up. I fasten a strip of wood across for them to perch on, for slipping about on a smooth floor frightens them. I put a handful of seed in, and a piece of apple. Roller cocks should be sent in a small wire cage inside a wooden box, so that on arrival at their destination they need not be immediately transferred to another cage, for as a rule, after having a drink of water they soon commence to sing, and the purchaser knows what he is getting for his money. Roller hens are bought on faith; if they have tight feathers, and bright eyes, you just turn them into the flight,

ATHERTON.

SIR,—I should like to add a few words to Mr. Cockerill's letter re railway companies' carrying of birds. On Dec. 8 last I sent a case of birds from Leicester to Birmingham per Midland Railway, properly packed and labelled in time for the 7.32 p.m. train reaching Birmingham at 8.50. They were received at their destination at 9 the next evening, four arrived dead and the remainder in a very weak state. I notified the railway company immediately, making a claim, but had to write twice before I could get an answer. Altogether I have written four times, with no result. I am now writing to Headquarters to see if I can do any better there. I quite agree that something should be done to bring their responsibility home to them. The only point is—what?

J. HARDBATTLE.

An Old Hand Says Railway Companies Always Pay Up.

SIR,—Our friend Mr. Cockerill must have had awfully bad luck, or he must have sent his birds off awfully late. I have exhibited all varieties of birds during the last 25 years, few have exhibited more. I have sent as far North as Dundee, and all round the South, and only five times have my birds been too late; three of these five are since the war started. I have always sent in a claim for neglect, and have always been paid my claim without any trouble. Only last week I got 12s. 6d. from the Great Central Railway for my birds being delayed going to Warrington show. I think most exhibitors are to blame for not sending in their claim. I have found out by experience that it is not wise to insure the birds as companies will not insure the time of delivery, only that they are living when delivered, as everyone who handles the package has to sign for them, which very often may miss a connection.

The Canary's Song.

SIR,—In a book by Mr. Cornish it is stated that the Canary has learnt and improved upon a song not its own, and teaches it to its young. Will some one explain this? Whose song does the Canary sing?

Further, do young Canaries only copy the older birds' song? If they are kept quite away from all other birds, do they sing at all, and if so what is their song then like?

These are questions of some considerable interest, and have a bearing on important scientific subjects, so I hope that anyone who can answer them will do so.

A Successful Operation on an Abnormal Parrot.

SIR,—I am writing to express the gratitude of the owner of an African grey Parrot. A few weeks ago it was noticed that it was suffering from a protruding intestine, and my friend, knowing that I was a breeder of Roller Canaries, came to ask my advice as to the best method of treatment. I at once decided that the best course was to put the case before your specialist on Foreign birds, through your queries columns, which I accordingly did, and the advice duly appeared. The treatment recommended by Mr. Page was to take the bird to a veterinary surgeon, as it was quite likely that a stitch or two would be necessary to make it right. A visit from the vet. soon proved that Mr. Page's advice was correct, and so the bird was taken to the vet.'s house for the operation.

Now the most wonderful part about it is the Parrot refused to "go to sleep"; he evidently wanted to see what was going on. He was tried with an ordinary dose of chloroform in the vet.'s ordinary way for such a bird, but with no result. He was then placed in a small cage, covered with a cloth, and given chloroform that would have put half a dozen large dogs to sleep for one hour at least, but again it did not take effect. He was next given a stronger dose, one that puts the strongest horse to sleep for ten minutes, and he was given that under a glass case, but still no result.

Now this rather surprised the surgeon, as he has performed many operations on birds, but this one is the first that he has come across or even heard of, that would not be chloroformed. He then decided to work without its aid, so they gave the Parrot a walking stick to clutch with its feet, whilst its owner held its head, then he very deftly and quickly inserted a couple of stitches. As soon as it was done and the bird's head released, he said, "What have you done that for?" "Polly's head is bad now." I am very pleased to say that the operation has proved a success, as the bird is now quite well again, seemingly very thankful himself for the operation, and I thank you for the information gained through your valuable paper, on behalf of the owner, for the bird, besides being an exceptionally clever talker, is a great pet. THOS. THWAITES.

[The above seems to be somewhat of a tall story, but as it is authenticated by the name and address of the sender, we have published it. We confess, however, to a sensation that our leg is a bit longer than before. —EDITOR.]

The Woodlark in Captivity.

By W. E. Teschemaker, B.A.

A Moonlight Serenade.

I ONCE had an experience which goes far towards proving the point, and may be worth relating. The bicyclist touring from Exeter to Torquay will probably proceed by way of Telegraph Hill and over a heather-clad spur of Dartmoor, called Haldon (in old maps "North Haldon"), thence coasting down in to Teignmouth, and pedalling across the long bridge over the river Teign, when he will find himself confronted by a long, steep hill, known as Shaldon Hill, obviously an abbreviation of "South Haldon." By the way, I was once taken to task by an editor for using the recognised popular name, Blackstart, obviously an abbreviation of Black Redstart; he said it was worse than a mistake—it was common. Well, we have some very precise people here also, and I notice that they do not even know that, when they repeat the name of their own district, they are using a vulgar abbreviation. I fear that it would take the precise people a long time to eliminate all the abbreviations from our language.

A Woodlark which had escaped from its cage in my bird room took up its residence on Shaldon Hill, which fact was first conveyed to me by an announcement in our local paper to the effect that a Nightingale could be heard singing every night on the hill. On the first available evening I set out to investigate the matter, and was rewarded by a wonderful experience. Apparently quite half a mile away I heard some marvellous ringing notes, which seemed familiar yet different from anything I had previously heard.

As I drew nearer I identified both the song and the singer; it was my escaped Woodlark. But what an alteration in the song! It was a calm still night, the moon shining through a light sea mist. Somewhere above me, high in the air, was the singer, and his glorious ringing notes seemed to fill the whole sky. As the singer circled slowly round and round in wide circles, the pealing notes first swelled up into a triumphant crescendo, then died away almost to a whisper in a weird and wonderful manner.

An hour passed, and still the great sound-waves rose and fell, ebbed and flowed without the least pause or sign of weariness. Anyone who understood birds could translate the words of that song; he was singing of liberty and of the silver moon, and of an English summer; in his cage perhaps he had sung of the same things, but, if so, only by recollection, and that is why he had frequently sung "so dully as if he were asleep." As I returned home I felt that I had had a unique opportunity of realising both the immense possibilities of bird-song and also the limitations and great difficulties of aviculture.

The Woodlark's Natural Diet.

The slender bill of this species, as compared with that of the Skylark, at once suggests that it is in habit an insect-hunter and, as a matter of fact, except at migration time it appears to be almost entirely an insectivorous bird. Its close association with trees should give us a clue to its natural diet, but here we run up against a difficulty, namely that the shy, retiring disposition of the Woodlark makes it most difficult to watch at close quarters.

Nevertheless in this county one may often come across it busily digging and turning over dead leaves under the oak trees, and in Norfolk, according to Yarrell, it is partial to the Scotch Fir, and every entomologist knows that the ground under an oak in winter is thickly sown with chrysalids, which in the preceding summer fed upon its leaves in caterpillar form.

Of course this is merely a conjecture unsupported by actual evidence, but, if the conjecture is well founded, it may explain an unsolved mystery in the life-history of this very interesting bird. There are just two of our smaller species which frequently rear their young amidst the whirling snow-storms; they are the Crossbill and the Woodlark. We can all guess why the Raven nests in March, and even in February; it is the lambing season, and he hopes to feed his young on the dead lambs and the after-birth. There is probably an equally simple reason for the early nesting of the Woodlark, but I believe that the reason is as yet undiscovered. These early nests are most difficult to find, being very snugly hidden in the midst of a thick tuft or under a bush; of course they have to be well sheltered, in view of the weather the young will have to face.

Delivery Restricted in Leeds.

SIR,—I have been informed by the railway companies at Leeds that live stock will not be delivered over a mile from the stations, and if not called for, a telegram costing ninepence, will be sent to consignee. Will you be kind enough to inform readers of CAGE BIRDS of same, as this order has only been in force a few days?

W. KAY.

Egg Bread versus Eggs.

SIR,—Mr. F. T. Usher, in his article in CAGE BIRDS of Feb. 12, says he uses egg-bread instead of eggs. Will he kindly say how he makes egg-bread. Also, as eggs are dear now, some other readers might kindly say how to make egg food for a lot of hens.

F. W. JAMES.

[Another reader, signing his letter "A Novice," but without giving his name or address wants to know how to make food for rearing young Canaries. EDITOR.]

Catching Mice in the Bird-room.

SIR,—Replying to J. Wadsworth, if he will get two or three penny breakback mouse-traps, bait each with lard, sprinkle some bird seed securely on it, and put them on floor near hole (having swept up the waste seed on floor), I think he will soon get rid of mice. See that the birds are all safely in their cages before setting the traps.

F. J. W. S.

SIR,—Having been troubled for some time with mice in an outside bird room, I have tried most methods suggested by your correspondents, but have found mine, which I will try to describe, most satisfactory. Place a wood box, with lid, and about 4in. deep in the bird room, with seed in the bottom as bait. Make a small hole in the side, near to the top, for the mice to enter, but not large enough for birds, then place directly under this a "Nipper" or break-back trap, so that the mice will drop directly on to it when coming through the hole for the seed. Instead of baiting the trap in the usual way, fix a piece of cardboard or tin on to the hook, and the mice will drop on this and release the spring. This may be left in the room at all times, and I am confident it will catch all comers.

W. NEALE.

Pet Amazon Parrot Wanted at the Front.

SIR,—Since being out here my wife has lost her pet Amazon Parrot. We had it for some years and she misses it very much. If any reader has one for disposal at a very reasonable price, and would communicate with me, I should be extremely obliged.

I am much interested in the bird life of this country. Linnets, Chaffinches, Blackbirds, Starlings, and Rooks are plentiful. One species of the Rook tribe I am unable to locate, it is of a slate colour on head and body, otherwise like the ordinary Rook.

Although away from home I receive my copy of CAGE BIRDS, which I have taken now for a number of years. Thanking you, and hoping that this war will soon be over, if only to settle down again among the birds.

The Scottish Red Cross Show.

A "Birds Nest" Hospital Bcd Founded.

SIR,—I should be obliged if you would kindly insert the following particulars regarding the above, for the information of all who participated in making it such a success. The total income amounted to £226 6s. 3½d., made up as follows: Entry fees £87 1s. 6d.; memberships £15 7s.; donations £5 11s. 6d.; sold tickets and gate drawings £51 10s. 6d.; prize cards £16 14s. 7d.; catalogues £15 4s. 6d.; Red Cross stall £8 17s. 5½d.; commissions, etc., £6 9s. 3d.; and the expenditure totalled £146 6s. 3½d., as follows—prize money £83 15s.; advertising £3 13s. 9d.; printing £30 15s. 11d.; hall rent £5 5s.; judges' expenses £2 16s.; staging, contracting, show outlays and secretarial expenses £20 0s. 7½d., leaving a balance of £80 to hand to the Red Cross Society. The accounts were audited by Messrs. Peter Thom and John Young. At the general meeting £30 was allocated towards general funds and £50 towards founding a bed on behalf of the Fancy in a Military Hospital. The hospital selected was Bellahouston (Glasgow) and the name of the bed "Bird's Nest," founded by Scottish Cage Bird Show promoted by Glasgow Fanciers and Friends held in Glasgow, Jan. 1st, 1916." At the meeting all workers, etc., were thanked for their services, and I should like to take this opportunity of thanking everyone who assisted in any way towards the success of the venture.

Proposed East Anglian Association of Norwich Canary Clubs.

SIR,—The question of the proposed East Anglian Association of Norwich Canary Clubs was considered at the annual meeting of the Cambridge and County C.B.A., when I was instructed to ask for further information upon the following points:—(1) The scope, aim, and objects of the proposed Association; (2) the financial liabilities of clubs joining the Association, also the prospects, if any, of financial benefit accruing to a club by joining the Association; (3) names of officials or societies promoting the Association, suggested headquarters, etc. It was presumed that all clubs joining the Association would be entitled to representation on the Executive Committee. I trust you will allow me to ask these questions through the valuable columns of CAGE BIRDS, in order to bring the matter before the eyes of those interested in the formation of the proposed Association.

More White Canaries.

Double Yellowing the Secret of Success.

SIR,—I too, have succeeded in breeding white Canaries, and I am glad to give my experiences in the hope that they may assist to increase the specimens of this undoubtedly beautiful variety.

I remember visiting the Palace show when Mr. Kiesel's first white Canary was exhibited and what a rush there was to see it. The owner said it was bred from two yellows, but some noted Canary men present stated emphatically that they knew that such a thing could be got by double-baiting and breeding all the colour out. They were mistaken I think. I, at that time, thought my Yorkshires lacked colour, and a well-known judge advised double-yellowing to improve it. I did so, with no result that was satisfactory, but I did increase the proportion of yellow youngsters in each nest. I found that the colour improved by using the Cinnamon marked bird which always excels in quality of feather, and colour and quality are twin souls.

Well, now about the whites. Last year I put up just one pair. (The war again). A yellow cock and buff hen both bred from double yellows. I only took two nests from them, and got three young ones that were white as driven snow. In the first nest of four, one white; second nest of four again, two white. The first one was so stripped of feathers by the hen that it died at a month. The other two I moulted successfully, but was stupid enough to coddle them by bringing them into the living-room. They began to drop feathers, and, as all the other normal ones and their parents were thriving in the cold room, I put the whites back, with the result that a cold snap finished off my treasures. However, if Lord Derby permits, I shall try again, as the parents are in fine trim, and I shall be surprised if they do not get me more white beauties.

GEORGE HARRIS.

Proposed Federation of Roller Societies.

SIR,—I was in hopes of being able to keep out of this discussion, as, being a Special Constable, I have not the time I should like to give to the discussion. I thank the writers of the letters who have so kindly mentioned my name, but there is one thing that I must object to, Mr. Kilshaw says the B.R.C.C. dictates to societies how to run their shows; this is wrong. Societies who want the B.R.C.C. patronage are required to agree to certain conditions, which conditions are framed for the benefit of the exhibition; if the society does not care to accept some the matter is ended so far as the B.R.C.C. is concerned. Specialist clubs of every kind have conditions, so why should any one complain about the B.R.C.C. having same when the conditions are for the benefit of the Roller fancy at large?

J. W. NORRIS.

SIR,—I suppose that until the letters on above subject appeared in CAGE BIRDS nothing was known of this proposition by quite half the Roller Club members, and as to the bad feeling that is supposed to exist in certain quarters far less has been known, little enough even now, let us be thankful to say. Correspondence has apparently been taking place between the secretaries of the various clubs, but so far we are left in the dark. The indefinite character of the whole affair seems to be due to the love of agitation which animates the few to the detriment of the many.

Some two years ago, at the annual general meeting of the B.R.C.C., which was the largest representative meeting of the Club ever held, a resolution was passed, almost unanimously, that the names of the judges should be placed against each class in the schedules. This meeting was attended by over 60 members from all parts of the country. Some time afterwards it was discovered that the seeds of discontent were being sown in certain quarters over this rule, which one would imagine would naturally appeal to any straightforward person as a just and necessary one, customary, as I believe it is, in other sections of the bird fancy.

Later on ill-feeling seems to have been generated and successfully fostered, and we are brought face to face with the phenomenon of a single club issuing a ring of its own. The said club buys its own rings and issues them to its own members, thereby securing the profit and keeping the money for its own benefit in its own comparatively narrow sphere. Thus we have the regrettable display of a club cutting itself off from what practically has been a federation for years, and setting the example to all to split. Let it be well understood by all that the B.R.C.C. distributes in prizes, etc., the whole of the profits, nay, considerably more, to the winners in the young birds point competition. The object of the club in general, and its members in particular, has been to encourage and foster the fancy, and by its annual meetings and by correspondence with the affiliated clubs to exchange views to further the interests of all.

So far no formal statement of grievance has been publicly made, so that most of us are still in the dark. No reason has been given for a desire for change, if there is such desire generally, which I very much doubt. No scheme has been formulated, no business-like, straightforward proposition has been forthcoming, and the facilities of the Press offered in your widely circulating journal have not been used, although this uneasiness has been brewing below the surface for over 12 months.

Surely every member of the fancy ought to have had the opportunity of knowing what all this suppressed turmoil was about. Where is the use of the London Club sending one or two delegates under such conditions, and thereby incurring expense difficult to bear in these war times? There is no more open-minded set of men than those on this Committee, and if any definite line of policy is discernible in the propositions of the other clubs or any suggestions are forthcoming of a practical nature and of general benefit to the fancy, even if they be of a fundamental nature, the parent club would not only welcome them, but adopt them. Let our motto be each for all, not each for himself, as some would have it, and if there has been any feeling of combativeness let us have done with it. "Let the dead past bury its dead."

HENRY GUTIERREZ.

The Matter to Stand Over.

SIR,—A meeting was held at the Old Bear's Head, Manchester, Feb. 12, the clubs represented being Leeds, Bolton, Bacup, Wigan, Walkden, and Provincial; Mr. Best, of Leeds, in the chair. The chairman read out the proposal of the Leeds Club and then the meeting was open for discussion. Every delegate was sorry that the Southern clubs had not sent delegates. As a delegate of the meeting, I am thoroughly of the opinion that an agreement would have been arrived at satisfactory to all concerned; and in due fairness to the Bolton and Provincial Clubs, as secretary of the Leeds Club I can honestly say that never since this business was brought before the Fancy have the clubs mentioned had a word to say in the matter. They left it to the delegates, which was the proper course to take. From letters I have received it would appear that an idea has got abroad that we in the North are going to try and alter the judging standard right away. Far from this being the case, it was moved at Leeds that no alteration at all should be entertained for at least the next twelve months, unless there was a demand for it throughout the Fancy. I merely mention these facts to dispel any idea that the clubs mentioned have had anything to do in this matter beyond making the mistake of calling the meeting instead of leaving it in my hands to do so. However, they candidly admitted their mistake, and were ready to conform to any scheme that was acceptable to all parties, so much so that after a discussion lasting more than two hours, in which all matters were thoroughly thrashed out, the following was proposed by Mr. Kilshaw (Bolton), seconded by Mr. Wantling (Bacup), and carried unanimously—"That we go on as usual, as it is so near the breeding season. Each club to get rings either from the B.R.C.C. or P.R.C.C., and Mr. Best to write the clubs not represented at the meeting. A meeting to be called at a later date if in favour of a Central Board. All rings and moneys from same to be pooled for this season if favourable replies are received from the clubs not represented. Failing this, the above clubs pledge themselves to meet at the next Leeds show and draw up rules to be rigidly adhered to by all the above clubs."

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

Sixth annual general meeting, Jan. 28, Co-op. Hall, St. George's Cross, Mr. A. Hendry presiding over a good attendance. Balance sheet for 1915 was discussed, and compared with former balance sheets, was considered very satisfactory, and adopted unanimously. Office bearers for 1916 elected: Hon. Pres., Mr. W. Gibb Macnab; Pres., Mr. P. Allan; vice-pres., Mr. W. G. Hamilton and Mr. G. McGowan; sec. and treas., Mr. W. Proudfoot; Committee, Messrs. A. Mitchell, J. Young, A. Espie, J. Campbell, D. Lunn, G. Robertson, and A. Carr; auditors, Messrs. Geo. G. Henderson and A. Reid. Rules were gone over and passed. Agreed to delete April table show, also to alter pairs show from the Friday at 8 to Saturday 4. Classes:—Crests, Nor. Cl. ditto Marks; Border, Cl. Marks, Greens and Cinn.; Yorks. Cl. ditto Marks; A.O.V. Can., Muling pairs, Hyb. pairs. Specials were kindly intimated from Messrs. P. Allan, G. G. Henderson, A. Gilchrist, A. Mitchell, D. Downie, G. Robertson, C. Sollars, J. Campbell, and W. Proudfoot. New members enrolled, H. Hislop, A. Proctor, J. Sanderson, Junr., J. Fisher, and J. Brown. Dates of table shows, etc.: Pairs, 12th Feb.; British bird, 10th Mar.; F.F. show, 8th July; annual members' 15th Nov. Intending members please note that we cater for all varieties of cage birds. Annual sub. is 4s., 2s. when admitted and remainder on or before the F.F. show. Any other particulars with pleasure from W. Proudfoot, Sec. and Treas., 145, Henderson Street, Glasgow.

QUEEN'S PARK (Glasgow) C.B.S.

Seventh annual general meeting, Y.M.C.A. Rooms, Eglinton Toll, Jan. 26, Mr. R. Heggie in the chair, and a large attendance of members. Treas. submitted financial statement for the past year, which had been a most successful one for the club. There is a membership of 53, 14 being new members, and a credit balance of £9 2s. Chairman, Mr. Heggie, did not seek re-election, having removed out of the district. This was a blow to the members, as Mr. Heggie was the most energetic worker the club had, having been five years' sec. and treas., and one year in the chair; he brought the club along in fine style, and placed it in the forefront of City clubs. Office bearers: Hon. Pres., Mr. R. Heggie; Chair, Mr. R. B. Cairns; Vice-chair, Messrs. A. Foreman and A. McLellan; sec. and treas., A. K. Hunter, 142, Aitkenhead Road; auditors, Matt Stewart and W. S. Ross; committee, R. Hamilton, Hardie, Halliday, Lees, Fulton, Jeffrey, Connelly, Thomson, and Black. Decided to hold a pair show of 8 classes at next meeting: Mr. A. Maxwell, Partick, judge. Champ., Nor. Yell. Ck. and Buff Hen; Buff do. and Yell. do.; Nov. A.V. cock and hen; Bord. Yorks., Crest or C.B. ditto, Mules, Hybrids. Rule as before, no double yellows or double buffs; judge to judge the best as stock birds. Application by 10 gentlemen for admittance to club had to be held over till next meeting, the hour being too late to allow ballot being taken; amongst them we were pleased to see our former chairman, Mr. Andrew Hunter. Prize money for confined events at annual show was paid out.—A. K. Hunter, Sec.

WELSH NORTHERN COUNTIES.

Annual General Meeting, Colwyn Bay, Jan. 26, Mr. H. M. Briggs (Chairman for 1915) presided. Report for 1915, and audited statement of accounts, read by Hon. Sec., Mr. G. E. Cragg, and confirmed, the general opinion being that considering circumstances arising out of the war, the result of the year's workings was as good as could be expected. Owing principally to the falling off in subscriptions, a considerable financial loss had been sustained, but fortunately the Association can show a surplus of almost £50, composed of their silver challenge cups, benching, and other assets. Mr. James Arundale was elected chairman for 1916, and Mr. Geo. Hughes vice-chairman the committee and other officers being re-elected en bloc. Decided to invite Col. Sandbach to become president for the year. After a lengthy discussion it was unanimously decided to carry on, and run the annual show as usual in November, at Llandudno in the Hippodrome, negotiations for securing the latter to be made at once. Rules were revised, the most important alteration decided was that in future the membership of the association was made open to all with open competition in all sections, instead of being confined to North Wales as heretofore. By this means it is hoped to largely increase the membership, and provided the association are favoured with adequate support, they can promise a very attractive show next November. Sec. will be glad to hear from any fancier or club sec. who wishes to guarantee classes, and will be pleased to receive any suggestions re classification for next show.—G. E. Cragg, Hon. Sec., "Rocklands," Rhos, Colwyn Bay.

The Shows.

ILKESTON.

Annual show of the Ilkeston C.B.S., Jan. 8, Rutland Hotel. Entries came up fairly well. The birds were nicely staged, and all could be easily seen. The judge had a very hard morning's work. Placing the awards in 54 classes made it well into the afternoon before he had finished. The British classes were quite a feature, and were a show in themselves. Nor. and Yorks. were a little disappointing. The absence of catalogues made things rather awkward for visitors and reporters, each name being written on the cards. Messrs. Smith and Sid-down, the secretaries, had things well in hand, being ably assisted by Messrs. Henshaw and Hickinbottom. Mr. E. Wilcox judged and gave satisfaction.

MANCHESTER AND N.C.O.S.

Annual members' show, Jan. 22. About 200 birds were staged in a spacious room in Oxford Road. All the best-Norwich were to be seen, and the section turned out in goodly numbers. Yorks also were good in both quality and numbers. British and Hybrids were not so good as we are used to seeing at Manchester, and we noticed that several well-known British fanciers were not exhibiting. Special for best bird went to Mr. Turner's unfledged yellow Nor. cock, a well-known winner, and the second special to an unfledged yellow Yorks. cock by Mr. F. E. Wilson in the amateur section, a bird of rare length and style, and one capable of winning in the open. Special best British went to a very nice Siskin belonging to Mr. W. Shaw. This show was the initial venture with the reins of Sec. Mr. J. Green, and he acquitted himself well, and we noticed that the old warhorse, Mr. Raynes, was in his place—always where the work is. Mr. T. Johnson, Southport, judged.

EAST HAM, LEYTON & POPLAR.

Combined show at the East Ham Liberal Club, Jan. 15. The show proved to be quite a success, and was taken advantage of as a splendid meeting place for the fanciers of East London, for although the hall was roomy, it proved none too large for the gathering of exhibitors and their friends. To make a combined show was a happy idea, and it proved so successful that a big open combined show is possible on a future occasion when affairs are more settled. The collection comprised Yorkshires, Norwich, Cinnamons, Borders, Hybrids, and British, and there were some very fine examples of each staged. As a collection the Norwich were the cream in the Canary section, although some good Yorkies were on view. Specials were won by Mr. Collinge's yell. cock, Messrs. Hunt Bros. yell. unfledged, and Mr. Purdy's yell. for best 2nd bird in the Novices. In Borders the special for best young bird went to a charming yellow green put down by Mr. F. Onslow. Mr. Kybert staged an exceptionally good yellow, and Mr. Stevens an equally good buff. Mr. Archer exhibited two lovely light Greenfinch Mules. British were an exceptionally fine collection; the principal winners were: Mr. Bayliss, with a good Goldf. and Greenf.; Mr. Oliver, with a Siskin, Hawfinch, Mistle Thrush, and a charming hen Chaffinch; Mr. Parker staged a good Hawfinch, Blackbird, and a hen Bullie, taking spl. for best with the Hawfinch. Special best bird in the show was secured by Mr. Newton with a capital yellow Norwich, a bird of good substance and quality. Mr. Webb acted as show manager, and Mr. F. Onslow looked after the clerical work, and the perfect order prevailing was a proof of their efficiency—no show could be better arranged or managed. Stewards and helpers were Messrs. Kybert (chairman), Burrows, Oliver, Gedde, Ferridge, Prisman, Lang, Collinge, Stewart, and Fleet. Mr. H. Norman judged.

NORTH LIVERPOOL C.B.S.

Annual show, Royal Street Hall, Dec. 27, with over 400 entries, fine entry for a Members' Show. Six silver cups, six gold-centre medals, and a host of other money and valuable articles as special prizes in addition to three money prizes were given. Mr. Holden (Hon. Sec.), Mr. Frankham (Hon. Treas.), with Messrs. Rowlands, Wilkins, Ritchie, Bratherton, Atterton, Battersby, Kew, Leadbetter, Roberts, McLoughlin, Wilson, Grice, Rothwell, Brown, etc., all helped to their utmost to make the show a pronounced success. They all did admirably. The special prizes were laid out most artistically on a beautifully decorated stand at the top end of the hall. This work was carefully done by Mesdames Holden and Frankham. Mr. John Smith opened the show and eulogised the members' efforts and care in producing such a splendid show. Mrs. Smith presented the prizes in the evening. There was a large attendance of fanciers and visitors. Judges, Messrs. Helliwell (Yorks.), Harrison (Nor. and Bord.) and Houlton (Hyb., Brit., etc.), and performed their tasks well. Yorks. came up very well and quality was in abundant evidence. Nor. were also better than usual at Liverpool. Brit. were quite nice, Goldfinches especially good for a Members' show, indeed better than many open shows earlier in the season. Competition throughout was of the keenest and closest description.

BARNSTAPLE.

One of the finest displays of local cage birds ever seen in North Devon was given in the Co-operative Rooms, on Dec. 13, in aid of the Barnstaple War Supply Depot Fund. The hall is admirably suited for such, being well lighted and free from draught. 130 birds were staged. Belgians and Scotch Fancys were disappointing, numbering only nine in four classes. Other sections were well supported. The committee had all the arrangements well in hand, and the sec. Mr. C. F. Dart, assisted by chairman, Mr. R. J. Blackmore judged Belgians and Scotch Fancies; Mr. J. D. Horrell, Brit. and Hybrids; and Mr. G. Dix, remainder. As a result of the show the fund will benefit to the extent of nearly £4. Belgians: 2 in each of 3 classes, all to Horrell, put down in faultless style. Scotch Fancys: 1, 2, 3, Dix, a fine trio, well shown. Crest (3): 1, Dart, large and well formed crest, very neat; 2, Bule, cl. body dark, good size, not quite so dense or shapely. C.B. CLUB REPORTS.

WAKEFIELD.

A table show was held at headquarters, January 29, with a good turn up of birds, especially in the British Section, which produced some excellent specimens. Mr. E. Norton, Leeds, judged, and his awards were favourably received. A special feature were the very good exhibits put down by several new members, who will no doubt benefit by picking up the little details necessary when staging for keener competition at our coming shows.—J. Isherwood.

CITY OF CORK C.B.S.

Meeting Jan. 23, 31, Dunbar-st., statement of accounts submitted. Our open show, 15 and 16 Dec. turned out a success. Mr. W. A. Cowgill, Bradford, judged, and gave entire satisfaction. Prize money was paid within four days, and local winners were paid on the second day of show. We have to our credit the sum of £10 1s. 10d. Members were more than pleased with report. Vote of thanks was passed to Messrs. Mr. Neville, for placing room at committee's disposal.—Chas. Greene, Hon. Sec. Please do not write on both sides of the paper.—(Ed.)

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

General meeting January 26, Shield's Cafe, Mr. T. C. Crawhall chair. Balance sheet was read and adopted, showing a balance in hand of £7 11s. 11d., which was considered very satisfactory. Officers elected for 1916: President, T. C. Crawhall; chair, W. Mather; vice-chair, J. H. Leach; sec. and treas., R. Havis; added to Committee, R. Tindall, W. Studholme, R. Studholme, G. Willis, W. Frost, F. Johnson; auditor, R. Tindall. Agreed to give Mr. R. Tindall a small present for his valuable services to the club during the time he has held the secretaryship. Unanimously agreed that Mr. J. Stewart, Whitehaven, was entitled to the cup won at our last show, held Dec. 4. During the discussion the disqualified bird at Bishop Auckland Mr. Crawhall vacated the chair, Mr. W. Mather taking his place. Resolved that the Chairman endeavour to get closed rings, stamped N.F.C.C., for members who wish to use them. Members who require these kindly apply to Mr. Crawhall, stating quantity they require. Agreed that points gained at the N.F. shows to stand for cup and specials. Winners of silver spoons at shows receiving our patronage:—Novice section: Newcastle, T. Leck; Hartlepool, R. Havis; N.T.C.C., W. Studholme; Blaydon, J. H. Leach; Hattwhistle, R. Topping; Gateshead, M. Nattrass; Whitehaven, Wm. Crowther. Champions: Newcastle, T. C. Crawhall; Carlisle, E. Deighton; Hartlepool, J. Stewart; Blaydon, J. Stirk; Hattwhistle, R. Tindall; N.T.C.C., G. Tweedie; Gateshead, W. Mather; Whitehaven, W. Wells. New members elected: A. Buck, Newcastle; W. Robson, R. R. Graley, Wallsend; C. Graham, W. Collins, Blaydon; J. T. Reed, Leadgate.—R. Havis, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

The Fifth Annual Dinner of the Sheffield O.S. was held at Stephenson's Restaurant, Jan. 27, when well over one hundred fanciers and friends had a most enjoyable evening. As soon as the menu was got through Mr. Dawn (chairman) set the ball rolling by proposing "The King, Queen, and Royal Family." Mr. Wm. Foxon then sang "God Save the King," in which the gathering heartily joined. Mr. W. A. Cowgill, in proposing the S.O.S., said he had very great pleasure in proposing the toast of what he considered the society of the kingdom, as far as the cage bird fancy was concerned. He did not know any society with the enthusiasm of Sheffield. They had the right men at the head, when they ran their shows, they were not afraid of speculating, and their ventures always proved really successful. One member, Dr. Craig, had made rapid strides, and in his experience of over 70 years Dr. Craig was the only man in a mucky hole like Sheffield who had achieved such success at Yorkshire Union shows.

Dr. Craig in replying soon sent the audience into laughter in his usual style. Although visitors usually said pretty things, in this case he thought Mr. Cowgill's praise of the Sheffield O.S. was fully justified. The members and officials have grit, determination, and plenty of that great asset "cheek." In spite of adverse conditions, last year was a record, not only through our own efforts, but by the assistance of our friends. Many may think that we ought to be successful without outside financial aid, but they forget that no society gives the value we do at our annual open show; our schedule last year was second to none. All this, he said, was not accomplished without the co-operation of our sec., who gives us the benefit of his long experience, and never spares himself or his family to keep everything in order and up to time. He hoped and believed he expressed the general wish that he may be with us for many years, to assist us in retaining the position we have achieved in the fancy world, and, last, but not least, to always present us with a financially sound balance sheet.

Mr. Woodall proposed "The Majesty's Forces on Land and Sea," remarking it was quite apparent that we must be top dog, or we should not be enjoying ourselves in such a hearty manner. He looked forward with hopeful anticipation to an early and successful ending. Lieut. Rice suitably replied. Mr. T. Ridal, in proposing "Visitors and Kindred Societies" was very amusing. Singing out Mr. Towers, he hoped he had paid his sub., and that he would get his Bradford pals to join too, it was 2s. 6d. still, in spite of the war. Mr. W. Foxon, on behalf of the visitors, thanked Mr. Ridal for his kind words and Dr. Craig for his invitation. In congratulating Mr. Job upon the splendid programme, he eulogised the artists engaged to the fullest appreciation of a lifelong professional musician. The toast, "The Chairman," was proposed by Mr. Towers, Keighley, who considered himself a member of the society, having been rushed into it whilst on the popular Wortley ramble. He could not express in words his opinion of the fitness of Mr. Dawn for the position he occupied. With such a leader the S.O.S. could not fail. They were to be congratulated on having a record show in abnormal times. One of their members, Dr. Craig, in winning two of the premier prizes in the Bradford district, had done something which was thought impossible. I can go back 30 years, he said, and know of no one who has tackled the Yorkshireman in the Bradford district, and come out successfully. Even an old fancier of Thackeray's days who was talking to me at the first show was it was impossible for a Sheffield man to run a wide season, at the atmospheric conditions were against it. I prophesied otherwise, and my prophecy has come true. Now these are the type of members which make a society, and you are fortunate in having several. The artists having been thanked for their services, one of the most enjoyable evenings was brought to a close by again singing the National Anthem.—J. A. T. Woodall.

Queries Answered

(FOR RULES SEE LAST WEEK'S ISSUE.)

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

ACCOMMODATION (G. L.).—Your query is very vague. You first say the aviary is 5ft. wide, and then that it is 7ft. by 7ft. If you have 5ft. by 5ft. of floor space, and wish to turn the birds in to fly loose for breeding, three cocks and six hens should be sufficient to stock it. On the other hand, if you have 7ft. by 7ft. of floor space you may turn in four cocks and twelve hens. The height is not important, but should not be less than somewhere around 4ft. The number of nesting sites should exceed the number of hens by about one half. If this is not what you wish to know, please write again, and be more definite, and I shall be pleased to be of any assistance to you.

A WHEEZY NOISE (Novice).—I am afraid a young Canary which is in such a state of "wheeziness," as your query implies, must have been badly used in the way of management, or have inherited its trouble. Such a bird should never be mated for breeding. The following treatment should make a material improvement in its condition. First of all thoroughly examine its cage and appurtenances to see if it is pestered with red mites, and if so, take the necessary steps to eradicate them, as you may have often seen in this column. Also see that it is not exposed to cold direct draughts, or rapid and extreme changes of temperature, such as may occur between day and night in a room where a fire is kept only by day. Do not hang it high up near the ceiling, nor near or over burning lights in the evenings. Having attended to these points, give in addition to its staple seed diet, half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia, and sweet spirit of nitre. At the end of the fortnight stop these extras and medicines for a week, and then resume them and give for another fortnight as before.

SAMPLE OF RAPE (B.B., Ohio, U.S.A.).—The sample of seed sent was much crushed when it reached me, so I cannot express any opinion as to its cleanliness or otherwise. A large proportion of the seed was crushed practically to a powdery substance. As far as I am able to judge the seed is a type of rape which is sometimes sold as real summer rape and at other times as cole. To be quite definite in naming it one would need to grow the seed and identify the plant and blossom. It is mild in flavour, and is very well matured, and should form a valuable item in the Roller's bill of fare if mixed with an equal bulk of the small reddish coloured summer rape. As a staple diet solely it would probably prove too relaxing. Anyway, that is my experience of this type of seed.

A ROOM AVIARY (A.S.).—(1) You would be quite on the safe side in putting one cock and four hens in the portion of room you have turned into an aviary for breeding. For this number of hens six to eight nesting sites should be provided. The hens might be turned in at once, and the cock kept caged in the room until about the end of next month, and released when you saw signs of the hens wanting to nest. The widow space should be covered with half-inch mesh netting, fixed on frame, to guard against any loss of birds if the window was accidentally broken, and also to allow of its being opened during favourable weather. I am, of course, assuming that you mean to have the birds flying loose in the room, though I cannot quite understand the purpose of the corner space you have marked on your plan as a flight line. (2) Many fanciers have used the food you name with success for rearing young, I believe, but I cannot speak from practical experience on the point. Still, with good feeding hens kept under the conditions you propose, there is no reason whatever why you should not succeed with it, either solely, as you suggest, or with a third part of its bulk of desiccated egg yolk added to it. You would find much information on this matter in last year's and the forthcoming CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. There remarks will apply equally to the Yorkshires. (3) Certainly, you could use small twiggy branches about the room, instead of adhering entirely to the hackneyed straight perches. By fixing securely such branches to the walls at intervals, and in the corners you may both add to the appearance of the room and afford many excellent nesting sites. The small penny rush basket nests are very useful for this purpose if fixed securely in the branches, not more than one in each.

SOME APPETITE (Lecture).—The bird is probably suffering from malnutrition due to inability to assimilate nourishment from the food it eats. Try what this treatment will do for it in a month or so, and then report result. Keep it in a comfortable temperature, not necessarily over-heated, nor yet on the chilly side, and see that it is not exposed to extreme changes of temperature between day and night. Keep cage and perches as clean as possible, free from red mites, and see that the floor is well strewn with clean gritty sand. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition give separately every third day for a month a piece of bread the size of a small walnut soaked in cold milk, drained, three drops of cod liver emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the intervening days give first a morsel of banana and half a teaspoonful of well-soaked summer rape, and next a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, broken groats, and either linseed or chopped sunflower seed. In the drinking water every second day for a week add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and in the next week give instead 20 drops of Chemical Food. In the third and fourth weeks repeat the dosage of the two first weeks in the same order. Then report result and repeat particulars.

TWO DISSIMILAR (Corgeshall).—(1) As you seem to know that the hen is well past her youth, I think you would be well advised to entirely discard her as a stock bird and thereby avoid disappointment, the chances of which are by no means small. If she was in quite good condition and had plenty of energy when the season comes to mate up, the best chance of success with her would be to mate her with a lusty, vigorous cock bred last season. But only the actual test would prove whether the mating would be a success, and meanwhile the season may be lost. (2) When I advise dilute sulphuric acid I refer to the standard article which is sold by all chemists. I do not advise you to attempt to dilute the pure acid yourself, as it requires some little skill and knowledge of dispensing to add the correct quantity of pure acid to give the proper proportions of acid and water at a certain temperature,

The proportions I could give you, but as the properly prepared article is sold at about a penny a fluid ounce by any chemist you will see it is not really worth your while to risk making an unsatisfactory article.

AN OVERSIGHT (F. W. C.).—(1) I am afraid your aviary does not admit of any quite satisfactory method of overcoming the difficulty you now have in view. It is just one of those points which should have prior consideration in the planning of an aviary, so that it may be provided for in the structural design. The only method I can see short of shutting all the birds in one compartment while you did anything in the other is to cut out a small space in each top corner of the wire front large enough to introduce your arm easily, and then make small wire-doors to fit in these spaces. Then, by not placing any nests quite close to the back, and using a handkerchief or something similar to shield the open space whilst you inserted your arm any time it became necessary you may be able to get at all the nests, with the minimum disturbance to the birds. Or you might keep the nests sufficiently near the front to remove anything from them with one of the long handled egg lifters which are on the market. But taken altogether I would rather let things take their own course, and trust to luck. Should a young bird die in the nest, and the hen is a good reliable sort she will throw it out herself, and if she did not you need not worry about it unless it became offensive; then you could only risk the disturbance by shutting the birds up whilst you removed it. (2) See reply to "A.S." in this issue re egg food.

A PECULIAR JOINT (B.P., Auckland).—I really cannot tell from your description and attempt at a sketch what is wrong with the bird, or which joint it is that acts as you describe. Could not you make it a little more clear by using a picture of a bird cut out of our paper and marking on it the position of the abnormality, and then say how it works. The only thing that seems to apply to your description so far is that the bird may have broken the limb near the joint, and formed what is known as a "false joint," but this surmise may be open to correction in the face of a more clear description, or if one saw the bird. As it seems to be in such good health I would not advise you to tamper with this trouble without more definite knowledge.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

EVERGREENS FOR AVIARY (Bush).—It is a most difficult matter to procure any kind of evergreen that is safe from the attacks of birds. Finches are, of course, the most destructive, the Bullfinches perhaps as bad as any, but I think Canaries head the list. One can sometimes prevent complete destruction by giving green-food in abundance. Of all the evergreens I have tried, box has been the best; it is a good grower and small in leaf; but the best plan is to have three or four in large pots or tubs, and constantly change them. If the back or sides of an aviary are roughly lined with branches of furze and heather, the growing trees are not interfered with quite so much. I do not know of a laurel growing red berries, but as the juice of the common laurel is not free from poison, I should be doubtful about the wisdom of using the one you have.

MORE COCKS THAN HENS (L. Scott).—It is not at all a wise plan to have more cocks than hens in an aviary; such is sure to cause a good deal of quarrelling, when the birds are in breeding condition. Had it been the other way, namely, more hens than cocks, it would not have mattered. As regards the birds you have in, I would advise you to take out at least one of them, but I notice you have among them a cock Canary, and, if you leave him in, the probability is that you will only breed young Canaries, so if your object is to get Mules you had better remove him. Whatever you decide, you need not trouble about caging them up for pairing purposes; if you did so they would probably choose other partners when loose again, so simply make your choice and leave them together.

GREENFINCH AILING (Cymro, Wolverhampton).—I do not think there can be very much the matter with your Greenfinch, or he would not eat well and sing. His opening his beak occasionally may be a sign of nervousness, which he will get over in time; he has been caught so recently that he cannot be expected to settle down at once. If it is not nervousness, it would be due to liver trouble. If an experienced fancier saw the bird he would know to which it was due. Anyway, you cannot do wrong in giving him the following: Dissolve as much glauber salts as will cover a threepenny-piece in two tablespoonfuls of water, and add to it three drops of syrup of rhubarb; let him have this for one day, then miss two days and repeat. Give dandelion leaves as green-food as soon as you can get them. (2) Your Brambling-Chaffinch pair look to be going on well; continue to feed them as you are now doing, adding insects to their diet as soon as you are able to get any. Our Nutsell booklet on the Chaffinch should help you.

BREEDING GOLDFINCH MULES (J. C. R., Preston).—The best Mules are bred from yellow Norwich Canary hens, and the one you select should be large, of good shape, and nice quality of feather. You can please yourself as to using a clear or marked bird; in using the latter you are most likely to breed dark birds of good colour without white feathers, one or two of which are quite sufficient to spoil an otherwise good specimen for exhibition in a class for Dark Mules. You should procure your hen at once and let them fly together for a time until they are used to each other it is then as well to part them for a time and put them together again when they are both ready—that is, when the cock is in full song with a clear break, and the hen calling, flying from perch to perch, and flapping her wings, looking very fit and healthy.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

PARROT VOMITING (A. Elliott).—The bird is in rather a bad way, and you do not tell me how you have been feeding it; you had better write again giving me this information, together with what details you can as to how its previous owner had treated it. In the meanwhile give it for one day only, in lieu of the drinking water, a mixture consisting of equal parts Dinneford's Magnesia and water; follow this by lightly colouring the drinking water with chemical food, excepting every fourth day, when in place of the chemical food put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the water. Also get a box of honey and borax from your chemist and put a little into its mouth once or twice daily; this will help to keep the mouth and throat clear, but you must only put a little in at a time or it will produce a choking sensation and alarm and exhaust the bird. You can give it from the end of a stick, or spread on a crust of bread, piece of biscuit or plain cake, or anything else similar the bird will readily take.

GREY PARROT EATING ITS FEATHERS (Gourcock).—I cannot help you till you give me some details as to how long you have had it, fed it, and generally treated it. Is it dull? You might also state generally what its demeanour is, and its capacity as a talker, and for taking an interest in what goes on around it. It is impossible to form even a guess as to cause, or to suggest a remedy without some such details as above.

AVIARY QUERIES (Forest Novice).—(1) Nine to twelve pairs would be sufficient, though perhaps best breeding results would be obtained with six pairs. (2) Zebra, Bib, Fire and Spice Finches, Long-tail Grassfinches, Bronze Mannikins, Bengalese, St. Helena, Grey, Orange-cheek, and Gold-breasted Waxbills, and Avadavats. If the aviary were empty, you could put in a pair of each of the above, as some of them are quite minute. (3) Budgerigars will sooner or later mischievously maltreat the Finches, etc. (4) This is a matter of choice; at any rate, you must address this query to our Mr. Norman. (5) If it gets some sun it will be all right, as the room is artificially heated, but every aviary should be light. The coloured plates you enquire about are twopenny each, or one shilling and sixpence per dozen, post free.

TO BREED FREELY (E. Simpson).—If you had described your aviary I could perhaps have given you a more helpful reply. A good many Foreign species are irregular in their behaviour, i.e., they will breed freely in one aviary but not in another. Diamond Doves are beautiful, and fairly free breeders in most aviaries, so are Cutthroats (Ribbon Finches), Silverbills, and Long-tail Grassfinches. Black-cheeked and Madagascar Lovebirds, Cordon Bleus, and Firefinches do well in some aviaries but not in others; having the luck to get a breeding pair means a great deal towards ultimate success. I am afraid the element of uncertainty cannot entirely be got rid of. Peach-faced Lovebirds some have done well with, and others have had no luck at all. Give me a few details of your aviary and past successes, then I shall be in a position to tell you what prospects you may have with any given species. White Java Sparrows do well with some, and they are very attractive birds. Have you tried them?

AMAZON PARROT DULL (R. W. Cockburn).—There certainly does not seem much the matter with it. Are you varying its dietary sufficiently for it to take an interest in living? Blue-fronted Amazons are certainly not usually so dull as you describe, but you really tell me nothing, so I cannot give you any definite help. The dietary of an Amazon should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, pieces of biscuit, plain cake or stale crusts, with water regularly, and cuttlebone, grit, and a chunk of wood continually in the cage. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water twice a week. Keep it where it will share the life of the house, talk to it at intervals, and aim at getting it to take an interest in what is going on around—ennui generally ends in real indisposition. Is it a new acquisition?

EGG-BOUND BUDGERIGARS (Bound).—I never found it necessary to give soaked bread to these charming birds; they ought to do well with you, but as you are getting these annoying losses I should advise another season separating the sexes—keep them out of sight of each other for the winter months, and even now, unless some are incubating, it would be well to separate them and not put them together again till about the first or second week in April. If there is any weakness among your hens

TURNING A GREENHOUSE INTO A BIRD-ROOM (W. B.).—As regards the structure itself it must be thoroughly wind and rain proof; the ventilation must be arranged so as to secure fresh air without draught. The roof must not be left glass; you must either strip out the glass and put on a solid roof of wood and felt, or else securely fasten felt over the glass. This is a necessity if you wish to have any luck with it, though you might leave one strip of glass uncovered from top to bottom of the roof, but not more. As regards fitting it up for the cages, this is a mere matter of staging, and of course convenience; position of door, etc., must regulate their placing, but the main staging should face so that it gets a good light and some sun. It is well that there should be a separate stage for each row of cages, so that each cage can be banded and removed without interference with the cages above or below it.

TREATMENT OF GOULDIAN FINCHES (Bird Lover).—As regards the general care and treatment of this beautiful Finch you had better get our Nutsell "Gouldian Finches," 22d. post free from our manager. The larger their cage the better are your prospects of breeding success. Your cage is roomy, but it would be well to screen the end in which you place the nest receptacle. You can easily make a loose screen to fit over one end, either of metal or three-ply wood. (2) Gouldians are bred most years in outdoor aviaries, and in some of them they are left out all the year round. They have been bred flying loose in an unheated room. (3) It is just a matter of taste, but most seem to prefer the Red-headed as being more showy than the Black; as regard suitability, there is no difference between them. (4) Canary and white millet seed, millet sprays, and paddy rice if they care for it, some do—seeding and flowering grass is the best green-food as long as it lasts; in the winter canary seed, and also grass, can be grown in pots on any sunny window sill, and a triple set, by being changed about, will last a long time, as they soon grow again after being eaten almost to the soil. (5) All kinds of birds are scarce now; you must watch adverts, and then seize your opportunity by wiring for them. About £3 or more. (6) Twiggy sprays will suffice; the fancy dressing would be a mistake. (7) This is a matter of luck; no reason why they should not, but there can be no certainty—you must chance your luck.
